HUGE SHENANDOAH PENETRATES HEART OF SOUTH ON TRANSCONTINENTAL TRIP TO PACIFIC COAST

DIXIE FLYER TAKES TOLL AT CROSSING

Five Persons Instantly Killed, While Woman Dies at Hospital—To Eliminate Crossing.

Dalton, Ga., October 7.—(Special.) Six persons were killed this afternoon when the engine of the "Dixie Flyer" of the N., C. & St. L. railroad crashed into an automobile in which they were riding. The machine was struck while passing over the public crossing of the Dixie highway at Crown Cotton mills, just beyond the city limits of Dalton.

The dead are:

Mr. and Mrs. Will Johnson and their 7-year-old son; Mrs. and Mrs. Ellis Quinn, and Lester Chastain. All are well-known residents of Whitfield county. Mr. Quinn is a former railroad employee.

All the occupants of the automobile met instant death in the collision except Mrs. Quinn, who was rushed to a local hospital. She died immediately after reaching there.

With such force and directness did the oncoming train strike the car, that some of its occupants were carried about 200 yards on the pilot of the engine, while the bodies of the rest were hurled several yards from the tracks. The automobile was completely demolished.

The six bodies of the victims are at a local undertaking establishment, Carter & Sons, here.

A survey of the grade crossing at which the smash occurred is being made for the purpose of building an underpass, thereby eliminating the crossing.

ENGINEER TELLS STORY OF ACCIDENT.

Homer Dawson, 65, engineer of the Dixie Flyer and who resides at 120 Lee street, in West End, was completely broken up over the accident, which resulted in the death of six persons near Dalton Tuesday. He tottered from the cab when the engine pulled in 25 minutes late and made his way to the station murmuring all the while, "it certainly was terrible."

Dawson has worked for the N., C. & St. L. railway for more than 45 years.

The Dixie Flyer was speeding along at 40 miles an hour, he declared, when suddenly he heard a crash and realized that he had struck something. Neither Dawson nor the fireman, Homer Young, saw the car, which approached from the left, he said.

When he heard the crash, Dawson said he put on all brakes, and brought the train to a stop within its length. Two of the occupants had been thrown from the automobile and instantly killed, he said. The other four were carried in the car on the pilot of the engine until the train stopped.

Three of these were dead and the other scarcely breathed. An ambulance was summoned and the living woman rushed to a hospital at Dalton, where she died.

2 YOUNG BOYS DIED WITH SAME MALADY

Viscera Rushed to Atlanta for Analysis by State Chemists—Girl Is Near Collapse.

Milledgeville, Ga., October 7.—(Special.)—Mary Claire Berry, 17, was confined in the state sanitarium here this morning on a charge of insanity, following an investigation into the mysterious death of her two brothers, Dolphus, 2, and Emory, 6. Both of the boys died in violent convulsions, and the viscera have been rushed to Atlanta for examination. The family lives at Hardwick, Ga., a little station near the sanitarium. The younger boy died September 29, and Emory Perry died yesterday, a week later.

Ordinary William H. Steinbridge, of Baldwin county, appointed a commission to conduct the examination into the sanity of the sister of the dead boys this morning, following suspicions of the family and neighbors. A verdict of insanity was returned, and she was placed in the asylum immediately. Dr. Richard Vinion, Dr. N. R. Thomas and Judge E. R. Hines were members of the board of examiners.

Poison Indicated.

Indications are that poison was given to victims, and while no formal charge has been made against the girl, it is said that officials are positive that her brothers were slain by poison administered by her. Baldwin county officials today did not question her in reference to the matter because of her condition. They are awaiting the outcome of the analysis at Atlanta also.

Mrs. A. B. Berry, widow, whose husband was killed three years ago in an automobile crash near Milledgeville, assisted officers in the investigation of the case, and is said by them to have expressed suspicions regarding the death of her sons. She was left with eight children, and runs a boarding house and a taxi cab service at Hardwick.

Emory Berry, who died yesterday, was rushed to the sanitarium for treatment. Doctors suspected the presence of poison and prepared the viscera for shipment to Atlanta. The mother was away from home when Emory was stricken.

Threatened Family.

Members of the family stated today that their sister had acted queerly for several months and that on one occasion she took a rifle and told them that she intended to kill them. Students in the teacher-training department of the Georgia State College for Women, said that the girl, while a student in their classes, had brought a pistol to school and was incorrigible. Citizens declared that she ran her automobile deliberately into a telephone pole and was seriously injured. The commission declared her insane and recommended that she be held.

Court attaches tonight were uncertain as to whether any action would be taken against her in the event that traces of poison were found by the Atlanta chemists on account of her present mental condition. She is on the verge of a collapse, hospital doctors said.

Names of the other children are Margarette, Bryan, Marshall, Calhoun and Juanita.

Funeral services for Emory Berry were held this afternoon.

The state chemist could not be reached for a report on the examination of the viscera last night.

HUGE SLUSH FUND TO NAME COOLIDGE, LA FOLLETTE CLAIM

Senator Borah Is Ready To Summon Committee

Idaho Falls, Idaho, October 7. The senatorial campaign expenditures committee is subject to call, and Senator William E. Borah is ready to summon it into session "at any time," Borah declared Tuesday night.

This statement, made by the Idaho senator after he had been advised of Senator La Follette's charges of a huge republican slush fund to "buy the election," was taken to indicate a favorable attitude toward La Follette's demand that the committee be called into session to investigate his charges.

Borah, who is here to open his campaign for reelection, had not at the time received any wire from La Follette demanding the investigation.

Scranton, Pa., October 7.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, independent presidential candidate, charged here Tuesday night before another enthusiastic audience that the republican party is collecting a slush fund totalling millions to "buy" the election for President Coolidge.

La Follette demanded an immediate investigation by the Borah committee of the republican finances, and declared that he had already wired Senator Borah to call his committee together at once to launch the inquiry.

The charge was based, La Follette said, upon a letter being circulated by the ways and means committee of the republican national committee under the signature of Joseph R. Grundy, "a gentleman who, I believe, is prominent in affairs of the Manufacturers' association as an opponent of organized labor and a foe of legislation for the protection of women and children."

Many Prominent Men on List.

Others whose names appeared on the letterhead, La Follette added, included "Edward T. Stotesbury, the partner of J. Pierpont Morgan;" Joel M. Vauclain, whose non-union Baldwin locomotive works, according to the report of the inter-state commerce commission, participated with the Pennsylvania railroad in looting the federal treasury of $3,000,000 during the period of government guarantees;" and "S. D. Warriner, who is well known by the coal miners of this district as an exponent of the 'divine right' theories of industrial management."

Specifying the progressive campaign, La Follette quoted the letter as saying:

"We are confronted by the possibilities of a violent social and industrial revolution. We have in La Follette and Wheeler a Lenin and Trotsky, with a formidable band of followers made up of the vicious, ig-

BIG FAIR PRAISED BY CIVIC LEADERS, GUESTS FOR DAY

ATTENDANCE RECORDS SHATTERED TUESDAY

Agricultural Exhibits From Many Georgia Counties Prove Interesting to Visitors.

Pronounced to be the best fair ever given in this part of the country by visitors who flocked here from all directions, the Southeastern fair Tuesday swung its record-breaking pace into the fourth big day with the attendance figures constantly mounting toward a probable new high record. Atlanta Rotarians, Kiwanians, Lions and Civitans attended the big show in a body Tuesday and joined the ever-growing chorus of praise for the splendid exposition offered this year.

First prize for the "plantation walking horse" was awarded to "Kentuck," a chestnut gelding belonging to John W. Grant, of Atlanta, in the big horse show staged Tuesday afternoon. Second prize in this event was taken by "Sandy," a chestnut gelding belonging to Frank Adair, of Atlanta, and "Queen," a chestnut mare owned by Warren Toole, of Atlanta, won third prize.

In the jumping event, "Taps," ridden by Lieutenant Traywick, took first place in the "bush jump." Second place was awarded to "Troy," ridden by Major Keely, and third prize was awarded "Hashe Marcu," ridden by Lieutenant Barker.

The inter-civic clubsters began the day with a barbecue dinner served at noon and did not end their tour until the last spark of fireworks disappeared in the sky Tuesday night. The club members streamed through the exhibit halls, poured out to the midway, flowed through the excellent attractions of the Rubin & Cherry shows, jumped the jumps, hopped the merry-go-rounds, rode the Ferris wheels, swung out in the sea planes, dangled around in the chair-o-plane, jerked around the whip and rode nearly everything else rideable at the fair.

Exciting Horse Races.

In the afternoon the visitors enjoyed three exciting harness racing contests on the race track and a pretty concert by the Red Hussar band. They also witnessed the thrilling auto polo games and early in the evening attended the performance of the Atlanta Passing Revue and fashion show, which they agreed was one of the prettiest and most attractive spectacles ever offered at the fair.

Wednesday is given over to no special group, but will be considered largely as Atlanta day, as many of the retail merchants have given leave to clerks to attend the fair on this day. The Wednesday program will include a series of harness races, auto polo games, both afternoon and night, and another presentation of the Passing Revue and fashion show. The famous Red Hussar band will play

Opportunity's Knock

Getting Into Action

The main thing that stands between most people and success is inactivity. Not that they don't show the usual sort of actions—but it's the unusual variety that counts.

Almost everybody can tell you what they'd like to do. They are not lacking in possible plans, but—. There's always a "but," and it generally stands for lack of initiative.

Plenty of men who think they're ambitious are fooling themselves. They think that good ideas can somehow take the place of good efforts. They don't understand how stubbornly every success must be fought for.

You probably know that it's a mighty good idea to read Constitution Classified ads—but do you do it?

GEORGIAN, FREED IN MURDER CASE, SLAYS HIMSELF

Rome, Ga., October 7.—Cager Landrum, Gordon county farmer, who some years ago was charged with killing his neighbor, Jack Davis, in a quarrel over a school election, today shot and killed himself at his home near Adairsville, according to reports reaching here late today.

Landrum was tried on a charge of murder in 1912 and convicted of manslaughter. On a new trial he was acquitted in Floyd superior court and later removed to Gordon county. He is said to have been in ill health and also to have brooded much over the tragedy in which he is said to have figured more than 12 years ago. He is survived by his widow and eight children, all of whom were at home when he killed himself.

1,000 DELEGATES AT STATE MEET

Few Changes Slated in Georgia Democratic Executive Committee, According to Dope.

Macon, Ga., October 7.—Nearly 1,000 delegates to the democratic state convention had assembled here tonight for the session of that body, which opens at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in the city hall auditorium.

Governor Clifford Walker will sound the keynote in his acceptance speech—"Georgia for Georgians and Georgians for Georgia."

Senator William J. Harris also will make an address in accepting his nomination.

The entire state ticket nominated in the primary of September 10 will be nominated formally, and presidential electors chosen at the presidential preferential primary will be ratified. An executive committee will be elected.

G. E. Maddox, of Rome, is slated to be temporary and permanent chairman of the convention and also chairman of the executive committee. Miss Bessie Anderson, of Atlanta, is slated to be permanent secretary and Miriam L. Gardner, of Eatonton, assistant secretary. There will be few changes in the personnel of the executive committe, it is announced tonight.

Pre-convention dope has it that Judge Newt Morris, of Marietta, will offer a resolution protesting against the small representation allowed southern states in the national democratic convention as compared with the number of delegates from northern "uncertain" states. Judge Morris was one of the delegates to the national democratic convention at New York.

Resolutions indorsing the national democratic ticket and the platform on which those candidates are running,

City Ready To Cast Off Sleep

WHISTLES TO HERALD SHENANDOAH'S ARRIVAL HERE

And Welcome Cruiser of Skies

Nosing her way swiftly southward through the night, the giant naval air cruiser Shenandoah was rapidly nearing Atlanta as the final edition of The Constitution went to press at 2 o'clock this morning.

Informed Tuesday morning of the sudden decision of naval authorities to route the great dirigible via Atlanta on its long voyage from Lakehurst, N. J., to Fort Worth, Texas, Atlantans awaited the advent of the cruiser with keen interest all night.

Despite the fact that the Shenandoah was not expected to arrive here until somewhere in the neighborhood of 5 o'clock this morning, many citizens had arranged to rise from their beds and watch the course of the ship as she followed her trans-continental air path over Atlanta regardless of the hour of her arrival.

Spotted by her flaring searchlights and the gloom of her silver bulk silhouetted against the night far overhead, the Shenandoah was reported by station after station as she swung southward by Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Charlottesville, Greensboro and other Carolina cities.

With direct and constant communicaton established between the editorial offices of The Constitution and cities and towns along the southward route of the Shenandoah, and with a special committee of Argonne post, American Legion, headed by Commander J. B. ("Skip") Conyers, prepared to relay flashes as they are received in The Constitution offices, residents of Atlanta were assured Tuesday night that the giant air craft would not come unheralded to the city, while members of the crew piloting the dirigible were assured of an ovation-welcome as they pass over the Gate City of the South."

Sirens, steam whistles, bells and every other noise-producing facility were scheduled to be turned loose in a "voice-of-the-city" welcome. Residents of the city, whether asleep or awake, were thus to be aroused, to the fact that the great air craft was passing overhead.

Commander Conyers and his special committee expected to maintain constant communication with scores of locomotive and boiler engineers, factory machine rooms and other avenues of noise-production.

INMAN RAPS AVEN IN HOT REJOINDER

"Go to Hell" Is Police Committee Chairman's Reply to Charges of Political Favoritism.

Hurling defiance at Councilman C. C. Aven on the floor of council Tuesday afternoon, Councilman Ed Inman, chairman of the police committee, replied to the former's charges of wholesale abuse of political restriction in the department with the blunt statement that "Dr. Aven can take his threats and go to hell."

Dr. Aven's charges, preferred in a letter directed to Chairman Inman, are to the effect that the recent "shake-up" of the police department, which resulted in transfer of former detective chief, A. Lamar Poole, to uniform duty in negro town, and suspension of Guy Lindsay, as well as numerous other transfers, was done to punish supporters of James L. Key and to reward friends of Mayor Sims, recently reelected to office.

"I noticed in Sunday's papers a letter purporting to have been written me by Dr. Aven," Mr. Inman said. "The contents of that letter were so discourteous that as far as I am concerned, Dr. Aven can take his threats

MAN IS BELIEVED FATALLY BURNED

John Moore Near Death in Blaze That Sweeps Fourth Street Apartment.

John Moore, 36, of 225 East Fourth street, is believed to have been fatally burned, and several other occupants of an apartment house at that street number narrowly escaped death about 1:30 o'clock Wednesday morning when a fire gutted the entire front of the four-story structure. Several other occupants were overcome with smoke and had to be carried from the building.

Mr. Moore, although badly burned, carried his wife to safety in the street and collapsed. He did not regain consciousness until some time after he had been taken to Grady hospital. Mrs. Moore was overcome with smoke and but for the thoughtfulness of her husband she would have been burned to death, witnesses say.

The damage to the building was estimated at $50,000.

At any early hour Wednesday morning, firemen had not been able to learn the origin of the blaze. Occupants stated that the entire build-

VIRGINIA, CAROLINA AND PART GEORGIA COVERED BY NIGHT

Voyage From Lakehurst, New Jersey, Made Calmly and Without Mishap on Maiden Trip.

SPEED OF 40 MILES PER HOUR IS MADE

Thirty-Seven Men, Officers and Correspondents Aboard Huge Dirigible Bound to Coast.

The giant navy dirigible Shenandoah penetrated to the heart of Dixie Tuesday night and early Wednesday morning on her maiden voyage to the Pacific Coast. All night long she roared her way over Virginia, the Carolinas, and was expected to be well down in Georgia, beginning the western leg of her long trip, by daylight.

Crossing the Potomac for the second time of her career, the Shenandoah began passing over Virginia shortly after 2 o'clock. For the next six hours she floated down the James and Shenandoah river valleys and passed for the first time over North Carolina just after 8 o'clock.

As midnight approached, towns along the southern border of the Old North State began reporting the proximity of the vessel, indicating that all was well with her and that she was keeping her schedule.

Flies 1,500 Feet High.

For the most of the trip the big ship was keeping about 1,500 feet above the ground and was traveling at a rate of between 30 and 40 miles an hour.

Points reported having sighted her Tuesday night since her entry into the south follow:

IDEAL SAILING WEATHER ABOARD THE SHENANDOAH.

Aboard Shenandoah (9 p. m.), October 7.—(By The Associated Press). Ideal air sailing weather prevailed through the first 12 hours of the 9,000 mile voyage of the big navy dirigible from coast to coast.

Winds, which are not felt on the surface, were met in the upper level of the sky between 1,000 and 3,000 feet.

At 8 p. m. the ship was driving straight into a 12-mile-an-hour current; all five motors were going; the immense gas-filled tube, with its power and passenger gondolas was riding as smoothly as in a bed of feathers going at 40 miles an hour. The ship at that time had crossed the James river at Lynchburg. Lights burned in the houses beneath and in the dis-

FIREMEN, POLICE PAY HIKE HALTED

Action on proposed increases in salaries of members of the city fire and police departments for 1925 was deferred Tuesday when general council voted to refer resolutions providing increases in both departments to the finance committee.

An increase of $10 pe. month was asked for each member of the fire department, with a $12.50 per month salary hike for lieutenants and captains. The resolution pertaining to the police department asked that salaries of all members be raised $10 per month, with increases of $12.50 for all officers who received a raise of $7.50 per month in 1924, and $15 for officers who received pay increases of $5 this year.

An attempt was made by Councilman T. L. Slappey, of the second ward, to have the resolutions adopted, but on a point of order raised by Councilman W. B. Hartsfield, it was brought out that the increases already have been referred to the finance committee.

DECATUR COUNTY LOSES DECISION IN UNIQUE CASE

When a governing body makes a contract with an individual in due and proper form and later tries to escape payment of obligations incurred under that contract, it can not sustain a plea that the nature of the contract was itself illegal, according to a decision handed down by the Georgia court of appeals on Tuesday morning.

The case was that of the board of commissioners of roads and revenue of Decatur county versus V. Roberts. It appeared from the testimony that the board had entered into a contract with Roberts under which he was to receive 25 per cent commission on all tax collections on property which he discovered had not been returned for taxation.

It was shown that Roberts had been solely responsible for various collections under this classification, but the board had refused to pay him his commission, although the county had received the money from his efforts. Roberts sued and the board entered a demurrer, pleading that the contract, though properly entered on the minutes of the board, was illegal. The lower court overruled the demurrer and the decision of the appellate court on Tuesday morning sustained this action.

ANNUAL INSPECTION AT FORT M'PHERSON

The annual tactical inspection of Fort McPherson will begin today at 8 o'clock, according to reports received from the adjutant's office Tuesday afternoon. The report by the inspecting officer made at last year's inspection was considered one of the best in many years, but the inspection this year from all indications will measure up to the high standard of last year, it is stated. Brigadier General William H. Johnson, C. A. C., will be the inspecting officer.

NEW PARTY ENTERS NATIONAL RACES FOR GEORGIA VOTE

A fifth party, the American party, entered the presidential race in Georgia Tuesday when the names of candidates for president and vice-president, and electors from the state at large and five of the 12 congressional districts, were certified to the state department for places on the official ballot.

Candidates of this party for the highest offices in the country are: G. O. Nations, of Missouri, for president and L. L. Pickett, of Kentucky, for vice president. The candidates for elector from the state-at-large are: Thomas M. Poole and Starr C. Williams, both of Atlanta.

The candidates for district electors are: W. B. Altman, of Stilson, in the first district; Lorenzo H. Dixon, of Columbus, in the fourth district; Carl F. Hutcheson, of Atlanta, in the fifth district; W. O. Coleman, of Fife, in the sixth district, and Robert L. Benson, of Marietta, in the seventh district.

The republicans have substituted Charles Taunton, of Cuthbert, as a candidate for elector in the third district for J. H. Mayes, and Claude F. Smith, of Carrollton, as a candidate in the fourth district for H. D. Lovvorn.

CAROLINANS CELEBRATE KING'S MOUNTAIN FIGHT

King's Mountain, N. C., October 7.—Six thousand people from a dozen counties in the Piedmont section of the Carolinas gathered at the Revolutionary battleground of King's Mountain today to celebrate the anniversary of the victory of the colonial forces over the forces of General Cornwallis.

The chief address of the day was delivered by Governor Morrison, of North Carolina, who extolled the bravery and gallantry of the forefathers who, he said, saved American liberty at King's Mountain, and declared that the same spirit characterized North Carolinians today, adding that "it is just as necessary to preserve the principles of law and liberty now as it was then."

"Liberty does not mean license, and bolshevists and anarchists have no place in the American government," he declared.

Congressman A. L. Bulwinkle, the second speaker, told of efforts made in congress to have King's Mountain battleground made a national park. A parade of school children and civic floats was a feature of the celebration.

PIONEER GEORGIAN DIES IN COLLEGE PARK

Funeral services for John T. McCullum, 64, well-known resident of Fayetteville, Ga., who died Tuesday morning after a short illness at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Hugh Stell, at College Park, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from First Methodist church in Fayetteville. Interment will follow in the Fayetteville cemetery.

Mr. McCollum was born and reared in Rockdale county and moved with his family to Fayetteville 40 years ago. He conducted a mercantile business in that city for more than 35 years.

He was prominently identified in civic affairs in Fayetteville and served as councilman for two terms. He was a devout member of the Methodist church, acting as a steward for a number of years.

Besides his widow, he is survived by a son, J. T. McCollum, Jr.; five daughters, Mrs. H. M. Stell, Mrs. E. B. Jones and Misses Irene, Grace and Virginia McCollum; a brother, Joseph McCollum, and three sisters, Mrs. S. A. Burke, Mrs. N. C. Hill and Mrs. Ida Snelson.

WORLD WAR GENERALS FAVOR DISARMAMENT

Berlin, October 7.—Only complete general disarmament can save the world, in the opinion of General Verraux, of France, commander of the sixth army corps during the world war, and General von Schoenaich, of Germany, commander of the republican guards, who now are opposing the nationalist military organizations. These two generals advised the world peace congress this afternoon on international disarmament.

General Verraux declared that "even little armies are quite as dangerous as big ones."

General von Schoenaich said that "most generals of the old regime know their theories are wrong, but they have not the courage to confess it."

General von Schoenaich promised to support the movements looking toward the refusal of military service.

EDITOR AND DEPUTY ARE WOUNDED IN DUEL

Buenos Aires, October 7.—(By the Associated Press.)—Thomas le Breton and Deputy Molinari were both slightly wounded after a brief encounter in an affair of honor at midnight last night. The duel was fought with sabers.

Deputy Molinari was challenged by Dr. le Breton on account of the publication of a newspaper article which the latter, in his position as minister of agriculture, considered offensive. Dr. le Breton tendered his resignation as minister to the president in order to fight the duel.

Molinari also has been challenged by three members of the chamber of deputies, who took umbrage at similar articles which they considered offensive.

TRADE FEDERATION WILL MEET TONIGHT

The Atlanta Federation of trades will hold its regular semi-monthly meeting Wednesday evening in the Labor temple, 112 Trinity avenue, when business of an important nature is expected to come before the body, members stated Tuesday.

Among the matters of interest expected will be a report from a special committee on the petition of the Georgia Railway and Power company, in which the public service corporation appeals for relief from alleged unfair and unregulated competition of jitney buses. Interest is also expected in the question of giving the endorsement of the federation to the La Follette campaign. This question has been before the labor body for several meetings, causing many spirited contests.

Notice was given at the last meeting in September that a measure authorizing a special committee to cooperate with the American Federation of Labor's non-partisan campaign, which has given its endorsement to the Wisconsin senator for president, would be called up for consideration at the meeting of Wednesday night. A sharp contest is looked for over this question.

COOLIDGE REQUESTS MORE DATA ON SUGAR

Washington, October 7.—Additional information from the tariff commission on the cost of sugar production in this country and in Cuba was requested today by President Coolidge in connection with his study of the commission's report favoring a reduction in the present sugar duty.

The president has told those interested that he proposes to protect the American sugar beet industry from the possibility of any combination which might develop in Cuba or elsewhere with a view to controlling sugar prices. A report also has been requested from the department of agriculture on sugar beet farming in this country.

Referring today to the proposed commission on agriculture, Mr. Coolidge told visitors he wished to confer with two or three other farm leaders before selecting the personnel of the body. He feels there is no demand for haste in naming the commission for he believes agriculture has regained its feet.

So far as the political campaign is concerned, the president feels the big need is for organization to get out the vote. Unless a large vote is polled, in the opinion of Mr. Coolidge, the sentiment of the country will not be properly registered.

Reports reaching the white house today indicated a shortage in funds of the republican national committee. Francis B. Loomis, of San Francisco, told the president that the republican party was gaining strength in California.

W. J. SCOTT NAMED TO HEAD TEACHERS AT ANNUAL MEET

W. J. Scott, head of the English department at Tech High school, was elected president of the Atlant Public School Teachers' association at the annual election of officers held Tuesday afternoon. Miss Mary C. Barker, principal of Gordon Street school, was elected first vice president.

Other officers elected were: Miss Mattie Barnes, of the Joe Brown Junior High school, second vice president; Miss Kate Saver, principal of the Georgia Avenue school, third vice president; M. E. Coleman, recording secretary, and James Barron, of Tech High school, treasurer.

Policies and plans for the ensuing year were discussed following election of officers. The meeting was held in the auditorium of the Commercial High school.

ILLINOIS RAILROAD MUST PAY BACK TAXES

Ottawa, Ill., October 7.—In a decision in circuit court today Judge S. C. Stough decided that the Illinois Central railroad should pay hundreds of thousands of dollars in state taxes in controversy for sixteen years. He held that in accounting many millions of dollars were credited to lines of the company south of the Ohio river and east and west of the Mississippi river, instead of to the charter lines of the company, which, under state law, were to pay 7 per cent taxes on earnings to Illinois in perpetuity for early grants of right of way.

The revenue and accounting of the railroad company for 1905 and 1906 was the direct issue, the years since being subject to the finding applicable to those years.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY BUYS NEW EQUIPMENT

New locomotives, freight and passenger cars, costing approximately $9,000,000, have just been purchased by the Southern Railway company for delivery during November and December of this year and the early months of 1925, according to announcement Tusday from the office of Vice President R. B. Pegram.

Included in the purchase are 3,000 box cars, 250 flat cars, 250 stock cars, 25 passenger coaches, 10 baggage-express cars, 6 dining cars, 25 heavy Mikado-type freight locomotives, 15 heavy Pacific-type passenger locomotives and 10 eight-wheeled switching engines.

All equipment will be of the latest type, the passenger and flat cars of all-steel construction, the box and stock cars with steel underframes, and the locomotives being similar in design to locomotives recently built for the Southern, it is said.

RUM SCHOONER SINKS AS U. S. CUTTER NEARS

New York, October 7.—The American schooner Anne Antoinette burst into flames and sank 15 miles off the New Jersey coast early today as a revenue cutter was approaching the vessel to seize it as a rum runner, according to information which Assistant Federal Attorney John Holley Clark received from customs officials this morning.

The Anne Antoinette, Mr. Clark was informed, had left New York harbor and had established contact with a Norwegian vessel more than 12 miles off the coast. Federal prohibition authorities, informed of the schooner's activities sent a cutter to seize her but as the government boat approached the ship there was apparently an explosion aboard and the Anne Antoinette sank immediately.

The crew of the Anne Antoinette, later advices said, was transferred to the Norwegian vessel, which was identified as the schooner Ransholm.

Another Youthful Prodigy

:: 11-YEAR-OLD ATLANTA MENTAL MARVEL FOUND ::

Hurls Cartel at Gottesman

BY LOY WARWICK, JR.

If the discovery of boy and girl wonders keeps on at this rate some drastic changes will have to be made. Dad will soon be playing hookey from some grammar school, and 10-year-old "Junior" will be holding down the old man's desk up town.

Here a few days back, Arthur Gottesman, 10-year-old boy, was discovered to have mental powers of a "genius." Mentally, he is 19 years' old. Through special dispensation, he has been admitted to Oglethorpe university, and many eyes are turned speculatively on him.

Now here comes diminutive Izador Kuniansky, another boy-wonder, and discovers himself. Izador is one year older than Arthur. Monday he called on Professor Wesley Peacock and astonished the head of the Peacock School for Boys by calmly announcing that he had "just as much sense as Arthur."

Calls for Showdown.

It called for a showdown. Professor Peacock, discoverer of Arthur, took Izador's rating. The Terman-Binet intelligence test, which has been used extensively and advantageously by Professor Peacock, was put to the confident Izador. Izador did his stuff. He proved that he was identically as capable as Arthur, showing an intelligence quotient of a 19-year-old boy.

Izador's vocabulary contained about 2,000 words more than Arthur's. But, according to Professor Peacock, this excess is due to the difference in age. There were some tests which were not as easy for Izador as they were for Arthur, and also, there were some tests which were easier for Izador than they were for Arthur. But Izador proved his contention—he had as much sense as Arthur Gottesman, and if nobody else would find it out for him he was going to do it himself.

Izador's score was "167." That means that he is one out of 1,000 Georgia high school students who have that much "sense." The test reveals only the subjects of "average intelligence" and does not concern "book learning."

Try It Yourself.

Try this test over on your mental capacity and see if you can do it in two minutes, as our friend Izador did:

Take a four-pint cup and a nine-pint cup to the river or any convenient body of water and bring back exactly seven pints of water. No guessing. Start by filling the four-pint cup.

Izador was born in Atlanta, though both his parents were born in Poland. They live at 291 Crumley street. He is a cousin of Abraham Shamos, recently a reporter for The Constitution, now a student at Columbia university. Shamos passed from Boys' High school into Emory university at the age of 15. He led his class and graduated at the age of 17 with highest honors.

What is to become of this newfound "genius?" We don't know, but Izador told Professor Peacock that he wasn't going to stay in the "eighth grade"—even if he did think a lot of his teachers.

3 PAYROLLS SEIZED BY DETROIT BANDITS

Detroit, Mich., October 7.—Armed bandits in a series of hold-ups today obtained three payroll satchels containing approximately $25,000. Two bandits held up the secretary and office manager of the Belle Isle creamery as they were about to leave for a bank and escaped with $17,000.

Shortly afterward five men entered the office of a restaurant syndicate and made off with $3,800. A payroll belonging to the J. L. Hudson company, amounting to $5,500 was taken from a paymaster shortly before noon.

SENOIA NEGRO BOYS FACE FEDERAL CHARGE

Two negro boys, Sim Caldwell and Sylvester Washington, were arrested by postoffice inspectors in Senoia, Ga., Tuesday as a result of an investigation into the breaking of a lock-box at the Senoia postoffice, according to reports made to R. H. Tomlinson, acting inspector in charge of the Atlanta office.

Investigation of the lock-box breaking was started after Postmaster Charles H. Travis made a report of the affair. The two negro boys will be given a preliminary hearing Wednesday in Newnan before United States Commissioner James Brown.

SENTENCE BIGHAM TO ELECTROCUTION

Conway, S C, October 7.—Edmund D. Bigham, son of a former state senator and alleged slayer of five members of his own family, was sentenced to be electrocuted October 31 by Judge Hayne F. Rice in circuit court here late today, following his conviction on charge of murdering his brother, L. Smiley Bigham, in January, 1921. The verdict was returned after two and one-half hours deliberation by jurors.

The case, which has been in progress here for the past 12 days, was given to the jury shortly after 10 o'clock this morning. This was Bigham's second trial, he having been found guilty of the same charge and sentenced to death in 1921. He obtained a new trial after a long legal fight.

The defendant is also charged, in indictments, with the murder of his mother, Mrs. F. M. Bigham; his sister, Mrs. Margie Black, and Leo and John McCracken, adopted children of Mrs. Black.

ing was filled with smoke within a few minutes after the blaze was discovered, and that the entire front of the structure burst into flames almost immediately after smoke was noticed.

Mr. Moore, who is connected with the state board of entomology, was badly burned on the upper part of his body, the flesh on his arms being seared so badly that it dropped off in places. Physicians at Grady hospital stated that although the full extent of his injuries had not been learned, his condition was very grave.

With the exception of slight injuries received in the rush of occupants to leave the building, no one else was hurt sufficiently to require medical attention.

The fire was checked after it had burned out about eight apartments in the building.

CATTLE IN RADIUS OF TWENTY MILES TO BE KILLED

Houston, Texas, October 7.—Orders for the slaughter of all cattle within a radius of approximately 20 miles of the ranches, where the first outbreak of foot and mouth disease in Harris county was discovered, were issued today by Dr. Marion Imes, federal inspector in charge, and J. F. Boog-Scott, chairman of the Texas live stock and sanitary commission. It is believed that by the time this work is completed more than 10,000 cattle will have been killed.

LA FOLLETTE ELECTORS TO LEARN FATE TODAY

New Orleans, La., October 7.—After hearing argument today on the application of La Follette-Wheeler leaders in Louisiana for an injunction to restrain Secretary of State James J. Bailey from preparing the general election ballots without the names of the independent electors, Judge Rufus E. Foster in federal district court announced he would render an opinion tomorrow.

The case came up today on the citation of the secretary of state issued last week by Federal Judge Dawkins to show cause why the writ should not be granted. Counsel for Mr. Bailey introduced exceptions, arguing that the court was without jurisdiction, since no property or civil rights were involved, that the matter was political and that the La Follette faction had ample remedy at law.

In his argument, C. F. Heimecke, counsel for the La Follette leaders, of which J. J. Finneran is state chairman, contended that the independent party in this state had on its list the names of 976 registered voters, all of whom had been certified to, and the names of 450 adherents whose names had not been certified to by the registrar of voters. The number of voting adherents necessary for maintenance of political party in the state is 1,000.

In answer to the contention that damages had been sustained by the refusal of the secretary of state to include the independent electors on the ballots, counsel for Mr. Bailey argued that no civil rights had been jeopardized nor was there any question of damages.

"It must be shown," Judge Foster observed, "that any damages have been suffered and in an amount exceeding $8,000."

"There'll be more than that," Mr. Heimecke declared.

MACON WIDOW WINS INDUSTRIAL AWARD

The Industrial commission of Georgia has the authority to hear evidence on both sides of a point at issue and decide as it thinks warranted by the evidence submitted, according to a decision handed down Tuesday morning by the state court of appeals.

The case grew out of the death of John Q. Adams, of Macon, who was employed by the American Bakeries company, of that city. Adams was killed when the truck in which he was taking a load of bread to Forsyth overturned in Forsyth county. The legal point raised by liability underwriters, the American Mutual Liability company, when Adams' widow and two minor children sought compensation, was that Adams 'was driving faster than the speed limit of 30 miles per hour prescribed by law. One witness, Adams' son, who was with his father on the truck at the time of the accident, testified that they were traveling "25 or 30 miles and hour." Another, a fireman on a locomotive, who saw the crash, said they were going 45 or 50 miles an hour.

Commissioner Kilbarn, who heard the claim of the widow and children, awarded them $12.75 per week for three hundred weeks. The insurance company appealed to the full commission which sustained the previous finding. Carrying the case to the superior court of Monroe county, the company again lost and when the court of appeals sustained the judgment of the lower court on Tuesday, again was defeated in the effort to avoid payment of the claim.

BAPTIST WOMEN OPEN FIFTEENTH ANNUAL SESSION

Members of the Baptist Women's Missionary union will meet this morning at 9:30 o'clock at the West End Baptist church for their 15th annual convention. This will be the first meeting of a two-day session.

The morning session will be presided over by Mrs. H. A. Etheridge, superintendent, who also will deliver an address reviewing the work of the organization and discussing the future.

Other addresses and reports are scheduled for this meeting.

The afternoon meeting will be presided over by Mrs. C. F. J. Tate, girls' auxiliary superintendent, and will be featured by addresses by several young people.

JACKSONVILLE HONORS SAMUEL W. NICHOLS, 80

Jacksonville, Fla., October 7.—Samuel W. Nichols, 80-year-old philanthropist and former editor of The Jacksonville Journal, whose public and private benefactions through many years have ranged from a city park to Christmas gifts to Jacksonville children, today saw the entire city join in a public celebration in his honor.

Banks and business houses closed in the afternoon, while five bands led a procession of school children, organizations and scores of persons. Mr. Nichols was driven through the streets to the high school, where fellow citizens extolled his acts.

MORE TEXAS CATTLE ORDERED DESTROYED

Houston, Texas, October 7.—An additional 1,500 cattle were ordered destroyed yesterday in Texas' fight against the foot and mouth disease. It was feared they had been in contact with cattle previously killed as infected or contact cases. The total ordered destroyed was raised to 4,500.

The situation had been brought so well in hand, however, announced J. E. Boog-Scott, chairman of the Texas livestock and sanitary commission, that he had petitioned for a meeting at St. Louis, Mo., of representatives of all states quarantined against Texas with a view towards having embargoes modified.

SWIMMING POOL ADDITIONS MOVE GETS UNDER WAY

First steps toward expansion of the swimming pool at Piedmont park and erection of additional bath houses and accessories were taken Tuesday when an ordinance was introduced in council by Councilman John A. White, of the fourth ward, asking that C. E. Kaufman, city engineer, be instructed to make a survey of the park situation in Atlanta and, under supervision of the park committee of council, to make appropriate plans, specifications and costs for the work. The measure was referred to the ordinance committee.

The project was opposed by Councilman J. Allen Couch, of the fifth ward, who argued that there is no money to spend on swimming pools, and urged that the next step taken by the city be removal of the city stockade from its present site near Girls' High school.

Mr. White and Councilman J. J. Greer explained that no appropriation is asked in connection with the proposed park improvement, and stated that the improvements will pay for themselves within a year's time. Mr. White quoted figures showing that during the 1924 season, paid admissions at Grant park, which has 1,000 lockers, were only 54,799, while 71,576 persons paid admissions at Piedmont park which has only 487 lockers.

HONDURAN PRESIDENT ROUTS REBEL FORCES

Washingtn, October 7.—Revolutionary forces in Honduras under General Ferrera were completely routed Sunday by the troops commanded by Provisional President Tosta with heavy losses on both sides, it was said in a dispatch received today at the state department dated October 6.

General Ferrera, who had been withdrawing before the advance of the government forces, the message said, "turned in his tracks and made a surprise attack in the vicinity of Comayagua," the attacking force being completely defeated and driven from the field.

High's Anniversary Is at Its Best in These

New Fashions for Winter

THERE are no half-way measures about High's 42nd Anniversary Sale. It was not satisfied with merely passable winter garments for the Sale. No—it must have the season's very smartest —New York's BEST—even though the prices were going to be Sale prices—here are four examples:

Wool Dresses in the Sale

Twillocheen Hairline Twill Sports Flannel $15.00

Smart simplicity, as every woman knows, is the most expensive quality one can choose in one's apparel. And yet, when a designer is clever, smart simplicity may be achieved at inexpensive prices. And that is just what has happened in the case of these frocks. Simple —but many a much higher-priced frock might envy them their smartness! They're built on straight, slender, youthful lines—very often without a belt or sash, and sometimes with a sash that one can leave on or take off. Of twillocheen, plaid flannel, striped and barred flannel and hairline striped Poiret twill.

Navy Blue Black and Brown $21.00

The sort of silk dresses you'd want if you'd planned to pay around $30 for your silk frock. They have style—good style. There are models in this group of dresses that would cause one to turn one's head on the street for another admiring glance. They're of beautiful satin crepe, heavy bengalines, and a few of dull crepe and flat crepe. There are black satins with bright highlights and gay red trimmings, browns with trimming of tan or gold, colored beads on dark backgrounds, rows and rows of prim buttons, long sleeves with tight cuffs, high necks, etc.

Fur-Trimmed Winter Coats

Muskrat Moufflon Sitka Fur $24.75

Coats of lustrous, silky finished pile coatings, coats of soft coatings with the soft new suede finish, coats of shaggy downy-wool, and coats of Bolivia, Normandy and self striped and plaided sports coatings. Most of them are trimmed with fur—fur collars and fur cuffs and sometimes trimming bands of fur. And they're stitched with silk and trimmed with buttons in a manner that accentuates their slender straight lines. The furs that trim them are natural muskrat, moufflon, sealine and sitka. A few have self collars and cuffs, trimmed with braid.

Fur-Trimmed Winter Coats

Gray Squirrel Sable Squirrel Hudson Seal $49.75

Fur-trimmed coats—and they're truly beauties. For they wear the same soft, luxurious furs that one finds on the most expensive coats — soft gray squirrel, sable dyed squirrel, expensive-looking Jap mink, jetty black Hudson seal, platinum wolf and soft black wolf. Sometimes the fur cuffs of them reach to the elbow, sometimes they have fur bands across the backs or down the front. And the materials! They're soft and beautifully fine. Velva Suede, Ormondale, Mokine, Arabella, Fruvennette and Frangessta. Their linings of heavy silk crepe, too, bear out their quality.

ECONOMY IN CITY AFFAIRS BLOCKED

Because the "omnibus" charter amendment bill, as passed by the legislature at its last session, did not contain an amendment providing for merging of certain departments of the city government, a resolution introduced in council Tuesday, and asking appointment by the mayor of three councilmen and two aldermen as a special committee to make a survey of all departments with the view of consolidating several of them, was declared illegal, and had to be withdrawn.

City Attorney James L. Mayson explained that although the original draft of the charter bill contained the amendment in question, that section was stricken out before the measure finally passed.

The resolution introduced Tuesday urged consolidation of several city departments for reasons of economy and efficiency.

MAY BAR POLICE FROM COLLECTION OF ANY REWARDS

Members of the police department will be ineligible to receive rewards for apprehension of criminals or recovery of stolen automobiles if an ordinance introduced in council Tuesday by Ed H. Inman, councilman from the Eighth ward, is passed. The measure was referred to the ordinance committee and if that body's action is favorable it will be brought before general council again.

It was explained that considerable dissension has been created in police ranks because officers assigned to automobile cases have opportunities to make additional money which are not presented to officers on other duty. It is proposed to turn all such rewards over to the Police Relief association.

"Good Samaritan" Enmeshed in Law In Unique Tangle

Belief in the proverbial idea that a "Good Samaritan" will be rewarded lost adherents Tuesday when Kelly Holland, juvenile motorist, was arrested at police barracks while awaiting trial for a violation of the state motor vehicle law and charged with larceny of a license tag.

The charges are the outgrowth of an automobile wreck, in which a car driven by Holland collided with one operated by F. C. Roper, of an Auburn avenue address, late Sunday night.

Young Holland, of 175 Spring street, and a companion, Albert Hooks, 21, of 23 Hayden street, Sunday night found the crushed body of J. O. Perry, 69, of 349 Luckie street, who had been run down by a speeding automobile.

The two young men stopped the car in which they were riding and lifted the aged man to a seat in their car and hurried to Grady hospital. At Piedmont and Auburn avenues it crashed into the car of F. C. Roper, throwing Hooks to the ground, breaking his legs and inflicting serious internal injuries. Mr. Perry was thrown again to the pavement, being further injured.

The driver, Kelly Holland, was charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law and the case was set for trial on Tuesday. In the meantime, Roper, whose car was demolished when struck by the "ambulance," engaged a lawyer and started prosecution. Investigation revealed that the license tag of Holland's car had been stolen, investigators said, from a service car of the W. L. Fain Grain company, which had been parked several months ago in front of Thompson Brothers' garage on Courtland street. Holland was forthwith arrested, charged with the theft. He was released on $100 bond and will be tried this morning in recorder's court.

NEW TRAFFIC RULES PASSED BY COUNCIL

Several important traffic regulations were adopted by council at Tuesday afternoon's session, to become effective immediately. West Hunter between Forsyth street and Madison avenue, was made a non-parking street at all times, while Poplar street, from Spring to Broad streets, was designated as a one-way traffic street, and all west-bound traffic barred.

An attempt to prevent complete turns on Pryor street between Peachtree and Mitchell streets was defeated. An ordinance introduced by Alderman W. B. Hartsfield to make the area under the Forsyth street bridge a non-parking zone was referred to the traffic committee.

COUNCIL OKAYS FINAL PAYMENT ON VIADUCT JOB

City council Tuesday afternoon voted to approve an appropriation of the bond commission of $24,000 as a final payment on the Spring street viaduct contract. The appropriation already had been approved by the bond commission and city attorney.

It was explained that because $25,000 worth of bonds in the $750,000 bond issue, floated for construction of the viaduct, had expired before they could be sold, the total cost is slightly less than the amount of the original bond issue.

The Nichols Construction company, which had the general contract for the work, filed additional claims totaling approximately $31,000, but it was pointed out that the claims could be satisfied by payment of $24,000 at this time.

In addition to the viaduct itself, the Hunter street approach, widening and extension of Fairlee street across the railroad tracks, Bartow street improvements and construction of an eight-story annex to the Beck and Gregg building were paid for out of the bond fund.

DENTAL SPECIALISTS DISCUSS DISEASES

Addresses on new discoveries in the treatment of pyorrhea and other gum and teeth diseases, which are to be demonstrated later in clinics, featured the first day of the American Academy of Periodontology convention being held at the Biltmore hotel.

Members met at 10 o'clock in the morning and were addresses by Dr. Olin Kirkland, of Montgomery, Ala., president of the organization. At 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon another session was addressed by Dr. Harold K. Box, of Toronto; and Dr. J. O. McCall, of Buffalo, N. Y.

A lecture was delivered to the members of the organization at 8 o'clock Tuesday night by Dr. Grace Rogers Spalding, of Detroit; Dr. E. J. Weaver, of Milwaukee; Dr. Andrew McDonagh, of Toronto, and Dr. Harold J. Leonard, of Minneapolis, led informal discussions.

COMFORT STATION IN WRONG PLACE, SAYS COMMITTEE

Appropriation of funds by next year's finance committee with which to remodel the public comfort station, now located in front of city hall, to enable use of the building for other purposes, and location of a comfort station in the basement of city hall, were recommended Tuesday in a report to council of a special committee.

The report states that the logical location for the comfort station is in the basement of city hall, and adds that the present building, when remodeled, could be utilized by other departments of the city.

TILE AND MANTEL DELEGATES GUESTS OF B. MIFFLIN HOOD

Forty representatives of prominent Tile and Manufacturing Contractor agencies of the southeastern division, will inspect the Hood Clay and Products company in Daisy, Tenn., today, it was announced Tuesday by officials of the Tile and Mantel Contractors association, in session in Atlanta.

B. Miffling Hood, president of the Hood Clay and Products company, of this city, furnished cars in which guests were transported to Daisy, Tuesday afternoon. While in Tennessee the delegates will visit Signal mountain and other points of interest around Chattanooga, Daisy being only 25 miles from that city.

The concluding program of the convention that has been held in this city for the past three days was featured by addresses by prominent officers of the association, reelection of officers for the ensuing year and consideartion of invitations from Birmingham and Savannah to entertain the 1925 convention.

MACCABEE PATROL BEING ORGANIZED

A patrol which will go to Washington next July to compete in a national contest for the best-drilled unit, is in the process of organization following adoption Monday night of a motion for its formation by the Caravan club of the Maccabees.

A committee of three has been appointed by President Charles Green, and will begin chosing the 100 men who will form the patrol. The unit is to have all its expenses to Washington paid by the Caravan club.

Uniforms are now being selected and all members of the club are hopeful that this patrol will come back home with the national championship.

Realtors' Meeting.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Atlanta Real Estate board will be held at the Robert Fulton hotel Thursday at 12:30 o'clock. Robert C. Alston, well-known Atlanta attorney, will be the principal speaker on the subject "Lease and Sale Contract Forms."

MUSIC CLUB TICKET SALE CLOSES TODAY

With the final day today of the season ticket sale for the Civic concert series, given under auspices of the Atlanta Music club, officials of the club announce that although the sale of tickets has been heavy, desirable seats for the concerts are still available.

Special prices offered at the season rate end at 6 o'clock this evening. Tickets may be procured at Cable Piano company. Officials of the music club announced Tuesday that there has been heavy mail orders during the past week for reservations for the first concert, which will be given October 18, at the city auditorium. Madame Marie Jeritza, premier soprano will make her appearance at the initial concert.

It is pointed out by officials of the club that those wishing to secure tickets for the Jeritza concert at the special price and also for the other four attractions included in the series—John McCormack, Jascha Heifetz, Harold Baur, Pablo Casals and the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra, may call at the box office at Cable Piano company as early in the day as possible.

Tickets for the Civic concert series, if procured before tonight, will cost $10 for the arena and dress circle, and $6 for the balcony. Single seat prices for the Jeritza performance will range from $1.25 to $3.

PROMINENT ATLANTAN DIES IN ARKANSAS

The body of John B. Lyons, 50, auditor of the Georgia railroad, who died Monday in Hot Springs, Ark., will be brought to Atlanta this morning for funeral services and interment.

Mr. Lyons was born and reared near Opelika, Ala., and had a wide circle of friends throughout the south.

He was judge of the Opelika incorporate court for nearly 20 years, and was one of south Alabama's leading citizens. He accepted a position with the Georgia railroad seven years ago.

Mr. Lyons was first sent to Augusta and transferred three years ago to Atlanta. He was well-known in fraternal circles, being a 32d degree Mason, and a member of the Opelika lodge. He also was a member of the Methodist church.

Besides his widow, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. H. K. Skinner, of Sumter, S. C., and two sons, S. W. and J. B. Lyons, Jr., both of Atlanta.

BYFIELD-CANDLER SUITS ARE STUDIED IN SUPREME COURT

The Georgia supreme court on Tuesday took under advisement the cases of Mrs. Clyde K. Byfield against Walter Candler, and Walter Candler against Clyde K. Byfield. The cases were submitted without argument. Attorneys Slaton and Hopkins represented Mr. and Mrs. Byfield, while Branch & Howard, Arnold & Arnold, and McClelland & McClelland represented Mr. Candler.

Both suits are the outgrowth of an alleged attack on Mrs. Byfield by Mr. Candler on board the liner Berengaria, in July, 1922. Mrs. Byfield is suing Mr. Candler for $100,000. In the De Kalb superior court a judgment was returned for Mr. Candler and the case is appealed by the plaintiff to the higher court. The case of Mr. Candler against Mr. Byfield involves a note for $20,500. It is appealed from the Fulton superior court, where judgmen was given in favor of Mr. Byfield.

SEWARD M. SMITH IS CONSIDERED FOR JUDGESHIP

Gossip in capitol corridors is now centering on the question of a successor to Judge J. C. Dickerson, of the Alapaha circuit, who died in Atlanta last week.

While the governor has not intimated who he is considering for the place the name of Seward M. Smith, attorney for the state highway board, has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the place.

Before his appointment to the highway department Mr. Smith was assistant attorney general. He is a former resident of Cordele and a native of that section of the state. It is reported that a majority of the members of the legislature from the counties in the Alapaha circuit have promised to support Mr. Smith should be ask for the place.

INDIAN SUMMER WEATHER TO STAY, FORECASTER SAYS

From 62 to 80 degrees, that's the range of temperature Atlanta is enjoying in these balmy October days of Indian summer. And there's no telling how long it is going to last, according to C. F. von Herrmann, official prognosticator in charge of the local office of the United States weather bureau.

"No signs of a change in weather anywhere on the horizon," was his cheering words, Tuesday afternoon. He added that there was a slight suspicion of showers on the coast but so slight as to be negligible.

Every day this week, so far, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, the lowest temperature has been 62—each morning—and the highest 80—each afternoon.

BOARD OF DENTAL EXAMINERS MEET HERE ON THURSDAY

For the purpose of examining applicants for licenses to practice dentistry in the state, the Georgia board of dental examiners will hold its annual meeting at 9 o'clock Thursday morning at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Dr. S. D. Rambo, of Marietta, is president of the board. Dr. M. M. Forbes, of Atlanta, is secretary.

ATLANTA DENTIST MADE DEFENDANT IN FRAUD CHARGE

Fraud in obtaining a settlement under an accident insurance policy is charged in a suit in equity filed by the Provident Life and Accident Insurance company, of Chattanooga, Tenn., against Leonidas F. Pritchett, an Atlanta dentist, in United States district court.

The suit alleges that the defendant represented, in obtaining the policy, that he was not insured in any other company. Whereas, the petition further alleges, the Provident Life and Accident company and another insurance company paid claims to Dr. Pritchett for the loss of his left eye. The suit seeks judgment in the sum of $3,738, which is asked as a refund of the amount paid the defendant.

UNIFORM BALLOT ASKED BY M'CLURE IN ALL COUNTIES

In a letter addressed to G. E. Maddox, chairman of the democratic state executive committee, C. W. McClure, state chairman for the progressive party, Tuesday asked that Mr. Maddox join in a movement to recommend to all county chairmen that as closely as possible the same form of ballot be used in each county of the state at the coming election on November 4.

Mr. McClure points out that some 60 counties will vote this year under the Australian ballot system, while the other counties will not. Counties using the Australian ballot system will receive uniform ballots from the state, but under the law the other counties must provide their own, and there is no law which requires uniformity, Mr. McClure points out.

The burden of expense in preparing these ballots and having them printed, says Mr. McClure, is not inconsiderable, and he urges a plan for uniformity which will reduce this expense and at the same time simplify the act of voting and thus tend to draw out more voters on November 4, next, he says.

BETTER THAN WHISKEY FOR COLDS AND FLU

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspironal, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as ten times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so all you have to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk half a dollar for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonfuls. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children, for Aspironal is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold and cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night.—(adv.)

GEORGIA SYNOD NAMES DR. SIBLEY

Valdosta, Ga., October 7.—Dr. Julian S. Sibley, of Cartersville, was elected moderator of the Presbyterian Synod of Georgia at its opening session here today. The morning session opened with a sermon by Dr. M. M. MacFerrin, of Augusta, followed by a communion service conducted by Rev. W. S. Wilson, of Atlanta, and L. G. Henderson, of Albany. Memorials were read to two ministers who died during the year. They are Rev. A. D. Holderby, of Atlanta, and Rev. Clyde Johnson, of Cartersville.

The afternoon session consisted of reports of various committees and an open air service at the court house led by Robert King. The evening session convened at 8 o'clock, opening with devotional exercises and reports of committees. Dr. F. K. Sims and Dr. Ralph Gilman addressed the convention. Rev. William Huck spoke on pioneer work in Walton county, Dr. Robert King on evangelistic work in Rabun county. A general survey of the work was made by Rev. J. B. Ficklen. There are 150 delegates in attendance, all of whom are being entertained in private homes. Rev J. W. Stokes, clerk of the synod, is sick at Atlanta and unable to attend the meeting here, and J. B. Ficklen, of Atlanta, is acting for him. Among the prominent visitors is Mrs. W. A. Turner, of Newnan, who is president of the Woman's Synodical auxiliary. Sessions will continue through Thursday morning.

REAL FALSE ALARM

Firemen Called To Fight Pipe Smoke.

Firemen don't play checkers all the time.

Frequently they answer false alarms.

Tuesday night four big trucks were sent speeding out to Mayland circle. There they were supposed to find several houses all ablaze. At least that's what a woman's voice said via 'phone.

Completing a work begun in 1908, at which time a small group of interested men and women visualized a permanent and fitting memorial to Joel Chandler Harris, Georgia folklore writer, whose name is written on the list of the world's immortals, members of the Uncle Remus Memorial association Monday completed the purchase from the Harris family of "Snap Bean Farm," adjoining the Wren's Nest, home of the famous weaver of tales.

The $2,000 necessary to the purchase was presented to Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris by Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, president of the Uncle Remus Memorial association, in the form of a check, for which the widow subsequently handed over formal deeds to the property.

The memorial is now complete and there will live forever in fitting surroundings this tribute of admirers to the man who made Uncle Remus and his tales of animals real living adventures for the thousands of little folk throughout the entire world who still listen breathlessly to recitations of pranks and doings of "ol' Br'er Rabbit."

Dream Comes True.

Officers of the Uncle Remus Memorial association gathered at the Wren's Nest Tuesday and with members of the organization witnessed the realization of their dream. Officers who have held posts practically continuously since the association was organized in 1908 are: Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, president; Mrs. E. L. Connally, Mrs. Sam D. Jones and Mrs. Fred Stewart, vice presidents; Mrs. H. G. Hastings, recording secretary; Mrs. W. D. White, corresponding secretary; Mrs. T. T. Stevens, treasurer; Mrs. F. J. Purser, auditor, and Mrs. Robert Blackburn, historian.

Members of the Uncle Remus Memorial association point with pride to the national and even international interest which has been manifested from time to time in the foundation of the memorial. On the roster at the Wren's Nest are recorded names from every state in the United States and from 17 foreign countries, they declare.

The final assurance of a permanent memorial to the great writer is considered even more in the light of a great achievement, and it is pointed out that friendship or great men for the equally great Joel Chandler Harris has played an important part in making possible the establishment of the memorial. Roosevelt, on a trip to Atlanta, delivered a lecture, the proceeds of which—$5,000—he gave toward the establishing of a memorial to his close friend. Andrew Carnegie, when he learned of this, gave an equal amount.

Real "Live" Memorial.

On the grounds of the Wren's Nest are planted a few memorial trees, tributes to great personages. One is in memory of Mrs. Ellen Axon Wilson, first wife of Woodrow Wilson; one to Woodrow Wilson himself, another to Mrs. Lollie Belle Wylie, noted woman writer, and yet another to A. McD. Wilson, husband of the president of the association.

It is pointed out that the memorial is not just a "dead" memorial, but is really playing an important part in the life of the community, housing the only West End branch of the Carnegie library and yearly entertaining the neighborhood with May festivals.

EMBEZZLEMENT LAID TO U. S. POSTAL CLERK

Macon, Ga., October 7.—(Special.) Another embezzlement of funds from the Macon postoffice is said to have been disclosed here today in the indictment by the federal grand jury of Reuben H. Davis, until recently in charge of the parcel post division of the local postoffice on a charge of taking $2,000 in money. Davis is now at liberty on bond.

Davis was arrested sometime ago, but the matter was kept secret by federal agents pending an investigation of the alleged shortage. Following his indictment today, inspectors say that Davis retained collections on parcel post C. O. D. packages, making settlements with concerns in a number of instances after complaints were registered with the postoffice department.

The parcel post clerks have one month in which to make returns of collections, however, their accounts are supposed to balance each night.

Davis is alleged to have hid parcel post C. O. D. tags from day to day, making settlements on the old tags, which he would bring out, and permit the new tags to continue to accumulate.

DEMOCRATS NAME DISTRICT CHAIRMEN

Organization of Davis-Bryan clubs throughout the fifth congressional district is rapidly going forward and chairmen have been named for each of the five counties comprising the district, according to an announcement by Charles D. McKinney, a prominent member of the Fulton and DeKalb county bars.

Chairmen named are: B. P. Gambrell, of Atlanta, chairman of the Fulton county organization; Lawrence Camp, of Fairburn, Campbell chairman; Bond Almond, of Decatur, DeKalb chairman; J. T. Duncan, of Douglasville, Douglas chairman, and R. O. Gailey, of Conyers, Rockdale chairman.

Rapidly increasing interest in the coming campaign is being favorably manifested, according to McKinney, who declared that nearly 800 persons have enrolled in the Davis-Bryan clubs in Fulton and DeKalb counties alone.

CHEW FOUND GUILTY IN OIL FRAUD CASES

Texarkana, Ark., October 7.—Robert ("Bob") Chew was found guilty on eight of the eleven counts in the indictment against him when the jury gave its verdict in United States court today. Judge Frank A. Youmans had instructed a verdict of not guilty on the other three counts, the government not having presented testimony to substantiate them.

A verdict of not guilty was returned in the case of Louis Grimm, co-defendant with Chew.

Both were charged with use of the mails to defraud and conspiracy in connection with operations in the Arkansas oil field. Sentence of Chew was deferred until November.

NICARAGUA REBELS REPORTED DEFEATED

Mangua, Nicaragua, October 7.—Reports received here today are to the effect that the Honduran revolutionists under General Ferrera have been defeated in a sanguinary battle at Ajuterique by troops under President Tosta.

Pastor Ratteree Tried by Court In Assault Case

Rev. A. C. Ratteree, of 114 Middle street, was exonerated Tuesday of charges of assault and battery in Judge John D. Humphries' division of Fulton superior court. The jury required only 20 minutes to reach a verdict.

Ratteree was indicted by the Fulton county grand jury some time ago on charges brought by Mrs. Fred Gore, who charged that Ratteree struck her over the head with the butt of a revolver during an altercation which occurred in front of the Ratteree home.

Ratteree denied striking Mrs. Gore at all, declaring that he was merely acting as peacemaker in an effort to quell a controversy between Mrs. Gore and his sister-in-law. He denied having a pistol.

WELL-KNOWN WOMAN DIES LATE TUESDAY

Mrs. Anna H. Thoit, 94, well-known Atlanta woman, and pioneer resident of this city, died Tuesday night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth T. Winship, at the Ponce de Leon apartments.

Mrs. Thiot has been a resident of Atlanta since the early 80's and has a wide circle of friends here. She was a member of the First Methodist church and was prominently identified with religious work prior to her failing health.

She is survived by two sons, Charles N. Thiot, of Savannah, and Richard Wyley Thiot, of Pensacola, Fla., and one daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth T. Winship, of Atlanta.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later by H. M. Patterson & Son, funeral directors in charge.

FIRST ELECTROCUTION IS HELD IN FLORIDA

Raiford, Fla., October 7.—Frank Johnson, negro, was electrocuted at the state prison farm here at 2:44 o'clock this afternoon for the murder of Atley B. Terrell, locomotive engineer, at Jacksonville last December. Johnson was the first man to be executed by electrocution in the state of Florida.

The execution was without incident. Johnson displayed extreme nervousness throughout the morning, but was able to walk to the chair unassisted.

This morning the negro called for Captain L. S. Mosely, of the state prison farm, and made a confession to him of the murder of Terrell. Several state officials and the 12 witnesses required by law, saw the execution.

14 WASHINGTONIANS FIGHTING REMOVAL

Washington, October 7.—Justice Siddons in district supreme court today continued until October 21 hearing on the habeas corpus proceedings instituted by fifteen Washingtonians held for removal to Tampa, under indictment charging conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act.

The men seeking to prevent removal are Lieutenant Joshua L. Sprinkle and Private William Haller, of the police department; O. C. Fredericks, Claude McNeill, Wallace Baresdale and Walter A. Tapscott, employees of the Pullman company; Patrick H. Bartoman, John B. Newman and Charles Marshall, former deputy United States marshals: James Boudwin, Sr., James Hunter, Bromley Hunter, Emil Krause and Ralph McCullough.

PATTERSON NAMED MORTICIAN CHIEF

Elevated to the highest position within the ranks of his profession, Fred W. Patterson, of H. M. Patterson & Son, Atlanta funeral directors, has been elected president of National Selected Morticians, the leading organization in America devoted to the interests of undertakers, according to reports received in Atlanta Tuesday from Chicago, where the organization has been in convention.

Mr. Patterson has been closely identified with National Selected Morticians for several years. He was a member of the board of control during the past year. He also has been chairman of the committee on economics, as well as chairman of the committee on resolutions at the Chicago meeting.

Election of Mr. Patterson to the presidency of his organization comes as a signal honor to one who has established an enviable record in this particular field. He is recognized as an outstanding success by funeral directors in his home city and state.

Reports from Chicago indicate that the convention has been devoted to many subjects of importance in the undertaking field. Educational and economic conditions of the nation were discussed with the same interest as was devoted to strictly professional subjects. Many speakers of national reputation appeared on the program.

Mrs. Patterson attended a part of the convention with her husband, but had not reached Chicago when Mr. Patterson was elected to his high position. Two other Georgia members of the organization, J. Freeman Hart, of Macon, and M. M. Bernstein, of Athens, attended the Chicago meeting.

MANSFIELD ORDERS DOGS OFF STREETS

Mansfield, Ga., October 7.—(Special).—A small dog after being treated three months to prevent rabies, went mad suddenly here Sunday, biting several dogs and causing a near panic. Examination of the dog's head at the state laboratory showed that the dog had hydrophobia and as a consequence Mayor Lawrence today ordered all dogs off the streets.

PROSPEROUS SOUTH SEEN BY NEW YORKER

That the eyes of eastern capitalists are turned toward the south, and a huge sum of money is ready to be turned loose for investment in the states south of the national capital, is the substance of an interview given out Tuesday afternoon by A. B. Weller, of New York, chief of the sales organization of G. L. Miller & Co., well-known real estate mortgage house of New York and Atlanta.

"There is no question," said Mr. Weller, "that the moneyed people of the eastern cities have become deeply interested in the wonderful possibilities of the southland, the confidence of investors in the splendid future of this section is so pronounced that there is every indication that a tidal wave of money will flow to the southern states for investment and development."

Mr. Weller stated that about two years ago, when the intensive campaign of selling mortgage bonds on southern properties in the north and east was inaugurated, it was a difficult matter to persuade people that the south was much more than a succession of cotton fields and negro cabins, with but little promise of great development. The education of the people, however, has been directed along lines that presented the south in its true light, with the result that confidence has been created and that millions of dollars have been invested, and other millions are ready to come into this territory to make returns for the capitalists of the money centers.

He stated that the interest in the development of the south has increased with great strides during the past few months and that the Miller bond house has been compelled to open a number of branch offices to care for its business. Mr. Weller said that within the past six months offices had been opened in Kansas City, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Grand Rapids, Mich., to handle the demand for southern mortgage bonds. "We are planning to campaign right out to the Pacific coast," he said, "following up the demand that is made upon our resources for the sale of these attractive and highly-productive securities. We also have opened a number of offices in the southern cities, including Birmingham, Knoxville, Memphis and Jacksonville, to care for our increasing business.

"The outlook for business in southern mortgage bonds," concluded the salesmanager, "as well as the outlook for business in general in the southern states, is brighter perhaps than ever in the history of the country, and I do not hesitate to picture the future in glowing colors for the people of this wonderful section."

Mr. Weller visited Atlanta for a conference with local officials of the G. L. Miller company. The company maintains one of its largest offices and selling organizations in this city, on the 11th floor of the mammoth Hurt building.

Death of Infant.

Mary Catherine, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Winton Fowler, died Monday at their home, 123 Church street, East Point, Ga. The body of the 10-day-old infant has been taken to Auburn, Ga., for funeral and interment.

"Fortune Booth" On Fair Grounds Weighs Patrons

Editor's Note: This is one of a series of articles being furnished by the Atlanta Community Chest to acquaint the public with the work of the agencies in the chest, which The Constitution is running to help the Community Crest.

"It's good enough to repeat," decided the Anti-Tuberculosis association when it was found that so many patients had been brought to the clinic at 23 East Cain street as a result of having been weighed and measured at the health fortune-telling booth operated at the Southeastern fair last year.

In the Liberal Arts building in a corner where there is plenty of fresh air and sunlight, there is a real gypsy tent and real health gypsies in attendance, who invited visitors to "Come right in and have your fortune told."

The spirit of the scales tells how much the visitor weighs and the mystic weight chart shows how much he or she should weigh and then the gypsy tells the "Health Fortune" and gives the visitor a card carrying his own record.

Educational? Yes, for who is not interested in knowing all they can about themselves, and no exhibit of the Anti-Tuberculosis association has ever been the direct cause of a greater number of people coming to the clinic for examinations. Some of them were found to be negative, some held under observation and four people are now in sanitariums because their "Health Fortunes" warned them in time. That's why "it's good enough to repeat."

Four gypsies will be in attendance every day. The members of the staff of the Anti-Tuberculosis association taking turns in this service and volunteer workers assisting every day.

"Come right in and have your fortune told." You may find your best friend is temporarily a gypsy."

ONE NEAR DEATH, TWO OTHERS HURT IN AUTO CRASHES

E. L. Murphy, of 305 East Point avenue, received a fractured skull Tuesday morning in an automobile collision at Georgia and Central avenues.

Murphy was riding with L. P. Phillips, an East Point merchant, when a heavy truck driven by an unidentified man crashed into the car at the corner of the two avenues. Police are investigating the accident. Few other accidents were reported during the day.

R. G. Pilgrim, of DeKalb county, was slightly injured Tuesday morning when knocked from the seat of the car he was driving in Decatur, when he leaned out of his car to look for a blowout, his head striking a tree. He was carried to Grady hospital where doctors declared his injuries to be not serious.

Another unusual accident in which J. G. Huggins, of Roswell, suffered dangerous injuries was reported at Grady hospital. Huggins, who attempted to crank his car on Marietta street, was knocked to the pavement when the car started suddenly.

EPISCOPALIAN BISHOPS AND COUNCIL IN MEET

New York, October 7.—Preliminary meets on budget problems today cleared the way for a joint meeting tomorrow of the house of bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church and the members of the national council, at which will be considered the church's program for the next three years.

The special session, marking the first meeting of the house of bishops with the national council since the latter body's organization in 1919, will be inaugurated formally tomorrow with a special service in the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine. Preceding the service, the 100 bishops who have come here, representing virtually the entire membership of the house of bishops of the continental United States, will march in procession wearing their vestments.

The church's 1925 budget was considered today by the national council, which also discussed means of restoring a reserve fund of $705,000, created for emergencies, which has been expended.

The joint meetings will continue Thursday afternoon and all day Friday.

DRUG CLERK HELD PRISONER IN STORE AFTER ROBBERY

Held up at the point of pistols in the hands of three well-groomed young men Tuesday night, Z. O. Moore, clerk of the Highland Avenue Drug store, at Highland avenue and Randolph street, was robbed of his watch, a small sum of money, and then locked in a closet of the drug store, according to his story to police. The holdup men then, according to Mr. Moore, rifled the cash register of $31.17.

According to Moore's story, the trio of young men came into the store and asked for a package of chewing gum. When Mr. Moore turned around after picking up the gum, he says, he was faced by three pistols, relieved of his watch and money and closeted. After remaining a prisoner for over an hour he attracted the attention of a negro across the street by yelling. The negro unlocked the door and released him.

The case was investigated by Call Officers M. B. Johnson and M. B. Cartwright and turned over to detectives who are searching for the three holdup men.

Pierce Planter Stabbed in Row; Kinsmen Jailed

Waycross, Ga., October 7.—(Special).—As a result of wounds said to have been inflicted by his brother, Joel Bennett and Joel's son, Theodore Bennett, W. H. Bennett, of Blackshear, is in a local hospital in a serious condition.

It appears that the trouble was the outgrowth of an argument last night which started at the home of Joel Bennett over a mule. In the course of the argument a reference is alleged to have been made to W. H. Bennett's wife, at which he became offended and struck at his brother. In the fight which followed, the older Bennett was joined by his son, Theodore, in the attack on W. H. Bennett. One of the men drew a knife and stabbed W. H. Bennett from which he may die, officers say.

Both Joel Bennett and his son are in jail in Blackshear charged with the stabbing. Joel Bennett was living on a plantation owned by his brother, it is said.

"What do you expect your son to be when he grows up?" A man, I reckon," replied the gaunt Missourian, "unless he develops into a tenor singer."—Kansas City Star.

Interesting news!

Listerine Throat Tablets, containing the antiseptic oils of Listerine, are now available. While we frankly admit that no tablet or candy lozenge can deodorize the breath, the Listerine antiseptic oils in these tablets are very valuable as a relief for throat irritations.

They are 25 cents a package

"Shall I discharge him for it?"

ANDREWS, senior partner of the firm, was in a quandary. One of his salesmen, an engaging young fellow and possessing the finest approach to prospective purchasers, simply failed to make any kind of a showing at all.

In a confidential talk with him one afternoon, Andrews discovered the reason. Yet he didn't know whether to tell him about it or simply discharge the man. What would you have done?

* * * *

You, yourself, rarely know when you have halitosis (unpleasant breath). That's the insidious thing about it. And even your closest friends won't tell you.

Sometimes, of course, halitosis comes from some deep-seated organic disorder that requires professional advice. But usually—and fortunately—halitosis is only a local condition that yields to the regular use of Listerine as a mouth wash and gargle. It is an interesting thing that this well-known antiseptic that has been in use for years for surgical dressings, possesses these unusual properties as a breath deodorant.

Test the remarkable deodorizing effects of Listerine this way: Rub a little onion on your fingers. Then apply Listerine and note how quickly the onion odor disappears.

This safe and long-trusted antiseptic has dozens of different uses; note the little circular that comes with every bottle. Your druggist sells Listerine in the original brown package only—three sizes: three ounce, seven ounce and fourteen ounce. Buy the large size for economy.—*Lambert Pharmacal Company, Saint Louis, U. JERSEY DEMOCRATS HIT KLAN AND PROHIBITION

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Trenton, N. J., October 7.—After a long battle, which finally resulted in expressed approval of the child welfare amendment to the federal constitution, the democratic state convention today adopted a platform in which the Ku Klux Klan, the Volstead act and the Hobart enforcement act of the state were denounced by name.

With but little alteration, the platform unanimously was approved as drafted by the resolution committee. An anti-lynching plank was added. The plank on labor and child welfare was widened to include a more liberal workmen's compensation provision.

Denounce 18th Amendment.

The 18th amendment to the federal constitution was denounced as "an unwarranted intrusion upon the rights of states," in the wake of which "has trailed corruption of government on a scale unparalleled in the history of the country, a lack of enforcement and general disrespect for all law.'

"We demand immediate action by congress that the Volstead act be so amended so as to permit the manufacture and sale of wines and beer in order to provide a measure of relief from a condition of lawlessness which has been created by the passage of this act," is the language of the plank.

"In order that New Jersey may not continue a party to such a demoralizing influence, we demand a repeal of the state enforcement act, believing that through such a repeal notice will be given to the people of New Jersey and of the United States that our state has done everything in its power to correct the evil which it recognizes to exist."

The plank dealing with the Ku Klux Klan said:

Plank Upon Klan.

"We condemn the Ku Klux Klan as an organization formed to set at naught the liberties guaranteed by the constitution to every citizen. Its prescription of groups of citizens upon racial and religious grounds and its attempts in a secret and insidious manner to intimidate and control public officials is a direct challenge to constitutional government.

"In seeking to foment religious bigotry and racial strife, it menaces the peace, happiness and contentment of the people.

"We condemn as un-American those who would discriminate against Catholic, Jew, negro or foreign-born, all of whom have shown their valor in defense of country in time of war and their good citizenship in time of peace. We promise to courageously meet this challenge and pledge the enactment of legislation that will destroy its power for evil."

Richard Loeb Now Has Different Viewpoint He Tells His Mother

Joliet, Ill., October 7.—For the first time since he was imprisoned for life for the kidnaping-murder of Robert Franks, Richard Loeb saw his mother, Mrs. Albert H. Loeb, yesterday, when she visited him in the state penitentiary here.

"Obedience and cheerfulness were urged by the mother, who told him:

"Your father and I and all the rest of us are hoping and praying for your welfare. You'll try to do your best now, won't you?"

"I have a different viewpoint now," he said. "I've changer. I see things a little differently here. Now my ambition is to get along in prison. I'm striving for success down here."

The visit lasted thirty minutes.

The father, vice president of Sears-Roebuck & Company, who remained at the Loeb summer home in Charlevoix, Mich., during the trial, and who has never seen his son since his arrest, is in Chicago. He is suffering from heart trouble.

Editor in Contempt For Refusal To Tell If He Is Klansman

Buffalo, N. Y., October 7.—Market Hubbell, editor of a weekly publication, refused today to state in court whether he is a member of the Ku Klux Klan and was declared in contempt of court by Judge Peter Maul during continuation of John Doe proceedings against the klan. Judge Maul reserved decision in the matter of a jail sentence when the witness asked that he be given time to obtain an attorney.

"I'd rather go to jail and have my conscience clear than answer the question," Hubbell declared when asked by Attorney Henry W. Killeen, who is directing the John Doe proceedings, whether he belonged to the klan.

"All right, let's send him to jail," said Killeen, making a motion that Hubbell be declared in contempt.

Judge Maul remarked that he deemed the question a proper one and directed the witness to answer. Hubbell maintained his stand.

The proceedings were instituted by Charles S. Desmond, an attorney in an effort to establish whether the klan has been in existence in Buffalo in defiance of a state law.

Spaniards Quit Positions.

Madrid, October 7.—Evacuation of two Spanish positions in Morocco, Adru, in the Buharra sector, and Sunna, in the Zoo-el-Jemis region, is announced in an official statement. The garrisons with their ammunition and arms, withdrew in orderly fashion.

REPUBLIC OF GEORGIA DRIVES AGAINST REDS

New York, October 7.—The revolutionary forces which are attempting to overthrow the Soviet Russian regime in the Caucasian republic of Georgia have successfully taken the offensive against the Russians, according to information received from the Georgia legation at Paris by Vasili D. Dumbadze and made public today. Mr. Dumbadze is general diplomatic representative of the confederation of Caucasian republics.

Advices from the Russo-Georgian frontier, according to the cablegrams received by Mr. Dumbadze indicated that the fighting has taken on the character of regular warfare and that executions of rebels and rebel sympathizers are being carried out by the Russians enmasse, the number of those already put to death exceeding 9,000.

"In Svanetia" one of the cablegrams says "the Georgians have taken the offensive and the soviet troops, after a long battle have retired, leaving behind them 500 prisoners and dead and a great number of wounded. In Gurie, the insurgents have successfully opened a campaign at Ozurgueti freeing prisoners held by the Russians and taking them to the hills.

"Documents which have fallen into the hands of the insurgents show that the Russian Cheka has ordered that the names of the persons executed be withheld from publication."

Another message declares that all efforts to dislodge the Georgians from their positions in Svanetia have failed, the soviet troops suffering heavy losses. Fresh troops are arriving from Russia.

CHATHAM CONVICT REFUSES PARDON OF GOV. WALKER

Savannah, Ga., October 7.—H. J. Mahoney, convicted of a statutory offense in March and sentenced to serve a year, conditionally pardoned this week by Governor Clifford Walker, is today back on the Brown farm to finish his term rather than accept the pardon on the terms he understood accompanied it, he said today. Friends interpreted the condition of the pardon to permanent banishment from the state, while legal opinion is that Governor Walker required that he remain out of the state for the remainder of the term of his sentence, of which half has been served.

Governor Walker was not at Atlanta today and Attorney A. J. Ryan, Jr., Mahoney's counsel, could not reach the executive for a clear explanation of the alleged banishment condition. Mahoney, while in a drunken condition, is said to have assaulted a child in the old Colonial cemetery, near the Chatham county jail.

Murder Is Charged To Man of Macon Who Wrecked Train

Carlyle, Ill., October 7.—A murder warrant was issued today for George Williams, 23, a negro held in the Clinton county jail here, who has confessed a mania for derailing trains.

Williams who said his home formerly was at Macon, Ga., signed a confession that he caused the wreck of the Baltimore & Ohio fast St. Louis-Cincinnati passenger train No. 12 near Aviston, Ill., last Friday night, in which the engineer was killed and the fireman and nine passengers were injured.

The prisoner also admitted derailing passenger trains at Mackey and Veedersburg, Ind., the latter part of September, causing minor injuries to several passengers. In all three cases, he said, he had no motive except a desire to see coaches pile up in wreckage.

FRENCH ARE PLANNING TO FLY ACROSS POLE

Paris, October 7.—Another arctic expedition, this time all French and headed by Jules de Payer, is to start for the Polar regions at the end of next March, according to Le Journal. The party will proceed in a specially-equipped vessel to the Franz Josef archipelago whence an attempt will be made to fly across the North Pole.

ASSISTANT CHIEF ASKS NEW AUTO; UP TO COMMITTEE

A request for an appropriation of $1,700 to purchase an automobile for use of the assistant fire chief at Station No. 8, made of city council on Tuesday, was referred to the finance committee. Indications are that the appropriation cannot be granted until next year, as council already has approved the October finance sheet.

BULGARIAN CURRENCY IS CRUMBLING TO DUST

Tartar Pazardjik, Bulgaria, October 7.—A commission from the ministry of finance has been sent here to investigate a peculiar phenomenon in the local branch of the Bulgarian National bank—the crumbling of metallic currency, either to a thin scum-like film or else to mere dust.

The currency was minted abroad less than a year ago. Specialists believe the aluminum coins contain too much zinc, which disintegrates under the action of moisture.

Officials of the national bank are alarmed at the prospect that the entire issue of 100,000,000 leva may disintegrate.

2 NEGROES RESCUED FROM CHICAGO CROWD

Chicago, October 7.—Lawrence Washington and George Foster, negroes, who confessed, the police said, to two murders, fifty robberies and the shooting of two policemen and a girl, were in jail today after a crowd attempted to take them from officers for whom they were diagramming one of the killings last night in Evanston, a fashionable University suburb.

Both of the victims, William Fox and Munzio Mascolina, Evanston storekeepers, were shot in attempted robberies. The policemen were shot in escapes from the scenes of the fatal shootings, and the girl was wounded because she was slow in raising her hands during a robbery.

HUGHES CASE SET FOR TRIAL TODAY

Waynesboro, Ga., October 7.—(Special.)—J. M. Hughes, charged with the murder of a man by the name of Kite will go on trial in Burke county superior court tomorrow morning, it was announced tonight by Solicitor George Haines, of Augusta. Hughes has been in jail for the past several months, having waived a preliminary hearing.

The trial of Bob Landsell, alleged slayer of Freeman J. Broxton in a row over some land, will come before the tribunal after the Hughes case has been disposed of, Mr. Haines said. Other important criminal cases are on docket for this session of the court.

AFFINITY MAY BE INDICTED JOINTLY WITH CLERGYMAN

Mount Vernon, Ill., October 7.—State's Attorney F. G. Thompson announced today he would ask the Jefferson county grand jury when it convenes Monday to return two joint murder indictments against Lawrence M. Hight, former Ina clergyman, and Mrs. Elsie Sweeten, confessed poison plotters. Hight and Mrs. Sweeten confessed they killed their mates so they might marry.

"Both deaths were due to a conspiracy entered into by Hight and Mrs. Sweeten," said the prosecutor. "The law recognizes no distinction between a man and a woman in such a case. There is no other course for the state to pursue except to ask for a joint indictment for murder in each killing."

If joint indictments are returned, he said he expected Attorney R. E. Smith, of Benton, retained to represent Mrs. Sweeten, would seek a separate trial for her. The state's attorney said he would insist on a joint trial.

Hight has taken no steps to prepare for his defense. He has told officials he planned to ask the court to appoint a lawyer for him, and has intimated several times he expected to enter a plea of guilty and throw himself upon the mercy of the court.

SOLORZANO LEADING NICARAGUA ELECTION

Managua, Nicaragua, October 7.—With about half the returns from the Sunday elections thus far received, Carlos Solorzano, national liberal, is leading for the presidency with 24,000 votes. General Emiliano Chamorro, conservative, has polled 14,000 and Dr. Luis Felipe Correa, liberal republican, 5,000.

The government has restored order throughout the republic and the decree of martial law will be rescinded.

BELGIUM WILL LEND $7,500,000 TO GERMANY

Brussels, October 7.—(By the Associated Press)—The Belgian share in the $200,000,000 loan to Germany provided under the Dawes reparation plan has been fixed in principal at $7,500,000. The government previously had the assurance of subscriptions for $5,000,000 and the balance, it is understood, probably has been found by a number of bankers whom Premier Theunis called into conference today.

GEORGIA VETERANS OPEN MEET TODAY

Thomasville, Ga., October 7.—General A. J. Twiggs, commanding the Georgia division of the United Confederate veterans, with members of his staff and ladies, arrived this afternoon in a special car from Augusta to take charge of the 32d annual reunion, which starts Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

General Wells, of the northern brigade, and General Stewart, of the western brigade, came in on the same train, accompanied by a large number of veterans and ladies. General Morgan, of the south Georgia brigade, came in an hour earlier.

Six special coaches were used to provide comfortable quarters for those coming in on today's trains, and more are expected tomorrow. The total registration tonight numbered more than 1,0. Thomasville is in gala array, hundreds of Confederate flags and red and white bunting forming a background for stores and show windows. Veterans were taken in charge by special committees and homes assigned to them.

The first night was given over to a special concert by the band from Fort Benning. Two thousand persons attended the concert.

FOURTH QUAKE ROCKS VILLAGES IN EZERUM

London, October 7.—Most of the villages in the Ezerum district of Armenia were shaken by another earthquake, the fourth within six weeks, last Thursday, says a belated Constantinople dispatch. The quake, though not severe as the preceding ones, continued at intervals for 14 hours, caused some deaths and destroyed a great number of houses, several railroad stations and bridges which had withstood earlier shocks.

FALL OF SHANGHAI AGAIN THREATENED

Reinforcements Rushed Southward To Check Advance Made by Kiangsu Armed Forces.

Shanghai, October 8.—By The Associated Press).—The Chekiang province armies today were threatened with loss of the city of Shanghai for the second time within a month, and were rushing reinforcements southward to check the latest aggressions of their Kiangau enemies.

Although Red Cross units who had been following up the fighting near Sungkiang, 28 miles to the southwest on the Shanghai-Hangchow railway line, were brought back to Shanghai today, defense headquarters at Lungwha, south of the city, denied there had been any Chekiang retreat in the Sungkiang sector.

It was admitted, however, that the situation aroused Sungkiang, where the combined Kiangsu-Anhwei-Fukien forces have almost surrounded the city, was serious. It also was admitted that reserves were being rushed toward Sungkiang to check the encircling movement of the enemy.

An official statement from Lungwha declared that the Kiangsu troops around Sungkiang were handicapped by lack of ammunition, because Wu Pei Fu, military commander in chief of the central government at Peking, to which the three provinces of Kiangsu, Anhwei and Fukien owe allegiance, had ordered the munitions stream from Danyang (Hupeh province), arsenal diverted to the north where he is fighting General Chang Tse-Lin of Manchuria.

BOMBS ARE RAINED UPON SHANGHAIKWAN.

Tientsin, China., October 7.—Manchurian aircraft appeared over Shanghaikwan, in northern Chihli province at the eastern extremity of the great Chinese wall, at daybreak today and rained bombs on the ancient city, while the surface armies of General Chang Tso-Lin, Manchurian leader, and Pekin government troops carried on an intensive battle for possession of the city, which is held by Pekin forces.

According to private advices received here, the battle was continuing with added fury. The Chang Tso-Lin airmen and surface forces rained shells inside the great wall, once considered an adequate barrier of defense against Manchurian and Mongolian invaders.

As the bombardment continued, the Manchurian troops, attempting to take the city, were unable to withstand the fire returned by the Pekin troops and were forced to retreat to new positions.

SUNGKIANG'S CAPTURE BELIEVED IMMINENT.

Shanghai, October 7.—Capture of Sungkiang, a city 28 miles by rail southwest of here, by the combined armies of Fukien, Kiangsu and Anhwei provinces, was threatened late tonight.

Unconfirmed dispatches from Fukien sources said the city already had fallen.

The Kiangsu forces, by traveling down the Whangpoo river, pushed through the Chekiang defenses almost encircling the walls of Sungkiang, normally a city of 50,000. Late tonight, the Chekiang fighters were reported on the defense, trying to keep the invaders from cutting the railway line between Sungkiang and Shanghai.

The Kiangsu men were said to have advanced far enough to fire on the Shanghai gates of Sungkiang—that is, the gates through which travelers between that city and Shanghai would pass—and to make impossible the escape from the main Sungkiang station, five miles away, of several Chekiang railway trains.

Alderman I. N. Ragsdale, presiding over council as mayor pro tem., was forced to rap his gavel repeatedly before the furor subsided and order was restored.

Following his challenge, Mr. Inman walked to his seat, which is directly behind that of Dr. Aven.

"I will take steps at the next regular meeting of council to force the issue and bring about an investigation of conditions in Atlanta's police department," declared Dr. Aven, after he had been denounced.

"I have nothing to say regarding Councilman Inman's statement, but I certainly intend to push the investigation. As yet I have not decided definitely just what form of action I will take, but the police department must be cleared up and I intend to push the case to the limit. When all disclosures are brought out, they will rock the city."

Dr. Aven indicated that he either would bring wholesale charges against a number of police officers who, he claims, violated a rule of the department by working for Mayor Walter A. Sims during the recent city primary, or would ask that council probe the entire matter.

Mr. Inman's caustic reply was totally unexpected as it followed his report of routine police matters, and no mention of friction had been made during either Monday's or Tuesday's sessions of council.

EDWARD H. SHAW DIES AT CAPITAL

Vice President of Southern Railway, Former Atlanta Resident, Drops Dead at Dinner.

Washington, October 7.—Edward H. Shaw, a vice president of the Southern Railway company, died suddenly here tonight of apoplexy while attending a dinner given in honor of a colleague.

Mr. Shaw, who resides in Washington, was present at the dinner being given in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the connection of L. T. Nichols, of Chester, S. C., superintendent of the Carolina & Northwestern railroad, with the organization. Some 20 officials of the Southern railway and its subsidiaries attended the gathering.

Giving no signs of illness, Mr. Shaw suddenly fell over and died almost immediately. His widow, two sons and a daughter survive him. Mr. Shaw formerly was in charge of the freight department of the Southern railway and had but recently been made a vice president. He was about 60 years old.

Edward H. Shaw, whose death in Washington was announced Tuesday night in a dispatch from that city, was well known in Atlanta. He was for a number of years a resident of this city while connected with the Southern Railway company, and had a large circle of friends here.

Mr. Shaw first came to Atlanta in 1911 as assistant freight traffic manager of the Southern Railway company. When the administration of the railroads was taken over by the government in 1918, he was made traffic manager of the railroad, with headquarters in Washington. However, members of his family continued to make Atlanta their home. In March, 1920, Mr. Shaw was made freight traffic manager of the Southern Railway company, and in the spring of 1924 he was elected as a vice president of the railroad.

Mr. Shaw, who was 60 years of age, was born in Ohio, but moved to the south when a young man. He had been stationed at various southern cities with the Southern railroad, and was regarded as one of the most efficient and popular traffic officials in the south. He had been connected with the Southern Railway company for about 20 years.

Mr. Shaw is survived by his widow, two sons, George Shaw, of Detroit, and Oscar Shaw, who is studying at Harvard, and one daughter, Miss Helen Shaw.

HUGE SHENANDOAH PENETRATES SOUTH

Like Ship At Sea.

Aboard the big ship, limited as to quarters, and with everything stripped down to the minimum of weight, the routine went on like on any naval ship at sea. Green lights hung on port and her starboard light glowed through the open windows of the control cabin forward and from the five motor cabins along the side the hum of the motors reached to the shadowed surface of fields, hills and forests beneath, while the silver tube slipped through the moonlight with its lights of white, red and green clearly seen by those who were awakened by the strange note of nocturnal droning from the sky.

The Shenandoah, as it sailed through its first sunny day and moonlight night, had not the pitch or roll of a ship at sea, nor the thump and drop of an airplane hitting unseen air pockets.

Cast Off at 10 A. M.

Alternately, lightening herself by spurting water ballast and holding her nose aloft by shifting men along the 660-foot runway inside the gas bag, the Shenandoah cast off anchor at 10 a. m. from the mooring mast at Lakehurst, N. J., made a broad circle through the eastward away on the longest airship voyage ever undertaken. Admiral Moffett, chief of naval aviation, was aboard and Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdown was in command.

The Delaware river was reached at 11:25 a. m. and Wilmington 20 minutes later, Baltimore at 1:20 p. m., and Washington at 2:10 p. m., the ship going over the national capital close to the ground at a speed of 55 miles an hour. For the next six hours, the Shenandoah was crossing Virginia green fields, woods of autumn-tinted red and green and prosperous farms giving place to wooded valley, water-washed gullies and scattered clearings of the hills as the panorama below rolled southward.

Orange, Va., was crossed at 3:58 p. m., Charlottesville at 4:35 p. m., Esmont at 5 p. m., Norwood at 5:30 p. m., and the valley of the James river followed until Lynchburg was below just as daylight was fading. Danville, the last town covered on the Virginia side, twinkled back into the distance as the ship hummed on through the darkness at 8:10 p. m.

Leaving her station at Lakehurst, N. J., on what Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the navy bureau of aeronautics, described as "the most severe test to which a dirigible has ever been subjected," the Shenandoah pointed southward and began at a smooth, steady pace her 7,000-mile journey across the continent and return. The dirigible's first stop will be at Ft. Worth, Texas, where a mooring mast awaits her. She also will be moored to masts in San Diego, Cal., and Camp Lewis, Wash., the only other pauses she will make in spanning the continent.

Under the direction of Commander Zachary Lansdowne, the giant cigar-shaped craft passed without incident over Wilmington, Del., Philadelphia and Baltimore on her way to Washington, and continued southward toward Fredericksburg, Va.; Atlanta, Ga., and Birmingham, Ala. Then she will swing across Louisiana to Ft. Worth, where she is scheduled to arrive sometime between midnight Wednesday and dawn Thursday.

Wind Causes Plan Shift.

A 20-mile northeast wind, which arose shortly before the take-off, caused the itinerary to be changed. The original plans called for a tour by way of York, Pa.; Dayton, Ohio; Paducah, Ky., and Little Rock, Ark.

Besides Admiral Moffett, thirty-seven officers and men are aboard the vessel, which carries rations sufficient for five days. Three thousand gallons of gasoline are carried for the motors, enough for them to operate continuously for ninety hours.

FORT WORTH READY FOR BIG DIRIGIBLE.

Fort Worth, Texas, October 7.—Final preparations were made at the helium plant here this morning for the reception of the Shenandoah, which is expected by 10 a. m. Thursday. Lieutenant Wicks, in charge of the plant, has arranged for the refilling of the dirigible with helium and a speedy departure for the Pacific coast. A new mooring mast was completed a month ago.

Democrats Claim Straw Vote Polls of Digest Misleading

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, October 7.—Throughout the doubtful states in the west, the one aspect of the campaign most discouraging to democrats is the Literary Digest polls. Repeatedly, I was told by democratic leaders in those states that these polls are the greatest handicap the democratic party and Davis has. The polls come out week after week showing Davis running third, with La Follette second, and Coolidge an extremely strong first.

This creates among the smaller democratic voters the feeling that the main fight is between Coolidge and La Follette, and that Davis has no chance. This atmosphere being created, the democratic workers find it difficult to interest the people in their candidate. They find that the voters tend to line up on one side or the other in the main fight which, as represented by the Digest polls, seems to be between Coolidge and La Follette. Also, many democratic voters, inferring from these polls that Davis has no chance, and wishing to prevent the election from going into congress, come to the conclusion that the best way to prevent this outcome is for everybody, democrats as well as republicans, who oppose the election going into congress, to vote for Coolidge.

Polls Are Misleading.

All this raises the question of just how such polls are to be interpreted. Obviously, they are not to be taken literally. For example, in the latest poll of the Digest, New Jersey is set down as giving 15,199 votes for Coolidge, and 2,891 for Davis. If this were to be taken as a literal index, it would mean that Coolidge is going to get more than five times as many votes in New Jersey as Davis. Such an inference would be almost grotesque.

This case of New Jersey is admittedly an extreme one among the Digest figures. As to some other states, the Digest returns are not so clearly distant from the true conditions. At the same time, in the Digest returns as a whole, there is abundant evidence that what their figures really represent is a trend rather than actual proportions. This can be demonstrated readily by analyzing those portions of the Digest returns in which voters tell how they voted in 1920. This portion of the Digest returns it is possible to check up partially by the actual returns in 1920, and they confirm the judgment that the Digest returns as a whole can only be interpreted as showing a trend and would be decidedly misleading if they should be interpreted as indicating positively what the figures superficially seem to indicate, namely, that Davis will run third.

Selection of Names Fundamental.

A question fundamental in these Digest polls is the basis of the selection of the names of the voters who are queried. It is understood that this basis is composed of the only names easily accessible, that is, names of persons in telephone books, in automobile register lists, taxpayers' lists, and the like. The democrats point out, with humorous humility, that a good many of their voters are just the sort of persons whose names are not in lists that indicate some degree of property aristocracy, so to speak.

The democratic leaders point out, with a gentle combination of humility and pride, that they are quite willing to concede that any list of names, made up primarily of persons who own automobiles, houses, telephones, or million dollar yachts, will contain more republicans than democrats. A democratic leader in Kansas last week told me of wards in that city where the democratic vote year in and year out is something like 20 times as much as the republican vote. These overwhelmingly democratic wards are precisely the wards of the poor, whose names do not appear in the sort of lists that are made the basis of polls. In discussing this later with a republican leader, he admitted the truth of it, but claimed that these democratic wards are offset by colored wards, in which there is the same condition of names not appearing on formal lists, and in which the vote is overwhelmingly republican. The Digest itself prints the fact that this exception has been made to the significance of its figures, quoting a critic which says: "'The Digest's famous straw votes represent the opinion of the so-called 'higher classes' of the population and do not reach down to the 'mud-sills' of society—the manual workers, the clerical workers and the agricultural workers.

That the Digest polls should be interpreted rather as showing a trend than literally is proved by the results of their 1920 poll. In 1920 the Digest conducted a similar poll of a smaller number of names and in a limited group of states. In this poll Harding received 712,554 votes and Cox 31,779. That is to say, the Digest poll of 1920 gave Harding 73 per cent of the total vote, and Cox 21 per cent. Actually, in the election Harding received 63 per cent of the vote and Cox 34 per cent. The generalization reasonably to be made from this is that the Digest poll is to be given undeniable weight if you interpret it as showing a definite trend—in the present case, toward Coolidge. But the poll will be misleading to those who interpret it as showing the actual relative proportions of the three candidates.

So much for the Digest's 1920 poll. In 1916, also, the Digest took a poll. In that year the Digest did not merely ask for the ballots of its readers. Its poll in that year took the form of a request to a number of its reader to survey and report political feeling in their neighborhoods. The returns stated that 1,495 localities favored Hughes and 1,771 Wilson. That is to say, 46 per cent of the total were for Hughes and 54 per cent for Wilson. The form of survey turned out, when the election came, to be remarkably accurate. In the election, the actual returns were 48 per cent for Hughes and 52 for Wilson. This suggests that a survey made by asking persons to tell the general sentiment of their neighborhoods is more dependable than an actual poll that attempts to get the ballots of a great number of individuals. It is this latter type of survey that politicians depend on. They write to persons whom they know to be of sound judgment, and in touch with the local situation, and out of the aggregate of their replies they are able to make remarkably accurate deductions.

Day of Atonement Being Observed Throughout Land

Yom Kippur, the Jewish day of atonement, is being observed by special services at the temples in Atlanta, the services beginning at sunset Tuesday and scheduled to continue until sunset today.

Services in Atlanta among members of the Jewish faith are being held at the temple on South Pryor street and at the Ahabath Achim congregation house of worship, at Washington street and Woodward avenue. Rabbi David Marx is leading the services at the South Pryor street temple, while Rabbi A. P. Hirmes has charge of services observed by the Ahabath Achim congregation.

Yom Kippur is one of the principal days for observance on the Jewish calendar. All business is suspended at sunset of the first day and is not resumed until after sunset of the second day of worship.

At the Or V. Shalom congregation the cantor will be by Rev. Hain Levi and services will be in charge of Reuben Piha. The singing will be conducted by Reuben Hermon.

The committee in charge of arranging the services consist of Soloman Piha and Morris Hermon.

DESERTED, ITALIAN HUSBAND WANTS MATE TO RETURN

When one comes from Italy one's blood is as warm as the sunshine that gilds the hills girding the eternal city of Rome—and one clings to love.

Vincent Piracci, son of Italy, has changed his place of abode to the colder clime of Baltimore in Maryland, but his heart is still as true as the blue of the skies of his own native land.

MRS. MARGARET PIRACCI.

Consequently, Vincent wishes to inquire of all the signors and signorinas of Atlanta if they, by chance, know where he can locate his wife, Margaret Gauteri Piracci—dark Italian beauty.

For be it known, that Margaret has left Vincent and their five children disconsolate in their Maryland home; gone, vanished—pouf! Like that; si.

And Vincent has recently received a telegram from Margaret, sent from Atlanta.

"Please wire me $25," it read in marvelously clear and unmistakably English. "Want to come home. Am sick."

Vincent says he hasn't sent the money, but he wants to locate his wife. He explains that this is the third time Margaret has deserted him. On the first and second occasions, Vincent received a wire from his wife, asking for funds. He forgave, and she returned. But Vincent says once and even twice can be endured—but the third time—it's something to think about.

So Vincent is going about his business in Baltimore and at the same time he's trying to find Margaret. He think she is using her maiden name, Margaret Gauteiri.

Conservatives and Liberals To Attack MacDonald Today

BY CHARLES M. McCANN.

London, October 7.—Dissolution of parliament and another general election, the third in three years, seem almost certain to be the outcome of the attack on the labor government which the conservative and liberal parties have promised to launch Wednesday afternoon.

One hour after parliament assembleas Wednesday, the conservative party will move a vote of censure against Premier MacDonald's government, in which will be voiced the dissatisfaction of the party with the action of the labor attorney general, who dropped the prosecution of a communist editor, who was alleged to have printed a seditious article in his paper.

The liberal party will immediately propose an amendment to the censure motion to provide for the appointment of a select committee to inquire into the discontinuance of the prosecution.

There are three possible results of the present political tangle.

Three Possible Results.

1.—If censured by adoption of the conservative amendment or the substitute proposed by the liberals, MacDonald may dissolve parliament and call a general election.

2—The premier may resign in favor of the conservatives, who would then proceed to form a government without the necessity of obtaining indorsement at the polls.

3—The liberals may be induced to withdraw their admendment and to vote with the government against the conservative motion of censure.

In the last-named case, the probable fall of the labor government would be postponed until the Anglo-Russian treaty comes up for consideration early in November, at which time it is expected that both opposition parties will combine to turn MacDonald out.

Dissolution and an immediate general election is the most logical result of the government's embarrassment. An assistant to King George conferred with MacDonald Tuesday, while the first secretary and the king himself are hastily returning from Scotland. The king's offices in a dissolution are essential, and it is believed that the premier has summoned him to London to be ready to act.

Repudiates Communism.

Earlier in the day, MacDonald had an opportunity at the annual conference of the labor party to state his position in regard to the drive which is to be made on the government Wednesday.

MacDonald's speech contained a bitter repudiation of communism, and when he sat down, the result of a card vote of members of the labor party throughout Britain on the proposition of affiliating with the communist party was announced.

Affiliation was rejected by a vote of 3,185,000 to 193,000. The conference then adopted resolutions excluding all communist candidates for office from labor indorsement.

MacDonald challenged his opponents to go through with their programs of censure and inquiry. His denunciation of the tactics of the liberals was so fierce that there hardly remained a doubt when he had finished that Wednesday's debate would end in a general election.

Less Than Third Of War Veterans Apply for Bonus

All Who Have Not Done So Requested To Make Application at Once.

Washington, October 7.—Only 1,300,000 applications out of a possible 4,500,000 have been received for the soldier bonus, and veterans who intend to apply for the adjusted compensation were urged to do so without delay by Major General Robert C. Davis, adjutant general of the army, in a statement today.

Of the applications received, 850,000 have been examined and about 400,000 have been passed and certificates for the amounts due forwarded to the veterans' bureau, which will make payments or otherwise compensate the veterans as the adjusted compensation law provides.

"It is imperative from the standpoint of economy in administration," said General Davis, who is in charge of the machinery for handling the application, "that those veterans who intend to avail themselves eventually of the benefits conferred by the act should make their application now. To extend the work over a period running up to January 1, 1928, the time limit in which applications can be made, can result only in a material increase in the cost of administration, which the war department is endeavoring to hold to a minimum."

JITNEY BUS HEAD ASKS INJUNCTION FOR WAR VETERANS

An effort to restrain the city of Atlanta from further interference with drivers of private commercial cars alleged to be "jitneys," operating between the city and the Southeastern fair grounds, will be heard before Judge George Bell, in Fulton superior court, at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

Petition seeking the injunction was filed late Tuesday by Attorney A. E. Wilson, acting for the Georgia Bus association. Filing of the petition follows arrest of 26 service car drivers on charges of violating the "jitney ordinance." All of the drivers were released on bond after their arrest.

"These drivers do not pretend to be operating 'jitneys' on the Southeastern fair route, and are not covered by 'jitney' bonds," declared Holt J. Gewinner, president of the association, in discussing the petition. "The 'jitney' signs on their cars have been removed or covered, which action immediately releases their bond as 'jitneys.'"

"All of these drivers are veterans of the world war and are operating on licenses granted them as disabled veterans," Gewinner continued. If necessary we will carry this case to the United States courts."

Cotton

Is Going to Market.

All over the cotton belt, loading platforms are piled high with "the staple of the South"; ready for shipment to the mills. The 1924 crop will bring millions of dollars to the growers, and the distribution of this money will benefit everybody.

Just at this time it is interesting to remember that U. S. Department of Agriculture figures for last year showed that the average farm price paid to the producer for 100 pounds of cotton, was $27.80; whereas, the railroads received an average of 66c for hauling each 100 pounds to market.

These figures indicate that in cotton, as in all other commodities, the freight rate represents a relatively small percentage of the cost, and is not a controlling factor in the determination of prices.

CITY CHARTER EXPERT WILL LECTURE HERE

Dr. A. R. Hatton, city charter expert, of Cleveland, will deliver two lectures here on October 22-29, with a view to stimulating interest in the securing of a new city charter for Atlanta, it was announced Tuesday by the Atlanta League of Women Voters.

Dr. Hatton, who also is a member of the faculty of Western Reserve university, in Cleveland, will deliver each morning during the week from 10 o'clock to 11 o'clock, an address on the subject of "City Government." From 8:30 until 9:30 each night he will speak on "State and County Government." All addresses will be made in the hall of the Connally building, corner of Poplar and Forsyth streets.

Tickets to the lectures are $2 for the series, it was announced, and may be procured at the league headquarters, 504 Connally building. Tickets will be sold league members at half price.

A number of local civic clubs have made donations of $10 each, according to the announcement, and members of these organizations will be admitted free of charge.

MOULTRIE MAN HEADS STATE CHIROPRACTORS

Dr. Clay L. Dean, of Moultrie, was elected president of the Chiropractic Examining board of the state at its semi-annual meeting at the state capitol Tuesday. Dr. W. E. Brown, of Newnan, was named vice president and Dr. M. E. Hall, of Columbus, secretary and treasurer. Other members of the board are Dr. J. D. Rust, of Macon and Dr. A. B. Smellie, of Atlanta. Dr. Smellie is a new member, having been recently appointed by Governor Walker for a 3-year term.

A number of applicants for licenses to practice as chiropractors in the state were examined after the meeting.

Recorder's Court Chiefs

Judge A. W. Calloway (above) was kept busy throughout Tuesday answering telephone messages from his many friends who called to congratulate him upon his election as city recorder, succeeding Judge George E. Johnson, deceased. Murphy M. Holloway (right) was kept equally busy receiving congratulations upon his election as recorder pro tem., the position held by Judge Calloway before his elevation by city council to the recordership.

The appointment was made at the national convention of the association, held last week in Dayton, Ohio.

BIG CHICAGO SCHOOL OPENS LOCAL OFFICES

The Walton School of Commerce, of Chicago, Ill., one of the best-known institutions of its kind in the United States, recently opened southeastern divisional headquarters in Atlanta, under the directorship of H. R. Payne.

The Atlanta offices, which will control the non-resident offices in eight southeastern states, are located at 406 Haas & Howell building. Mr. Payne, who has had many years of expeience in the educational field, will be assisted in his work here by Henry W. Todd, also prominent in educational circles.

While the Walton School of Commerce maintains its resident offices in Chicago alone, identically the same methods of instruction, which have made the school famous, are employed in the handling of the thousands of nonresident pupils. The courses of the Walton school are used in the leading universities of the country, such as Harvard, Boston Tech, University of California and the St. Louis university. Oglethorpe university also employs the Walton course in commerce.

Established 25 Years.

The Walton school was established nearly 25 years ago, in the early days of accounting instruction. At that time there was great need for a thorough and systematic method of instruction, but the literature existing was meager, and there were few American books. In order to permit the preparation of a course giving practical business training and specializing on subjects pertaining to accountancy, the Walton School of Commerce was organized by Seymour Walton and Charles H. Langer.

The work has been carried on, widening its scope each year, until the school has achieved a national reputation. Instruction through the nonresident offices has been declared valuable by many noted educators. The work of each student is carefully corrected and constructively criticised, and painstaking work on the part of the student is insisted upon.

Hunter Praises School.

Joel Hunter, chairman of the Georgia state board of examiners of public accountants, of Atlanta, in speaking of the Walton system, declared:

"I think your idea as to showing the students why their answers are wrong is an excellent one. I have long wished that I could find such a school worthy of my strong indorsement to the young men and boys of the southeastern states."

Charles H. Langer, is president of the school. The other officers are Warren J. Avery, treasurer, and B. L. Marsh, secretary. The faculty is comprised of 20 of the country's leading educators.

ATLANTES HEAR SHORT ADDRESSES AT WEEKLY MEET

At the luncheon Tuesday of The Atlantes Bobby Jones, the national golf champion, was the guest of honor and made a brief talk to the members. Other speakers were Dr. P. H. Jones, whose subject was "Dentistry," and H. D. Duff, a charter member of the Pittsburg Kiwanis club. Musical numbers were rendered by Kimo Kalohi, Hawaiian guitarist. Harry Parker presided as program chairman. The attendance prize was won by E. B. Ray.

D. J. Meyerhardt, president of the club, referred to the visit of the Shenandoah, and stated that he thought the Atlantes were largely responsible for Atlanta being included on the route through the campaign waged by them, with the cooperation of the senators, congressmen and trade bodies of Georgia, North and South Carolina and Virginia, to have the ZR-3 make a demonstration flight to Atlanta this fall.

The Bureau of Aeronautics previously had advised Atlantes that every consideration would be given to Atlanta's request, and that very likely the flight requested would be made after the preliminary short flights of the ZR-3 upon its delivery in this country. If the ZR-3 comes to Atlanta, it will probably remain over the city for some time.

REVIVAL SERVICES AT PAYNE MEMORIAL

Special Epworth league services will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock in connection with the revival meetings conducted by members of the Payne Memorial church, corner Hunnicutt and Lumpkin streets, it was announced Tuesday by W. J. Debardelaben, pastor. The revival began Sunday and will continue through October 19. Will Hill, prominent evangelist and lecturer, has charge of the services, with M. E. Brayer assisting in song services. This service will be the first of a series of special services to be held during the meeting. Next Tuesday a special service will be rendered for the railroad men of Atlanta and surrounding vicinity.

Not only the active members of the church have been attending but members of various other churches have united with them in making the revival a success, it is reported.

Street services are being held every night at the corner of Hunnicutt and Marietta streets at 7 o'clock.

MRS. GREER'S FUNERAL HELD IN BARNESVILLE

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna Murphy Greer, who died Monday night at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Ward Albertson, 212 Ponce de Leon avenue, were held Tuesday afternoon in Barnesville, where the body was carried Tuesday morning. Interment followed in Greenwood cemetery.

Mrs. Greer was a member of the Methodist church and had been active in church circles for many years.

RUSSELL TO SPEAK TO MONEY LENDERS AT MEETING HERE

Judge Richard B. Russell will be among the speakers Friday, October 10, at the regular meeting of the Georgia Industrial Lenders' association at the Atlanta Biltmore.

Other speakers will be A. B. Madison, president, and E. C. Steimle, secretary, who were recently delegates from the Georgia association to the convention of the American Industrial Lenders' association in Baltimore.

The feasibility of a clearing house for industrial lenders in this section will be discussed, it is stated.

WHEELER'S TORPID LIVER.

In an address to a Seattle, Washington, audience Monday, Senator Wheeler, of Montana, who is the tail of the La Follette kite, made a violent and wholly unwarranted attack on Secretary Work, of the Interior department. He charged that there had been, with Interior Secretary Work's approval, "a secret contract entered into between J. P. Morgan's Alaska steamship company on the one hand and the government-owned Alaska railroad on the other," which fixed divisions of freight rates between the two concerns on joint shipments. He exhibited a copy of the alleged contract which he said Senator La Follette had been unable to obtain from Secretary Work.

And what of it, if true?

It surely wasn't very "secret" or Senator Wheeler wouldn't have been able under any circumstances to have gotten, for political exhibition, a copy of such a contract; and if, as charged, Secretary Work refused to hand a copy of any contract over to Senator La Follette—whose punitive attacks on the government, first, and on the public utilities of this country, second, create a dangerous tendency toward revolution—for purely private use or for political clap-track misrepresentation, he is to be commended, and not censured.

As to any kind of a "secret" agreement regarding the Alaskan railroad and the steamship rate exchanges, however, Secretary Work very promptly disposed of the charge with the following terse and characteristic reply:

"In the first place, the senator is talking about transactions which occurred in the Interior department before I entered the office. Secondly, you can be sure that I never wrote any letter asking that anything be kept secret."

The facts are:

The government owns and operates a railroad in Alaska—unfortunately.

In the program for the development of that great country, subsequent to its coming under the control of this nation, such an undertaking became necessary.

It has long since proven, as did the government operation of the roads during the war, that the federal ownership policy of La Follette is as dangerous, and as destructive, as are the communistic dreams of the soviets who have brought the masses of Russia to a condition of distressing chaos.

At any rate, the method of traffic between Alaska and the parent country, with Canada situated as a bumper nation, is by rail and water, and it is absolutely impossible to conduct a serviceable railroad in Alaska without an agreement with the connecting steamship lines as to the rate differentials.

And yet, because he hopes to appeal to the prejudices of unthinking people by juggling with the name of "Morgan," and to create distrust of government by unsupported insinuations of bugaboos, and hidden economic ghosts, and all that sort of thing, this man who takes himself seriously enough to aspire to the vice presidency of a great nation, trots around the country endeavoring to tear down the faith of the people in their government, and thereby destroy—for selfish political purposes—what the fathers have so ably builded. It is a shame that politics can run to such a low ebb.

Senator Wheeler, who has, while yet a young man, reached a position of some national prominence from the humble pursuits of a book canvasser—much to his credit—has permitted his success to go to his head and also to his liver. In his insatiate appetite for publicity he has permitted himself to feed too heavily upon the "red" meats. He has become dangerously bilious.

Where there is corruption—and there has been plenty of it under the incumbent administration—it should be ascertained and punished. Public office does not give one immunity from the penalties prescribed by law for wrong-doing.

But the fact that the republican cabinet had its Fall, and the veterans' bureau its Forbes, does not give Wheeler or any other office-seeker a license to assassinate the characters of good and true men who are employed in government service.

DAVIS AT PRINCETON.

When John W. Davis, democratic candidate for president, spoke the other day in the Alexander chapel at Princeton he must have felt impelled to greater party strength, and inspired to renewed efforts for victory at the polls, for the success of the national democratic party since the civil war has been strongly enough linked to that historic spot. In the sixty years since the historic sixties of the last century the democratic party has had sixteen years, all told, of executive control of the government, eight of them under Grover Cleveland, who passed the last years of his life at Princeton as a trustee, and for some years a member of the faculty; and eight under Woodrow Wilson, who had long served in the faculty and as president of the great institution.

It was fitting that in that presence and atmosphere, with the spirit of America's greatest evangel of universal peace hovering about him, he should have taken the occasion again to pledge himself, if elected, to see to it that the United States shall be represented in any world conference on world disarmament that may be held in 1925. He referred to his desire to have the United States enter the league of Nations, but qualified it by the assertion that this would be useless unless desired by a majority of the nation's citizens.

Mr. Davis was peculiarly happy in his reference to the two former democratic presidents whose lives has been so closely associated with the life of Princeton.

He made one of the most powerful speeches of his campaign, and stirred the great student body to the highest pitches of enthusiasm for the cause of democracy, and for the cause of the unity of all nations.

CUBA SEEKS REVISION.

The Havana cables indicate that the government of Cuba, shortly after the election, will seek a complete revision of the existing reciprocity treaty with the United States.

The reason, as assigned, is that with the benefit to Europe the reparations act is supposed to produce, the existing arrangement could be modernized to fit modern conditions with outstanding benefits to both nations.

Reciprocal additions to the free lists of commodities, it is said, will be proposed, as also modifications of the preferential features of the present treaty.

The Cubans will naturally seek a reduction of the sugar tariff provided in the Fordney-McCumber bill; and this will be opposed by the republican protectionists who are after "protecting" the beet sugar refining combination, at the expense of the millions of sugar consumers.

The story of how the tariff commission has temporized with the investigation—ordered by the senate more than two years ago—of the sugar situation in this country, including the retail prices, is familiar to all students of governmental commissions and omissions.

The president is "playing for time" with that problem now under the pressure of an outraged public, and in a white house conception of political expediency.

Cuban growers contend that American beet sugar goes largely to the western and coastal states, with little or no competition from Cuban sugar, the major part of which, they say, goes to the eastern and southern states.

Fully 70 per cent of Cuba's imports are obtained from the United States, while over 80 per cent of her exports, and approximately 80 per cent of her sugar crop, go to this country. In 1923 Cuba ranked second in the imports of the United States, being exceeded only by Canada. In the same year Cuba occupied sixth place among more than 80 countries to which American goods were exported. The only countries which bought more than Cuba were the United Kingdom, Canada, Germany, France and Japan.

The treaty of reciprocity existing between the United States and Cuba has been the law governing the commercial relations since 1903, and there is no doubt that it will be to the interest of both nations to bring the treaty up to date to meet the new conditions incident to the post-war business reconstruction of the world.

Now, if the weather man will be good, we may be able to enjoy some of the Indian summer we took from the Indians.

If Bergdoll is in this country, as reported, he has probably retired to a safety storm pit.

Mountain Town Talks.

(W. B. Townsend, in Dahlonega Nugget.)

It matters not how many laws are made against liquor it does not change people's "taster" for it any more than you can a cat's for catnip.

The mountain moonshiners also had to suspend work on account of the continuous wet weather. If they had rain-proof quarters like those who manufacture liquor in Atlanta they could have gone right on with their work.

Last Saturday we contributed $5 for a good cause. In less than thirty minutes we opened our letters at the postoffice and found four different checks all for a neat sum. So you see that it pays to make a good gift, saying nothing about the extra star put in a fellow's crown and a whole lot of other blessings that follow.

Some members of the church will come or go twenty-five, seventy-five miles, even farther, to a ball game or dance in all kinds of weather. "Swing your corners" has taken the place of the Lord's Prayer. It is no trouble to raise forty or fifty dollars and upwards for a dance, or one hundred or more for athletics. Yet it is a difficult matter to get the preachers' salaries. Why, it took nearly two years to raise enough money to build a pair of steps to one of the churches.

An Autumn Fancy.

I.

Out of the north, out of the west,
Never weary, never at rest,
Bleak blows the wind and strong,
Red leaves flutter and fly astray;
In his basso profundi way
He sings his autumn song,
And with him comes the rain,
Chanting his soft refrain.

II.

In the sky not a spot of blue
I see, where the sun could peep through,
Clouds seem heavy as lead;
No songbird sings, nor can I see,
Dismal the garden looks to me,
A lone rose bows her head,
She grieves and weeps in vain
In the wind and the rain.

III.

O sad Rose, I see by your grief,
Wind, rain and the fall of the leaf,
That the winter is near.
So sang the wild wind in its song,
Winter, grim winter would, ere long,
Be the lord of the year;
Fear not, angels will bring,
After Winter, the Spring.

A Hairpin Adventure.

"Saved By a Hairpin" would be the proper title for this story, by William Southern, in The Independence Examiner—

"Human ingenuity will probably find something to take the place of the wire hairpin for the convenience of buttoning shoes, picking locks and other things for which a hairpin is valuable. Once I was stranded in the woods in a Ford. It was near midnight and the fan belt broke. We were near a cemetery and could hear the hoot owls calling and could see the ghosts walking about through the graveyard between the white stones. Something had to be done, and done quickly. Mrs. E. P. Milbank, of Chillicothe, was in the party, in fact we were rescuing her, and she produced a wire hairpin with which I mended the fan belt and we were saved."

Today's Talk

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ARE YOU LONELY?

Don't mind too much about being lonely for there are more lonely people in this world that any other kind.

Loneliness is spiritual hunger. Hunger of the spirit as of the body. With our bodies, however, there is a clearer understanding as to the method of satisfying this hunger.

We know so much more about our bodies, too, than we do of our souls.

Loneliness is spiritual hunger. The heart warming and wanting another heart near to share its warmth.

And the greater the spirit of the individual the greater the loneliness and hunger. How lonely the great men of the world have been as a rule. History is spotted with the stories of these strivers for food that might satisfy their inmost craving.

But the inspiring thing about those who have been so lonely during their life is that they have fed so many others with the very substance that they most hoped for and seemed to so lack.

Maybe this is the explanation of greatness after all—giving to others the beauty and sweetness of yourself as the lonely flower gives its fragrance to the world about it while all the time wanting the world to come and talk with it.

I read the other day of a famous American who met a close companion on the street and upon inquiring where he was going received this reply: "To see a friend." "Please let me go, too," the American replied, "I want to meet one."

I have thought of this little incident much of late. For to meet a friend is to understand quite a bit about heaven.

Tchitcherin and La Follette.

A newspaper in the United States capital says that recognition of the union of soviet republics would mean a surrender to communism. The same paper insinuates that Mr. Tchitcherin is giving out interviews to help Senator La Follette in his campaign for president. Mr. Tchitcherin, who proved himself no fool at the conference at Genoa, is not likely to be so anxious to help Senator La Follette. Tchitcherin's political school has a party of its own in this country. It's not much of a party and it has little influence. But it's here and its candidate for the presidency is William Z. Foster. If Georges Tchitcherin gives out interviews to help any candidate in the United States, we may reasonably expect that he will favor his own "comrades." If not, Mr. Tchitcherin would have to face the discipline of the Third Internationale at Moscow. Moreover, to the reds Mr. La Follette is less acceptable than Mr. Coolidge. Coolidge they call an out-and-out reactionary, the enemy without disguise. La Follette is a so-called yellow liberal, who uses their phraseology to delude the workers. And as to surrendering to communism! Has England or Holland, Scandinavia or Germany had any ill-effects from recognizing the soviet government? It's strange to what illogical arguments and misleading statements a political campaign will lead men.

"Interesting—If True."

Paris is excited and worried. Conferences are held in the war department and in the air ministry's offices. Rumor has it that a few nights ago a fleet of German airplanes, flying at an immense altitude, passed over the French capital, went as far as the channel coast and returned to Germany. Wireless stations picked up their signals to each other, it is said. But the government gives little credence to the rumors after due investigation. Where would the Germans get the planes? How could they keep such plans secret? The air has given rise to many mysterious stories before. During the war it was said that German aviators carried with them a picture projection machine and flying above the Russian lines at night, threw a picture of the Madonna and child on the clouds above the German lines. The Russian soldiers, seeing the immense sign in the skies, refused to fight against an army protected by the Queen of Heaven herself and laid down their arms to the Germans. It's a good story, and interesting if true, as city editors are in the habit of saying.

Herriot and The Monks.

Premier Herriot has received a letter signed by the six cardinals of France asking him to use moderation in respect to his plans in Alsace-Lorraine and in other religious questions. Herriot recently announced that he would strictly enforce the existing laws against religious orders and also that he would abolish religious education in Alsace. The French ambassador at the vatican is to be recalled and the papal nuncio at Paris is to return to Rome. Herriot reasons from the standpoint that the vatican represents a spiritual power and not a temporal one. France though is a temporal power and cannot have dealings nor accept the discipline of a power that considers itself supreme. In regard to the religious communities the French premier is warned to be wary. The members of these orders showed their patriotism during the war, he is told. But another matter to be considered is the danger that religious communities leave the country. To the liqueur industry and the lace industry this would be a heavy blow. When the separation of church and state came about before the war under Premier Viviani, the monks of Chartreux, distillers of the famous Chartreuse, left the country and went to Holland. They took with them the secret formula of the delicious "aperatif." This has meant to France a loss of 22 million francs a year in export values. The suit of the French republic against the monks for the recovery of their formula is still in the courts.

Winston Churchill Comes Back.

Winston Churchill, war correspondent, writer, leader of the Antwerp expedition that cost England 75,000 soldiers and accomplished nothing, originator of the Dardanelles and Gallipoli expedition that cost Australia and New Zealand 300,000 soldiers and accomplished nothing, is again candidate for parliament. This time as a conservative. Formerly he appeared as a liberal. But this time he is showing that he really understands the trend of the times. In the future there will be a new alignment of parties in England and probably also in other countries. It will be socialism against conservatism. In that struggle liberalism is slowly grinding away. Some of the adherents of the liberal party will join the ranks of labor and others will go into the conservative phalanx. It is something that comes as a natural consequence of circumstances, the iron march of economic history. And Winston shows that he has, at least this time, rightly understood the situation.

For the Sake of Propaganda.

Bishop Brown, writer of a very contradictory book, who recently faced a trial for heresy, is going to appeal from the decision of his fellow bishops, who found him guilty of heresy. Why the bishop wants to avoid being denied membership in the church and the house of bishops must seem a riddle when we know that his motto is: "Banish gods from the sky and capitalists from the earth." He knows that the church will demand of him to "contend earnestly for the faith once for all delivered to the saints." That's the church's position and mission. If the bishop does not agree with that he should not object to leave, we may be inclined to think. Ah, but there is a reason after all. When the bishop repeats after Karl Marx: "Religion is the opium of the people," he bares the reason. When he has the sickle and hammer, soviet emblems, engraved on the cover of his pamphlets, he shows at the same time why he wants to stay. Bishop Brown is a communist. To a communist the church, the bourgeois parliament, the city council, the rate-payers' meeting are all valuable instruments of propaganda. You don't need to take part in deliberations on some subject or other under discussion, but you have a voice and that voice can always say something about the blessings of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. McINTYRE

New York, October 7.—They trapped one of Broadway's biggest spenders, wanted on a criminal charge, in a tiny walk-up apartment in Harlem the other day. He had been hiding away for a month while the shrewdest detectives sought him.

It is axiomatic among criminals that the best place in the world to hide is in New York. And it is. Yet nearly all criminals are captured because they overlook the first lesson in detective work: "Cherchez la femme!"

This man had many Broadway loves. He spent $250,000 a year in the cabarets and cafes but when cards turned against him out of all those upon whom he had squandered fortunes only one showed any degree of loyalty.

Detectives working on the "Look for the woman!" theory found out the address of every woman to whom he had paid attention. A sleuth was detained for each one of them and instructed never to let them out of sight.

One night one left her apartment heavily veiled. She took a taxi to a subway station, boarded an uptown express, doubled back downtown and took an elevated train. It was all done with a rush but she never got out of his sight.

And he followed her to the tiny apartment where her fugitive sweetheart was hiding. He who had tasted of the sweets of Broadway was alone—trembling from indulgence in liquor. All his fair-weather friends had shunned him. His bank roll consisted of 95 cents.

This is the inevitable toll Broadway exacts from those who stem the whirlpool. And the laughing waters mock the lips of those who sink. Men have been able to play Broadway a night or so at intervals and survive, but those who make Broadway a habit are invariably losers.

New York has several lost streets. Shinbone Alley is one. It is tucked away downtown and seems unconscious of the world about it. It is shabby and run down at heel. The criss crossing of clothes lines from house to house suggests ships aloft and there is enough canvas strung on them to send a barkentine spanking along. Many washwomen live in Shinbone Alley. There is the pungent odor of suds and the smell of cabbage cooking.

Then, too, there is Cherry Lane, where city dwellers have fled for a little of quiet. Away back it bloomed with cherry blossoms. It is the home of Edna St. Vincent Millay, the poet. Where there was once an old malt house there is now the Cherry Lane playhouse with a smart little porte-cochere. Many sculptors live there, quite a few painters and a novelist or so. A few years ago a single cherry tree stood in Cherry Lane, but it was cut down. It was old, gnarled and a bit passe.

The other day I visited a man held in the psychopathic ward of Bellevue. He had been untrussed by booze and for three days was in the straight jacket. He had been a friend of other days—a clear-eyed, manly fellow with much ambition.

"What made you take to hard drinking?" I asked.

"Because I was a damn fool," he replied.

I don't know how it will impress others but it struck me as being a sermon straight from the shoulder. Truth without frills.

The venerable orderlies about hospitals are odd characters. Each hospital has them. They like the Cherry Lane tree are old, gnarled and a bit passe and New York in its usual fashion passes them by. They are very comforting to the sick.

An Atlanta Attorney Suggests "Department Of Public Service."

Editor Constitution: The public service corporations, companies and firms of the United States have reached such gigantic proportions in their power (aggregate wealth) to set prices when they buy and set prices when they sell, that the public is no match for them, unorganized as it is. If these interests want a protective tariff law passed they fill Washington with the ablest lawyers and shrewd laymen (lobbyists) to see that they get what they want. These lieutenants are very able and capable men, with power to make the unwary congressmen believe that black is white and white is black, as it may suit their clients.

These predatory interests are few in number, and, therefore can act with great unity and celerity of purpose. The public, unorganized, cannot withstand them.

When the railroads and steamship companies of the country wish a raise in freight and passenger rates they file petitions with the interstate commerce commission. The applications are set for a hearing and notice is given to the public, through the public press. When the time comes to hear the petitions the railroads and steamship companies are there with their able attorneys and expert rate agents to show that their requests are entirely right and the people are frequently not represented at all, and if so, it is by one or two or a few men with no adequate preparation and equipment to meet the petitioners. The consequences are the raises are, generally, granted. The interstate commerce commissioners are but flesh and blood and it is but natural that they act on the evidence adduced before them. The commission sits as a court and is supposed to be moved by the greater weight of evidence produced.

The public service corporations, located in the several states of the union, frequently wish to raise large sums of money, ostensibly, to make improvements on their lines and plants. They file the usual petitions with the public service commissions and ask the privilege of issuing stocks and bonds (watered stock often), in many cases a gamble, on unborn populations. Notice is given and the applications are set for a hearing. The petitioners appear with ample facts and figures to convince the commissioners that their requests are very reasonable, in the absence of any organized fight to the contrary. Hence, the public are the loosers if the petitions are without merit.

The public service corporations located in the several states of the union frequently wish to increase their rates, such as fares on street car lines, rates of telephone companies, gas rates and such like. Notice is given as usual after petitions are filed and when the hearing comes up the petitioners are on the job with proofs sufficient to usually get an order granting their requests.

The United States ought to create a "department of public service," which should have a secretary. The secretary should be a cabinet officer and a lawyer of great ability and of unsullied honesty and integrity, with as many assistants as might be necessary. This department should be served with copies of all petitions and pleadings filed by these public service corporations. This department should have power to file such answers and defenses as might be necessary to protect the public and have power to subpoena witnesses, rate experts and in general make defense and thus protect the public and not let these petitioners have an order or judgment by default. Of course where the petitions are meritorious they should have an order or judgment in the affirmative.

This department should see that the anti-trust laws are not violated and thus prevent monopolies.

Each state in the union should have a "department of public service" to protect the people in the several states.

These "departments of public service" should be required to be vigilant and see that the anti-trust laws are not violated. If the trusts could be made to obey the anti-trust laws then the natural laws of supply and demand would obtain and the high cost of living would come down. Then the people would be prosperous and happy and the predatory interests of the country would not be more powerful than the states and the federal government.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

MIGHT AS WELL BE SENSIBLE.

A reader telling of his unhappy experience in shopping around for a "reasonable" specialist to do something any ordinary doctor can do well enough, exclaims, when the third specialist canvassed named a fee higher than either of the others: "Then I got mad and decided the less I saw of doctors the longer I would live."

The same day a young woman wrote me how she made it her rule to "think health."

And crossing on the ferry that afternoon, early in the rainy season, two darkies were singing, with guitar and banjo accompaniment, "It Ain't Gonna Rain No Mo'."

As though that were not enough, almost the first letter I opened this morning was from a gentleman who has evidently made an extensive study of fishiology, for he assures me that there is no miles every day to get oxygen—one has only to devote about four minutes every morning to the practice of deep breathing before the open window. Just why the open window is always featured in this fool performance I have never learned, but I reckon the fishical culture magazine mail order health expert who first marketed this particular bit of hokum included the open window as part of the scenery.

Well, it all struck me as a kind of epidemic of near psychology. Pollyanna psychology. That "grin and win" stuff—smile, you halfwit, smile!

Within rational limitations I believe in psychology, yet it seems to me that those darkies iterating and reiterating in tuneful harmony that cessation of the equeous precipitation was imminent, really had no appreciable influence upon the weather. The chap who undertakes to absorb more oxygen by the simple expedient of breathing more deeply for a few moments—before an open window—could as readily hoist himself out of the window and over the house by pulling on his own bootstraps. The young woman who "thinks health," reminds us of the boy who endeavored to plow a straight furrow by keeping his eye on a cow across the creek; our popular magazines fairly seethe with bait which the fishiologists offer to the unwary. That reader who resentfully decided that the less he saw of doctors the longer he would live ought to read some of the brief and tragic biographies of the great army of consumptives who have recklessly set out on that very course.

It is fitting to quote here a passage from "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mrs. Baker Glover Eddy:

"Until the advancing age admits the efficiency and supremacy of mind, it is better to leave surgery and the adjustment of broken bones and dislocations to the fingers of a surgeon, while you confine yourself chiefly to mental reconstruction and the prevention of inflammation. Christian science is always the most skillful surgeon, but surgery is the branch of its healing which will be last acknowledged. However, it is but just to say that the author has already in her possession well authenticated records of cure, by herself and her students, through mental surgery alone, of dislocated joints and spinal vertebrae."

There, now, let's try to be sensible and not carry this phycho-polly-analogy too for.

Safety Council Official Points Out Responsibility

Editor Constitution: Who is responsible for accidents? During the past ten days the writer had an opportunity to hear this question of responsibility discussed by parents, teachers, safety engineers, chiefs of police and many others and it was agreed that the responsibility could not be placed on any one group. That each of us, man or woman, white or colored, parent or teacher, citizen or officer, must assume the charge given us and acknowledge that "I am my brother's keeper." Until this responsibility is accepted we shall continue to be shocked by the daily toll of the "unavoidable accident."

Colonel Forrest Braden, head of the police department of Louisville, Ky., answered the question very well for the law-enforcement group when he said, "the people will get just as much protection by the police as they want." "If the people want a strict enforcement of law, the police will give them that enforcement. If they want the courts to uphold the letter of the law they will not be satisfied when cases are dismissed or settled on the payment of 'costs.'"

The Atlanta police, I believe, are giving our citizens good protection. Many of them are honestly concerned over the situation. But are our citizens backing up the police? Are they insisting that the letter of the law be carried out by the officers and by the courts? When we show the police that we are cooperating with them—then we will find that they have been cooperating with us all along.

The solution of the accident problem is not all law enforcement or law observance. We must accept our responsibility. That the parents and teachers have more responsibility than the officers is apparent. The police have little opportunity to assist in the education of the child. Several of the casualties last week were children under the school age. Have the parents of these little ones taught them how to protect themselves? Have these parents recognized their very real responsibility?

That the women's clubs and Parent-Teacher associations accept this responsibility was very plainly demonstrated at the National Safety Congress, held in Louisville last week. Mrs. John T. Sherman, president, General Federation of Women's Clubs, outlined a very complete program in connection with the local safety councils, which she is urging all state and local organizations to adopt. Mrs. Arthur Watkins, representing the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations, presented the program of her organization, which closely followed Mrs. Sherman's plan. And the most striking point in both addresses was the education of the child of pre-school age in the avoidance of accidents.

The street accident is not the only one to which we must give attention. Our homes are contributing a large portion of the 17,000 accidental deaths estimated for 1924. In Atlanta one-third of the accidental deaths this year occurred in the homes, whereas the automobile figured in about one-fifth.

However, the accident figures will not be reduced by spasmodic effort; either by the police, the newspapers, the parents or the teachers, but when all these forces combine in a steady drive against thoughtlessness and carelessness, then, and then only will we find our city leading the country with the smallest number of accidental deaths.

ATLANTA SAFETY COUNCIL,
George Deibert, Secretary.

"They Don't Keep Pee-Wees in Judges' Chambers"

An odd mixture is the Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, as I found out when I inquired about him after Senator Caraway alleged that it had been found wise to suppress one of the secretary's campaign speeches. Now, of course, any one who would write a political speech that was indiscreet is interesting and unusual. The thing that is impressed upon every young campaign speaker when he first ascends the stump is to be safe. And ever afterward all through through his long career he is told, "Be safe!" A little bird—a pee-wee, according to General Dawes—tells him what words not to use. The pee-wee may be described as the politician's conscience. Now, could a man rise through all the lower offices in California up to cabinet rank and never have heard the whisper of the pee-wee? One who could interests me strangely.

I don't usually pay much attention to secretaries of the navy, secretaries of war, secretaries of the interior, secretaries of commerce and secretaries of labor. Tim Sullivan used to say, "They tie horses to congressmen in Washington." So they may tie horses to cabinet officers of lower rank for all me. But when one of them has never heard the still small voice of the pee-wee I want to know him. I find that Secretary Wilbur has carried through life an extraordinary simplicity, kindness and candor. He loves children as perhaps few other men in this land love them. Pee-wee or no pee-wee, there is something awfully right about a man who gives his heart to children as Mr. Wilbur does. In California, sitting on the bench, he was always giving vast parties to Sunday school children and to orphans. He writes children's stories which are published in the press, a sort of Pacific coast Joel Chandler Harris. I speak of intent rather than literary quality, for I have never read these stories. I suppose that's the key to it. A man who writes and talks to children doesn't have to listen to the pee-wee. Children can stand the truth. It is only grown-ups who cannot.

You may think it is odd that a man who loves children and writes for them should also talk readily of cold steel and hot lead. But no, there is this contradiction in him and nature that the gentlest folk are always the least pacifistic, at least in language. Mr. Wilbur has come up through life retaining an odd unworldliness, as every one does who retains a deep sympathy for children. He has been a district judge and then chief judge of the supreme court of California. Service on the bench does not make one a good politician. Evidently they don't keep a pee-wee in judges' chambers.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Any reader may obtain a personal reply to any answerable question of fact or information by writing to Washington Bureau, Atlanta Constitution, 1322 New York avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C., enclosing 4 cents in stamps. Legal, medical and marital advice can not be given, nor can extended research be undertaken. Unsigned letters can not be answered. All letters are confidential.

Is Eleanor Glyn married?

Yes, she is Mrs. Clayton Glyn.

1913, New York; 1914, Boston; 1915, Philadelphia; 1916, Brooklyn; 1917, New York; 1918, Chicago; 1919, Cincinnati; 1920, Brooklyn; 1921, New York; 1922, New York; 1923, New York.

Can you give the names of the naval officers who are assigned to the command of the president's yacht, Mayflower?

Captain Adelphus Andrews, Lieutenant Commander John S. Meigs, Lieutenant Lloyd J. Wiltsie, Lieutenant T. De Witt Carr, Lieutenant Ralph U. Hyde, Lieutenant Thomas J. Ryan, Lieutenant Commander Joel T. Boone, medical corps; Lieutenant M. M. Smith, supply corps; Lieutenant Edgar Allen Poe, Jr., U. S. marine corps.

Can you give some idea of the sizes of molecues and atoms?

In a single cubic centimeter of air—a globule about the size of a small marble—there are 30,000,000 molecules. And since the molecule is a group or cluster of atoms, the atom itself is smaller. Atoms differ very greatly from each other in size and weight. It is perhaps sufficient to say that some of them are so small that it would take 400,000,000 of them in a line, to cover an inch of space; and that it takes at least a quintillion atoms of gold to weigh a single grammo. Five million atoms of helium could be placed in a line across the diameter of the period at the end of this sentence.

When were Ethel and John Barrymore born?

Ethel Barrymore, born August 15, 1879; John Barrymore born February 15, 1882.

How many docks and what size are they at Liverpool, England?

There are 65 docks with a water area of 600 acres, and 22 graving docks at Liverpool.

What book had the greatest success of any book of American fiction?

"Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Are there any successful means of producing artificial rainfall? In other words, are the claims of any "rainmakers" justified?

Professor Humphreys, of the United States weather bureau says: "I can assure you that none of the proposals for rain-making and cloud-killing that have yet come to the attention of the weather bureau are of any practicable use, and we are confident from experience of the past that no such panacea is yet in sight."

Are high schools graduates (without a college education) eligible for any positions in the United States geological survey?

Yes, they are eligible for positions that do not require technical training and experience. The best plan is to write to the civil service commission, Washington, D. C., specifying what kind of position you desire, and asking for full information on the next examinations for such positions.

Give me a recipe for making nut pralines?

Take 17-8 cups powdered sugar; 1 cup maple syrup, 2 cups hickory nut or pecan meats, cut in pieces; 1-2 cup cream. Boil first two ingredients with the cream until, when tried in cold water, a soft ball may be formed. Remove from fire and beat until of a creamy consistency; add nuts, and drop from tip of spoon in small piles on buttered paper, or mixture may be poured into a buttered tin and cut into squares, using a sharp knife.

What is the proper drier for shellac?

Pure white shellac never requires a drier. It dries through evaporation of the solvent (alcohol).

Do brothers and sisters of a naturalized American citizen have a right to come to this country without regard to the quotas from their country of birth?

No, they can only come as any other immigrant, subject to the quota restrictions.

What does "In Hoc Signo Vinces" mean?

"By this sign thou wilt conquer."

When did the British airship fly to America, where did it start and where did it land, what was the distance covered, what was the time of the trip coming and going back?

The British dirigible R-34 flew from East Fortune, Scotland to Mineola, L. I., New York, in July, 1919. It covered the distance 3,130 miles in 108 hours, 12 minutes and returned from Mineola to Pullman, England, 2,200 miles, in 74 hours and 56 minutes.

Does the zebra belong to the horse family or not?

Yes, the zebra is the African striped species of the horse family.

Is the business of life insurance on a purely scientific basis?

Life insurance, when properly conducted, is not a speculative or hazardous enterprise, but an exact science controlled and regulated by actuarial computations. The two fundamental requirements are a reliable mortality table and as assumed rate of interest to be used in computing the earning power of a company's reserves. From these two factors, the net cost of the insurance is mathematically figured. The table of mortality furnishes a means of making definite estimates in advance. The table which is in general use in the United States as in the American experience table.

What are the college colors of the colleges from which President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge graduated?

President Coolidge's college is Amherst; Mrs. Coolidge's is University of Vermont. Amherst's colors are white and purple; Vermont's are green and gold.

What is the longest glove fight on record?

At New Orleans, La., 7 hours and 19 minutes (110 rounds) between A. Bowen and J. Burke—a draw, April 6, 1893. Three-minute rounds.

Milner Writes About 'Machine-Ridden System'

Editor Constitution: In an interview published October 1, Governor Walker calls upon the state convention, which is to convene in Macon on October 8, to strike for the state a note of political harmony, and the people are advised to "let the dead past bury its dead politically."

The governor's interview is quite interesting, and in spirit expresses what I believe is Georgia's immediate need, but, whether he realizes it or not, what he is trying to do cannot be accomplished because of the most serious stumbling block that has ever been in the way of Georgia's progress. We shall not accomplish the purpose the governor outlines for us until the people free the state from the machine-ridden, system-controlled state government as it now exists in Georgia. I am not speaking theoretically, but of a condition of state affairs now in practical operation in Georgia—a condition which I am now, and have been doing, my utmost to aid in removing.

After the adjournment of the convention in Macon this month, the next public matter of greatest importance to Georgia will be the organization of the general assembly in 1925. Assuming that the people in November will ratify a constitutional amendment providing for biennial sessions, that organization will usher in a new order of things for the legislative branch of our government. It occurs to me that, quoting the governor, "there is no better time" for the people to demand the free and untrammeled organization of the next general assembly than now, and yet I know of my own knowledge that the state's most gigantic, and thus far most successful political machine already has put the full weight of its enormous power on the composition of the next legislature, as it has done in the past, and is turning its political screws on the people's representatives. Without mincing words, the state department of agriculture is now engaging itself in directing the organization of the next general assembly. The tentacles of that department reach into every county in Georgia, and the pressure of its influence has been felt in practically every political race in Georgia for a long time. Its influence for the past several years has been exerted on the Georgia general assembly—sometimes openly and in a rather flaunted manner.

That is the stumbling block in the way of the accomplishment of what Governor Walker is asking for. So long as this form of machine domination continues, so long as an administrative department of the state government continues to dominate and control, in a large measure, the legislative branch of the state government, just so long will it be impossible to "let the dead past bury its dead politically." There can be no dead past so long as self-perpetuating political machinery continues to operate. When that state of affairs is brought about in which the separate branches of the government operate as the constitution of the state directs they should, in that period when each of the branches of the government exercises only the powers delegated to it by the constitution, and one branch ceases its constitutionally inhibited encroachment upon the functions of another branch, then and then only will come a time when we can see that "the dead past buries its dead politically," and the people of Georgia can "turn their faces to the east" and move towards bringing material progress to the state.

We cannot reach that state of governmental life so long as a political machine in one branch of the government employs its state-given life toward the domination and control of another branch of the government to the practical exclusion of those functions set apart for it, and for which that department was created. We cannot reach that state of governmental existence so long as the agricultural department, for its own selfish purposes, asserts itself to control the organization of the general assembly, the committee assignments, the manner in which legislative measures shall be referred for consideration, and maintains in legislative season and out the most perfect lobby this or any other state has ever seen for the purpose of controlling not only the organization of the legislature, but the actions of the general assembly after it has been organized.

These statements are not based on theory. They are not of the "they say" nature. They are not statements made from gossip. They are facts as down as they actually exist. They are, in part only, experiences now actually being gone through in the processes leading up to the organization of the next general assembly, and they lead directly to the conclusion, again quoting

BRYAN STRESSES HONESTY ISSUE

Newton, Kan., October 7.—Restoration of honesty, efficiency and economy in government, and support of John W. Davis, democratic presidential candidate "that great progressive democrat," were urged in an address here today by Governor Bryan of Nebraska.

The democratic vice presidential candidate spoke before a large audience of farmers and wage-earners in the city auditorium. He attacked "dishonesty," corruption and graft in Washington," and declared "these three things have caused more discontent, more bolshevism and more reds than anything else.' '

"Honesty is the foundation upon which representative government must rest," he said. "Honesty," he added, "is something that affects every individual—honesty of purpose, honesty of mind, honesty of heart and honesty in the home."

That kind of government had been existing in his home city of Lincoln, Governor Bryan said. Regarding his home state, Mr. Bryan explained in detail the reason for going into the coal and gasoline business and told how he reduced the cost of ice, gas and electricity.

"Labor," Mr. Bryan said, referring to Mr. Davis, "finds it advocates this year, the very man who helped win the 8-hour law and the very man who protected the laboring man's right and preserved the 8-hour law in the highest court in the land."

Business Man Sings Praises

"I suffered for years with stomach trouble and gas continually. Doctors thought I had stomach ulcers or cancer. After last attack they advised going to Rochester, Minn., for an operation. A friend advised trying Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, which I did, and I cannot sing its praises too highly, as I can now eat anything and everything." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Beauties and Beasts Feature Southeastern Fair

One of the Tuesday features was the appearance of the Fair School boys in community singing. This school composed of two boys from every county in Georgia is one of the big annual features. The boys are brought to the fair, are shown the great exhibits of cattle, swine and poultry and are taught the fine points of judging stock. They also hear lectures by the state's ablest agricultural authorities who discuss various farm topics before them.

Diverfisied Exhibits.

The agricultural exhibits in the agricultural hall are attracting wide attention. Apples and apple culture seem to be starring in this hall and the Georgia apple displays are the best ever seen at the fair. The Consolidated Apple Growers' Exchange of Cornelia offers three beautiful displays and also has a large apple stand on the midway. Several counties from other states also feature apples, while some of the individual exhibitors have varied displays.

Among the most popular exhibits in the agricultural hall are those of various counties in the south. Fulton county has a pretty exhibit which shows that this county is well adapted for agricultural purposes despite the fact that it contains the largest city in the southeast.

Among the other counties which have great exhibits are Monroe county, Ga. Haywood county, N. C. Spalding county, Ga., Newton county, Ga., Montgomery county, Ala., Campbell, county, Ga., Clayton county Ga., Lamar county, Ga., Treutlen county, Ga., and Worth county, Ga.

Many County Displays.

The county exhibits all contain varied displays of corn, cotton, oats, rye, wheat, canned fruits, melons, apples, hay, sugarcane, home-cured meats potatoes and other vegetables.

Among the prettiest individual exhibits are those of Mrs. C. A. Parsons, Ramer, Ala., winner of second prize last year; E. J. Howell, Waynesville, N. C., Empire Farm & Nursery company; P. E. Reid, Forest Park, Ga.; W. P. Naftel, Naftel, Ala.; D. L. Patrick, Griffin, Ga., and the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railway.

Two attractive exhibits of honey are found in the displays of J. W. Wilder, Waycross, and John W. Cash, Bogart, Ga. The Columbus creamery has a beautiful exhibit featuring the cow made of butter shown in a large refrigerator.

Tuesday was "Rogers day" among the employees of the Rogers stores who flocked in large numbers to the fair. They made their headquarters in the monster Rogers exhibit in the automobile building.

Rubin and Cherry Score.

Again the Rubin and Cherry shows scored an instantaneous hit with the visitors who expressed the opinion that this aggregation is the prettiest and best ever seen at the Southeastern fair. The shows enjoyed a rush almost all day and far into the night, while the rides were crowded with fun-lovers almost continuously.

Another hit was scored Tuesday night by the Passing Revue and fashion show given in front of the grand stand, under the direction of Miss Nellie Sullivan. The pageant is offered in a picturesque setting with the lake as a background. Boats bearing multicolored lights, sweep over the background as about 500 people take part in the dances on the stage. The lighting effects are beautiful and the pageant is hailed as a successor to the usual routine of free acts which heretofore have been displayed in front of the grandstand.

Much approval has been won at the fair by the negroes in their exhibit. The schools of Atlanta all have displays and exhibits entered in the tent occupied by the negroes and some of them are really wonderful displays. Visitors have given universal commendation to the negro exhibit, both for the high merit of the displays and for the manner in which the exhibit tent is handled and managed.

The machinery display occupying the territory used last year for the Ford exhibit is coming in for a share of approval. Many of the leading machinery manufacturers of the country have entered their products. Many of the machines are kept running and offer a pretty effect for the visitors to this part of the grounds.

Stock shows, pig shows and the poultry show are coming in for much attention from the crowd, particularly from out-of-town visitors. The displays this year measure well up to the high standard set by the Southeastern fair and some prize-winning animals from all parts of the south are shown.

The stock-judging team of the Agricultural and Mechanical college of Mississippi was awarded the prize offered this year by the Southeastern Fair association for the most competent live-stock-judging team.

HUGE SLUSH FUND IS LA FOLLETTE CLAIM

norant and discontented element, openly organized for battle.

White House Is Included.

The White House itself, La Follette charged, is not free from the "conspiracy" to buy the election.

"The White House—the official home of all the great presidents of the United States, the symbol of the nation's government—is to be drawn into this huge conspiracy to corrupt a nation," he said.

C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge, "is the man who, it appears, is likely to be selected to handle this huge slush fund to buy the election for Calvin Coolidge," La Follette said.

His wire to Borah said:

"I ask that you immediately call together committee on campaign expenditures and conduct thorough investigation of plans of republican national committee to buy election, as disclosed in letter signed by Joseph A. Grundy, of Philadelphia, as chairman of the ways and means committee of the republican national committee for Pennsylvania, and in special article in New York Times of October 6 (stating that $600,000 was to be raised in Pennsylvania for expenditure in the middle west and west)."

Pennsylvania Quota $600,000.

"Am mailing copy of Times article and Grundy letter. These furnish sufficient basis for initiating investigation. This campaign to raise enormous slush funds is based on circulation of malicious slander and libel. The Times says this conspiracy was initiated by William M. Butler, chairman, republican national committee, in conference with W. T. Mellon, brother of secretary of treasury, and Edward T. Stotesbury, partner of J. P. Morgan. Pennsylvania quota alleged to be $600,000. This means slush fund of four or five million dollars for country as a whole to be expended in buying election in doubtful states.

"I demand immediate action to halt this outrageous conspiracy. Request you issue subpoenas at once for William M. Butler, W. T. Mellon, Edward T. Stotesbury, Joseph R. Grundy, Samuel M. Vauclain and S. D. Warriner and others, including members of Pennsylvania executive committee.

It was beyond his belief, La Follette continued, that the American people would "give their support to a party, which, through its highest officers, sanctions such corruption."

Seeks to Purge Politics.

"I believe that the time has come to purge American politics of the influences that are thus seeking to degrade the selection of a president of the United States into a mere transaction of purchase and sale," he added. "I hold that it is time to drive the money-changers from the temple of freedom, and I count upon the people of Pennsylvania to take a leading part in this movement to rescue our government from the forces which now control it."

G. O. P. Is Pulling Herring Over Trail Of Issues, Davis

Syracuse, N. Y., October 7.—Republicans and their candidates are drawing a red herring across the trail of real political issues by conjuring up an alleged menace to the constitution, John W. Davis, democratic presidential candidate, charged here Tuesday night in a speech dealing with the "La Follette bogery" raised by the republicans.

"I began denouncing the plan to limit the powers of the court years ago," Davis said. "And the recall of judicial decisions, which was a far more dangerous proposal, was proposed by a well-known republican in 1912 and was supported by many who now shudder at La Follette's proposal.

"I detect on the part of our republican friends a deliberate purpose, growing more evident daily, to divert attention, if they can, from the issue they themselves have made, and to draw across the path of the American people one red herring and perhaps, for all I know, a dozen more," Davis said. "The one that has been selected now is the defense of the immortal constitution of the United States, which, but for the republican party and its candidates, is tottering to speedy fall—not Albert B., either."

Davis asserted that he would never consent to submitting the judgment of the court or the constitutional rights of religious liberty to the dictates of congress.

"But," he added, "when I reflect that it requires a two-thirds vote of congress and a three-fourths vote of the states to approve any such dangerous proposal, I cannot get excited about the charge that we are in imminent danger."

Ridiculing efforts of the administration to claim credit for the Dawes plan, Davis said that the white house last January disavowed any responsibility for the plan Dawes was expected to work out.

"Before the fourth of November, I predict that Calvin Coolidge will be claiming that he wrote it," the candidate added.

Pat—"I hear you and the boys struck for shorter hours. Did you get 'em?" Mike—"Sure. We're not working at all now."—Hamilton (Ont.) Herald.

DAWES BEGINS DRIVE IN LA FOLLETTE BELT

Mason City, Iowa, Octhober 7.—Charles G. Dawes, republican nominee for vice president, began a drive through what leaders of his party describe as "the La Follette belt of Iowa," with addresses today at Northwood and tonight at a mass meeting in the Mason City armory.

Mr. Dawes, on being advised as to La Follette sentiment in this section, struck at the La Follett movement with greater vehemence than he has shown in his previous campaigning, reiterating his declaration that election of the Wisconsin senator means chaos. He described Mr. La Follette as a "real reactionary," and then proceeded to define what he considered a "reactionary."

"A reactionary," he contended, "is the man who would turn back all that we have established in this great country of ours; throw the compass overboard from the ship of state and let her sail by the winds; have our action determined by a passing phase of popular opinion and plunge us into confusion of ideas and ideals . . . into chaos; undermining the confidence of our people in the existing condition of things with all the disastrous results that will come."

Campaign promises being made by Senator La Follette, Mr. Dawes asserted, contained a "significant absence of reference to the machinery and methods by which all these results will be obtained."

"Just the constant intimation is given to put us into office and it will come," he continued. "They don't come that way. They come by work. They come by meeting the facts and the truth fairly and squarely in this country.

Mr. Dawes entered Iowa after a noon speech at St. Paul, to find still the topic of discussion in political quarters the demand made by Senator Brookhart for his removal from the ticket and also the charges made by the Iowa senator as to his connection with the Lorimer bank case. The republican nominee indicates he would devote no attention to either matter in any of his addresses in Iowa.

WALES TO BE GUEST OF FORD AT DETROIT

COOLIDGE SILENCE HIT BY AL SMITH

Boston, October 7.—Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, was the central figure tonight at a dinner and rally of the state democratic party. Following the dinner, attended by the state committee, at which he spoke briefly, the party drove through streets lined with enthusiasts to Mechanics building, where 8,000 persons awaited them.

Governor Smith in his address condemned what he termed the "silence" of the president and the republican party on such questions as foreign policy and the traiff. John W. Davis and Woodrow Wilson on the other side, he said, have fixed policies on these problems.

Governor Smith said in part:

Takes Rap at Dawes.

"The republican party has been in power in Washington for four years. During that time the administration under the leadership of the president has been at variance with the prominent members of the republican party in the senate. President Harding just before his death started across the country in defense of his plan, only to find that it was meeting with the vigorous opposition of the senate leaders of his own party.

"The vice presidential candidate, Mr. Dawes, in his speech of acceptance, touched upon the question of our foreign relations. I read carefully what he had to say, and as far as that particular issue is concerned, I am absolutely satisfied that he should vote for Mr. Davis. He said: 'To morally rot in a policy of national isolation rather than to cleanly contest in these mental battlefields in which questions must be solved in the advancement of civilization both here and abroad—is that the temper of the American people? I think not.'

Not People's Temper.

"The republican vice presidential candidate is right when he thinks that that is not the temper of the American people, but the candidate is silent on it, and refused an invitation on the part of the foreign powers to have this country represented at the Geneva conference.

"John W. Davis, on the other hand, comes out fair and square when he says that if he were president he would not only accept the invitation to attend, but that he would have insisted on the right of the United States to be present and take a leading part when matters so vital to ourselves were being dealt with.

"The tariff is being treated with silence, except for the usual stock phrases of protection and workingmen's wages. All that the workingmen of this country have been able to accomplish for themselves by collective bargaining is credited to the republican tariff.

Praises Wilson Policy.

"Wilson had a definite fixed policy with regard to our tariff laws. He was never silent upon that subject. He insisted that the tariff be left out of the field of partisan politics and that tariff schedules be written on a scientific basis, after study and research of the effect of the different schedules upon American business and American home life.

"Our republican friends put the whole tariff question back into politics by the passage of the Fordney-McCumber bill. There was no more to that enactment than was contained in any republican promise of protection for the American workingmen."

Ex-Soldier Slain In Vets' Hospital; Comrade Is Held

Augusta, Ga., October 7.—Claude Frink, world war veteran, is dead and Claude Smith, also a former soldier, is in jail here charged with Frink's death, which, according to authorities, resulted this afternoon when Smith used a garden hoe in chopping Frink's head open.

The trouble is said to have occurred on the farm of the United States veterans' hospital here just before dark. Particulars as to the killing and what brought it about are yet to be determined. Due to the absence of the record clerk at the hospital the address of neither man is known.

Both were mental patients and have been inmates at the veterans' hospital here for more than a year.

Getting past Mr. Buffer

THE salesman had tried for months to see the manager. Repeated calls met the same answer, "Talk to Mr. Buffer."

Mr. Buffer was polite, ambitious, but without authority to buy.

But mail reaches this manager, even when salesmen cannot. So the salesman's firm began to send booklets to his desk—interesting printed pieces that told the facts about the product and showed what it would save the manager's firm in hard cash every month they used it.

Now, when the salesman calls, instead of hearing "Talk to Mr. Buffer," the answer is "Come right in!"

That's the way printing helps your salesmen. When a man has read about the service your products can give him, he is more ready to see the men you send to call.

The cheapest, most powerful way to make possible buyers conscious that they need your goods is through the use of good printing.

Call in a good printer and talk over with him how to prepare printing that helps salesmen.

New York, October 7.—Except for spurts of liquidation at the opening and towards the close, trading in the cotton market today was very quiet and fluctuations irregular. After selling off early at 25.05, December advanced to 25.34 in the late afternoon, or 29 points net higher, and closed at 25.28. The general market closed very steady at net advances of 15 to 24 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 11 to 15 points on prospects for unsettled weather in the southwest and the fairly steady showing at Liverpool. Little hedge selling and considerable liquidation eased the market right after opening, October selling down to 25.80, and January 25.17, making the active months net unchanged to 17 points lower. About 40 October notices were reported, doubtless accounted for the relatively easy ruling of the near-months, but the selling soon tapered off and a very quiet middle session the market turned upward on covering on over the week crop reports. The outlook for rains and lower temperatures in the southwest probably contributed to the advance which carried January up to 25.46, or 29 points net higher. Last prices were within a few points of the best.

Another private crop report estimated the condition at 53.8, and the indicated yield at 12,263,000 bales. A canvass among members of the New York cotton exchange showed an average expectation of a government report tomorrow, making the condition 53.2. Private cables reported a quiet market in Liverpool with light hedge selling about offset by trade calling. The bulk of the business locally, except for a little early hedge selling, was attributed to a final adjustment of accounts in preparation for tomorrow's government report.

Exports today, 44,222, making 1,122,792 so far this season. Port receipts, 77,529. U. S. port stocks, 614,817.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.

QUIET MARKET AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, October 7.—The cotton market was very quiet today. It was a typical pre-bureau market, with the evening-up process about all completed in previous sessions and with little incentive even for activity by scalpers. The usual uncertainty as to what the government reports tomorrow will show restricted business to eleventh-hour liquidation and covering. The advance which took place, while small, was said to represent belated covering by ring shorts.

At the start Liverpool was some better than due, but the market here made but a small response, first trades showing gains of only 7 points. Prices eased off slightly during the first half of the morning, December declining to 24.96 and January to 25.03, or 4 points below the previous close for both positions. These levels were the lows of the day. The market then drifted until around noon, when covering by ring shorts started an advance, which culminated in the afternoon at 25.23 for December and 25.29 for January, or 26 to 27 points up from the lows of the morning. The close was near the top, showing net gains for the day of 13 points and 16 to 18 points on other active months.

The general expectation is for an indicated crop by the government of 12,400,000 bales. The market is believed to have about discounted that figure. Anything above would be considered bearish and anything below would have a tendency to cause an advance. Although the weather map was fair except for some rains in the northwest, conditions were interpreted to mean the possibility of unsettled weather in the near future.

U. S. Daily Cotton Review

Washington, October 7.—On the New York cotton exchange prices opened at advances ranging from 8 to 12 points. October future contracts on the New York cotton exchange were 25.97 cents at 11 o'clock, and closed at 26.12 cents, compared with 25.95 cents yesterday, and 27.85 cents on the corresponding day last year. October futures on the New Orleans cotton exchange closed at 25.11 cents, compared with 24.98 cents yesterday, and 27.16 cents, one year ago.

The average price for middling spot cotton in 10 designated spot markets was 24.97 cents per pound, compared with 24.71 cents yesterday, and 27.34 cents a year ago. Middling spot cotton was quoted in the New Orleans market today at 25.25 cents per pound, at 25.05 cents yesterday, and 27.50 cents last year.

Total sales reported from the 10 designated spot markets were somewhat lighter today, amounting to about 26,000 bales, as compared with 44,819 bales yesterday, and 29,353 bales last year.

Reports indicated that the basis throughout the south was somewhat improved, owing to an increased demand for grades better than middling. The basis for western cotton of the grade strict middling landed Carolina mill points, was quoted at about 75 points on December future contracts in New York.

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letter.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, October 7.—There was a number of unsettling influences at work in today's market. The suit of Southern rail preferred stockholders against the road for payment of $38 a share in back dividends, which are claimed as due because they were earned in past years, resulted in the stock selling off fractionally but the reaction was not serious because this issue met with substantial support.

St. Paul issues scored sharp advances against yesterday's oversold condition and the Frisco securities also sold at higher levels. American Ice gained about two points in response to an optimistic statement by the president of the company but later reacted again. Slight rallies occurred during the last hour but on the whole the day was one of extreme dullness.

Cotton Letters.

POST AND FLAGG.

New York, October 7.—The report may start a larger volume of business in all branches of the trade, but the market seems pretty well fed up on reports, and unless the figures vary sharply from around twelve three they are not likely to produce any important results. Official figures are all very well, but when it comes to practically no week without some sort of a report the process grows wearisome and leaves the trade more or less indifferent and numb. An even position over the report is generally best, but speaking broadly any good reactions will furnish opportunities to buy of which advantage should be taken.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, October 7.—Cotton values moved but little today, but averaged 10 to 15 points over Monday's finals. It sold 23 points higher in the late trading and held most of it. Trading was mostly of an evening up character in preparation for the bureau Wednesday, with shorts doing most of it. Outlook for generally unsettled weather, possibility of another storm developing in the gulf and of cold weather toward the end of the week, added to the uncertainty over the bureau, made shorts nervous and induced a good many of them to seek cover. Estimates of the private bureaus have varied more than ever, with a range of from 11,574,000 to 13,000,000 bales. The average of those who issued estimates is 54.1, which indicates a forecast of about 12,565,000 bales, compared with the government's last report of 55.4 for condition and 12,596,000 bales for yield. The generally accepted view, however, is that the bureau will make a substantial reduction from its last forecast, owing to the large amount of abandoned acreage, short staple, recent bad weather in the east and disappointing ginning returns from the counties that have finished picking and ginning. An estimate of 12,300,000 or under will be construed as bullish.

C. P. ELLIS & CO.

New Orleans, October 7.—The immediate course of the market will naturally hinge upon the character of the bureau report to be issued tomorrow morning. Private crop estimates range from 11,000,000 to slightly over 13,000,000 bales, while the average of the reports indicate a crop of 12,500,000 bales. We think, however, that the general expectation is for an estimate from the government of from 12,300,000 to 12,400,000, and fluctuations may be expected according as the report varies from these figures.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, October 7.—The ginning report will also be published tomorrow and is expected to reflect rapid harvesting in the western belt and less rapid progress toward the east, until the Atlantic states are reached where the figures should read small. It is futile to guess at the figures. The main feature of the market, however, will be the condition report and indicated yield and it seems to us that these figures must make a bullish showing. Liverpool due Wednesday: October, 14.69; January, 14.49.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, October 7.—Market has been very quiet and dull all day long which is quite natural in face of the report which will be issued tomorrow by the government showing the condition indicated crop and ginning up to October 1. Weather in the western belt was unfavorable rains over northern Texas and Oklahoma as well as west Texas. Advices from England indicate that there is an excellent chance of the conservative party winning in the general election which will take place if the present government fails through a vote of confidence in the not distant future. The average guess of the cotton exchange members was 53.2, a decline of 2.2 from the last report. Liverpool futures are due to morrow: December, 14.45; January, 14.50.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, October 7.—A. V. Curran & Co., correspondents: Predictions are that the British labor government will likely fall tomorrow for want of a vote of confidence, but if it materializes it will likely not exert much influence on market, as no great amount of uneasiness seems to be felt in London where English consols closed 57, only quarter down on day. Liverpool cables indicate that Lancashire spinners again decided today to continue short time in mills using American cotton, but the large forwardings of American cotton from Liverpool to English mills last week, 32,000 vs. 25,000 for corresponding week last year, probably denotes that the short time program is not being followed to the letter. Tomorrow's weekly weather and crop report, which will be issued 9 a. m., or one hour before government crop forecast, will probably be favorable, in which event values may dip temporarily, but a nervous and erratic market is probable thereafter until the official crop prediction is issued.

Liverpool Cotton.

Liverpool, October 7.—Cotton spot, quiet; prices, steady. Strictly good middling, 15.83; good middling, 15.48; strictly middling, 15.28; middling, 15.02; strictly low middling, 14.83; low middling, 14.33; strictly good ordinary, 13.93; good ordinary, 13.35.

Sales, 5,000 bales, including 3,300 American. Receipts, 54,000 bales, including 51,800 American.

Futures closed steady. October, 14.62; December, 14.39; January, 14.33; March, 14.46; May, 14.45; July, 14.26; September, 13.63.

Cottonseed Oil.

New York, October 7.—The cottonseed oil market was feverish and erratic today in sympathy with lard and grains and, after quick changes both ways, closed steady on covering on over-the-government report on cotton. Closing prices were net unchanged to 6 points higher. Sales, 17,500 barrels. Prime crude, $9.25, nominal; prime summer yellow spot, $11.00@11.40; October closed, $11.00; December, $10.76; March, $10.98; May, $11.15, all bid.

Coffee.

New York, October 7.—A further advance occurred in the coffee market today owing to the strength of Brazilian exchange, reports of a higher spot market and a firm cost and freight situation. The opening was 5 points higher to 17 points lower. A few realizing sales were soon absorbed by covering and trade buying. December sold up to 18.72c, making a new high for the season. The markete losed 30 to 46 points net higher. Trading was more active with sales estimated at 110,000. Closing quotations: October, 19.15c; December, 18.72c; March, 18.14c; May, 17.65c; July, 17.18c; September, 16.85c.

Spot coffee, firm: Rio 7s, 19¾@20c; Santos 4s, 24¾@25½c. Cost and freight offers included part Bourbon 3s and 5s at 24 to 24½c.

Rio exchange on London ¼-pence higher; dollar buying rate, 260 reis lower; Rio market, 1,150 to 1,275 reis lower; Santos, 1,500 to 1,950 reis lower. Brazilian port receipts, 79,000; Jundahy receipts, 30,000.

The Investor

BY PAUL WILLARD GARRETT

Bond clearances in Wall Street should be centralized in a single institution to avoid duplications and thefts possible under the present system.

Donald Durant, of Lee, Higginson & Co., formerly president of the Bond Club of New York, has raised a problem that should be more generally discussed. It has to do with the present method for handling bonds in Wall street as transactions are made between houses.

The average investor who walks into a bond house and sells a block of Atchison, Topeka & Sante Fe Railway company's general mortgage 4s, for example, does not realize what a cumbersome lot of machinery is set to work. The investment house ordinarily executes the order through a broker, who in turn sells the bonds to another principal. This transaction is a simple one but involves several steps that are laborious even if not perilous.

The investment house on receiving the block of bonds must (1) count the bonds brought in for sale, examining each one to make certain that the last coupon in each case is attached and itemizing the bonds by serial number. Unless the bonds are numbered consecutivey, and it is only good luck when they are, the job is a painstaking one. For examinations of this sort the house employs only honest, high-priced clerks; who draw, perhaps, a salary of $3,500 per year.

(2) The bonds are wrapped and given to messengers for delivery to the broker. The package is valuable and several messengers are sent, boys to carry the bonds and men to carry guns.

(3) The broker receives the bonds. He goes through the same process of counting and checking. A bond more or less means something to him, too. So his honest, high-priced clerks repeat what the clerks of the investment house did before wrapping up the bonds. The broker then has the bonds wrapped up once more, assuming that he has sold the full lot to one principal.

(4) The broker's boys and guards take the package to the new principal, say another large investment house.

(5) The new investment house has the same bonds counted and checked again.

There Is the Peril of Thefts, Too.

Small transaction may be made in less cumbersome ways but the fact of the matter is that for hundreds of transactions that take place daily in Wall street the above steps do not cover everything. Such heavy overhead expenses eat into the profits of the business. Much of the expense goes for duplications.

Aside from the expensiveness of the present method of counting, checking and delivering bonds, there is a substantial loss from theft not fully covered by insurance.

A Clearing House for Bonds.

The duplications and the loss from theft could largely be eliminated, in the opinion of Mr. Durant, by the establishment of some form of central institution to act as a clearing house for bonds. He proposes a central bond bank which would fulfill the same function that the Clearing House association does for New York banks or the Stock Clearing corporation of the New York Stock exchange does in the case of stocks.

It would not be necessary for the new institution to handle money but it would carry accounts with dealers, banks and individual customers. It would accept bonds on deposit but the rest would be largely a matter of bookkeeping. With such an institution the investment house would have completed its sale of the Atchison bonds to the broker by drawing a check on the central institution. The broker would have deposited the check to his account and drawn a similar check to the new principal. All this could have been done without taking the bonds from the vaults of the central institution.

The new institution would have two jobs to perform and in which it should become expert. It would safeguard the bonds and keep books on all transactions. Under such a system properly worked out, bonds perhaps would be seen as rarely as is cash in the banking world.

Heavy selling of stocks by professional traders under way yesterday was not resumed today. In fact, trading today was the lighest in weeks. Next Monday the stock exchange will be closed for Columbus day holiday. Hence speculative Wall street is not looking for much activity in the stock market trading until next week, if then. For days stocks have advanced slightly on buying by professional traders, only to be sold short when it became evident that the advance could not be carried through. When declines have ended abruptly, as was the case yesterday, borrowed stocks sold short by professional traders have been recovered. This narrow price movement will continue until something develops in the day's news either favorable or unfavorable. London cables reported that the German loan would be announced next Tuesday with the interest rate 7 per cent and a price to yield 6½ per cent. Next Tuesday will be the 14th. For many weeks both here and abroad has fixed the middle of October as the date of the German loan offering.

President Mitchell, of the National City bank, sailing today from London for home, was quoted here as saying: "I believe the German loan will appeal strongly to American investors and will be readily absorbed owing to our extremely sound credit basis and the high interest rate to be carried by the German bonds."

U. S. Naval Stores Commission Reports on Foreign Survey

Pensacola, Fla., October 7.—The turpentine industry abroad as viewed by the American naval stores commission, visiting Spain and France in the summer of 1924, furnishes the basis for advice to American operators, contained in the report of the commission made public here by the chairman, J. G. Pace. The commission visiting the turpentine operations abroad was made up of Mr. Pace, A. S. Carr, of Bainbridge, Ga.; O. H. L. Wernicke, Pensacola; S. A. Alford, Chipley; W. L. Barnett, Mount Dora, and W. L. Fender, Valdosta, Ga.

The report gives a detailed account of the journey beginning at New York July 9, following the commission to Paris, Bordeaux and other French cities and villages, on to Madrid and Spanish towns.

Summing up the result of its investigation under the head of "Recommendations of the Commission," it is said that the commission is not convinced of the necessity or wisdom of adoption by southern naval stores operators of the French system with respect to the details of cupping and actually working the trees. Investigators, it is pointed out, are working out practices here as to width of face, height and depth of streak, etc., which is best adapted to conditions and southern operators are urged to acquaint themselves with the result of these investigations.

Saying that gum is needlessly impure when brought to the still much greater care is urged in chipping and dipping.

Another recommendation is adopted of the French practice of cleaning and purifying the gum before it is distilled, such practice insuring more profitable operation.

"We cannot say whether it would be profitable for the American operator to shift from the direct fire to the steam type of still," says the report, and "we believe that the bleaching process is profitable, but this is a point for further investigation and experiment."

Some Benefits.

Obvious benefits are found in the French labor system, notably the greater personal interest of the men who do the woodswork and the greater efficiency secured in care and use of woods equipment.

"Certainly the French system should not be dismissed as not adapted to our labor situation until many of us have made an earnest effort to apply it to our operations," says the report.

"Our cups should be raised each year, our chipper should carry a paddle. Cleaner gum at the still will pay," it continues. Emphasis is laid on the statement: "Over-cupping and the capping of trees under 25 years of age must stop if the naval stores industry of America is to survive."

"This brings us to the outstanding feature of the French industry and to the most important lesson one can pass on to our fellow operators in America, the lesson of Landes," the recommendations declare.

"The French naval stores region—the Landes—comprises about 2,000,000 acres. It is a triangular area bounded on the west by the Atlantic ocean, on the north and east by the Garanne river, on which is situated the city of Bordeaux, and on the south by the Adour river, at the mouth of which lies the old city of Bayonne. The region is equal in size to about five average counties of Georgia or Florida. It was originally an enormous swamp in the rainy season and an arid, sandy desert the rest of the year. It was the poorest, most unhealthful part of France.

"It was reclaimed, drained and planted to maritime pine, started about 125 years ago and carried on in the face of many obstacles.

"The maritime pine is not so good a producer of gum nor is it nearly so valuable for saw timber as our longleaf and slash pine. It is a fast grower and prolific seed bearer."

System Old.

The report points out that the trees were originally planted but the bulk of the present crop is the result of natural reproduction. The forest practice and management of naval stores there is based on timber production—not timber mining. "They were a hundred years ago where we are today, only much worse off than we are,' the report claims.

"What are the conditions in Landes today?" the report asks, and answers, "We found it covered with an unbroken forest of maritime pine in all stages of growth from a seedling to saw timber."

"Two million acres of the Landes produces one-fourth as much naval stores as our whole south,' says the report. "The future of the region is assured on a permanent basis. Production can be increased at the rate of 5 per cent for the next ten years.

"What is the lesson, does their success lie in the soil, the climate, the species of pine or intensive European conditions generally?" is another question with the answer, "No. We have better soil, better climate, better pines." The explanation of the commission is partly in the methods but more strikingly in the acceptance of the principle that timber growing comes first.

"Whether or not our past methods were justified by conditions as we found them no longer matters. Today our inexhaustible timber is almost gone. The naval stores industry of the south must continue and it must look to second-growth for its raw material," says the report.

"Continuous forest production must, therefore, be given the place of first importance in the future course of the industry," it continues. "Every factor, except taxation, tends to make it easier for us to build our future on this basis than it was for the French. Bad taxation practices can be corrected and we must see that is corrected so that the owner of pine lands is not only encouraged to grow continuous pine crops but that our government, which is of the people, shall receive a full measure of permanent, reasonable yield tax revenue, rather than a temporary and inflated yield which is self-destructive in effect.

"The story of Landes is the story of opportunity. Our handicaps are few indeed and the promise of the future to our southern naval stores states is great indeed, compared with what men could visualize in the Landes a hundred years ago. Let every operator unite to make our industry a permanent, progressive and lucrative calling in which men may engage generation after generation with profit to themselves and with the satisfaction and self-respect that will come of knowing that we rightfully use a great natural resource which we hold in trust from the Creator—that we build and do not destroy."

Wild Fluctuations Seen In Grain Market Tuesday

Chicago, October 7.—With corn prices shooting upward and rye down, the grain markets went through more varied changes today than have been witnessed here in a long while. Wet weather and sudden dearth of offerings scared recent sellers of corn, and that cereal jumped wildly, closing nervous 2 1-2 to 2 7-8 cents net higher, December $1.13 1-8 to $1.13 1-4. Rye at one time was 6 cents off as a result of lessened European demand. In wheat the finish was unsettled at 1-2c net lower to an equal advance, December $1.49 5-8 to $1.49 7-8 and May $1.54 1-4 to $1.54 3-8, with oats varying from 1-2c decline to 3-4c gain, and provisions all the way from 15c lower to a rise of 17c.

It was during the last hour of trading that speculative attention shifted to the corn market and brought about a sharp upturn in values there. Flurried attempts to buy disclosed that but little was for sale, and in some quarters importance was attached to the fact that of late the price of Argentine corn has been gaining rapidly as compared with corn in the United States. The inference was drawn that Argentine competition in this country had become a negligible quantity, and that meanwhile the prevailing wet weather had put the domestic corn crop in danger of serious new damage should freezing temperatures be met with soon.

The wheat trade was virtually a drawn battle, in which alternating upturns and declines over a 4-cent range resulted largely from Argentine drouth advices succeeded by word of beneficial rains over part of Argentina. Estimates that export purchases of wheat would total 2,000,000 bushels helped to rally the market at the last.

Oats were influenced more or less by gossip that good export business might be done shortly.

Irregularity in the provision market appeared to be related to a good deal to the uncertain trend of grain.

Cash Grain.

Chicago, October 7.—Wheat: No. 2 red, $1.55½@1.56; No. 2 hard, $1.49¼@1.50. Corn: No. 2 mixed, $1.11¼@1.12; No. 2 yellow, $1.12@1.15. Oats: No. 2 white, 55@56¼c. Rye: No. 2, $1.30. Timothy seed: $4.75@6.35.

St. Louis, October 7.—Cash wheat: No. 2 red, $1.58@1.59. Corn: No. 2 white, $1.15½ 1.16½. Oats: No. 2 white, 56c.

Money, 2% per cent. Discount rates short bills, 3 9-16@3% per cent.

Three months' bills, 3% per cent.

Dry Goods.

New York, October 7.—Cotton goods were quiet today with prices steady. Yarns showed little change. The trade awaited a cotton report and some business was lost through the observance of a holiday. The primary burlap markets in Calcutta were closed for holidays. Local markets were steador. New lines of fine dress goods were priced within 5 per cent of the fall level of value. Old lines were unchanged. Silks sold steadily, crepes, Bengalines and satins leading. Floor covering continued active with prices firm. Openings for the new season have been delayed until after election day.

Provisions.

Chihago, October 7.—Provisions: Lard, 15.27; ribs, 13.00; bellies, 14.87.

RECOVERY IS SEEN IN ST. PAUL BONDS

Ten public utilities	91.05	91.00
Ten industrials	95.13	95.16
Combined average	90.87	90.94

Totals, 10,236,000.

New York, October 7.—Partial recovery of the St. Paul issues, a reactionary tendency in the general list, prompt over-subscription of the $15,000,000 6 1-2 per cent external sinking fund gold bonds of Nord Railway company of France, and the announcement of an offering of $7,000,000 Finnish municipal bonds were the outstanding developments in today's bond market.

St. Paul 4s of 1925, which bore the brunt of yesterday's selling pressure rallied 3 1-2 points, recovering about half their loss. The convertible 4 1-2s showed a gain of 1 1-2 points with corresponding advances in the other St. Paul issues. High-grade railroad liens were heavy. Union Pacific refunding 5s and Norfolk & Western convertible 6s each losing a point and several others yielding large fractions. Adams express 4s advanced a point to a new high at 85.

Foreign liens showed mixed changes with the standard issues holding steady on reports that the terms of the German loan would be made known on Thursday. A firmer tendency in the time money market had little appreciable effect on United States government securities, which moved within narrow and irregular limits.

Sugar company liens lost ground in sympathy with the decline in stock prices.

Southern Railway Stockholders Sue For Back Dividends

Richmond, Va., October 7.—A suit to enforce payment by the Southern Railway company of $22,900,000 in dividends to preferred stockholders was on file in law and equity court here today. The action was brought by the Norwich Waterpower company, the trustees of the estate of C. D. Langhorne and other unnamed stockholders, who declared that the preferred stockholders are entitled to payment of dividends heretofore earned, but not yet declared in their favor, of about $38 a share, before holders of the company's common stock are entitled to receive any dividends.

The basis of the contention is that for a number of years past the railroad has earned part of all the 5 per cent preferred dividend but has not paid the dividend, preferring rather to retain and carry such net profits into the surplus net income account. The plaintiffs claim that now that the company has initiated dividends on its common stock, it has demonstrated that there is no longer any necessity of applying its net profits to surplus funds and they ask the court to compel payment to them of the profits heretofore earned on the preferred stock.

Texas Banker Gave Wall Street a Real Surprise and Keeps It Guessing on His Offering of $50,000,000 in Mexican Bonds.

New York, October 7.—J. L. Arlett, Austin (Texas) banker, who made a public offering last week of $50,000,000 Mexican government 6 per cent bonds to yield the investor 9 per cent, can pride himself on giving Wall street a real surprise and on keeping it guessing. As Wall street plays the game, an offering of $50,000,000 bonds calls for much hard preliminary work, including the formation first of an underwriting syndicate and then a canvass of dealers throughout the country to see how many of the bonds can be placed.

Arlitt's bond offering not only came as a complete surprise to Wall street bankers and bond dealers, but it came after it was generally known Mexico had failed in efforts to obtain a loan from Wall street bankers for the reason that Mexico had failed to pay July 1 interest on its outstanding bonds held by investors.

To Wall street's great surprise, a few days ago Arlitt was quoted as saying that 65 per cent of the bonds offered by him had already been sold. This caused Wall street bankers to wire Arlitt asking him if he had been correctly quoted. His reply was that $40,000,000, or 80 per cent of the Bonds had already been sold, indicating all bonds would be "sold without need of calling on underwriters to advance money."

Trading Dull, Changes Small In Stock Market Tuesday

DAY'S SUMMARY.

	Industrials.	Twenty Railroads
Tuesday	101.25	89.49
Monday	101.45	89.51
Week ago	102.30	91.55
High, 1924	104.13	93.15
Low, 1924	90.27	81.00

Totals, 496,600.

New York, October 7.—Desultory trading characterized today's stock market with price changes generally small and unimportant. Total sales fell below 500,000 shares for the first time since the middle of September.

Bear traders made an attempt to unsettle the general list during the morning, centering their attacks on the sugars and a few vulnerable specialties, but they failed to bring out much long stock and their efforts were soon abandoned. Operators on the long side, however, were unable to bid up prices without running into substantial volumes of stock with the result that trading was listless in the latter half of the session.

United States Steel common, American Can and Baldwin all closed fractionally higher.

A heavy tone developed in several of the high-grade rails, Atchison, "Nickel Plate," Illinois Central preferred, Rock Island 7 per cent preferred and Gulf, Mobile & Northern preferred showing recessions of a point or more.

Heavy selling of the sugars was attributed to the political disturbances in Cuba and to speculative disappointment over this year's earnings, American Sugar Refining, Cuban Cane preferred and Punta Alegre closed 1 to 1 1-2 points lower while South Porto Rican broke 4 points to 67.

Further accumulation took place in Bayuk brothers, which closed 2 3-8 higher at 46 7-8. American Ice rallied a point to 76 on official assurance that earnings were satisfactory and the present dividend rate would be maintained. Good buying also was noted in Union Tank Car, Wells-Fargo Express, National Dairy and General Asphalt, up 1 to 2 points.

St. Paul issues made further slight recovery from yesterday's early weakness. Southern Railway was heavy in the early trading in response to the filing of a suit by preferred stockholders in an effort to recover back dividends alleged to be due, but rallied later on publication of an official statement disputing that claim.

American Waterworks broke 7 points to 108 1-2 and then rallied feebly. The decline in Chandler Motor, which touched a new low at 31 1-8, was interpreted as an adjustment to its recently reduced dividend rate. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore broke 4 points on one sale and Nash Motors dropped 4 1-2.

Call money held steady at 2 1-2 per cent. The time money market was firmer, maturities of 4 to 6 months being quoted at 2 1-4 to 3 1-2 per cent instead of 3 to 3 1-4, although business was quiet. Commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Strength of the South American rates featured the foreign exchange market, Argentine paper pesos and Brazilian milreis were quoted at 38 3-8 and 11 3-4 cents, respectively, as compared with 36 7-8 and 11 1-4 yesterday. European exchanges eased slightly, demand sterling being quoted just above $1.45 1-2 and French francs ruling around 5.22 cents.

UTILITIES DECLINE IN CURB MARKET

New York, October 7.—Transactions in curb securities centered principally on the public utilities in today's moderately active market, the reactionary movement in these issues being featured by a break of 5 1-2 points in Appalachian Power to 65 1-2. The shares later found support and rallied to 68. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, new stock, displayed heaviness in sympathy with the decline in the old stock on the "big board," and American Gas & Electric common sold off 2 1-2 to 90. In contrast to these recessions, American Light & Traction gained 2 1-4 points to 139.

Active oils generally were reactionary, losses in popular issues being held to fractions. Woodley Petroleum, however, touched a new high on the movement at 11 3-4 in reflection of an increase of 15 cents a barrel in light Smackover crude, now 95 cents a barrel.

Price changes in the radio group were small and unimportant. Lehigh Valley Coal certificates eased slightly on an increased turnover. United Bakeries dropped 2 points on a few sales. Gillette Safety Razor dropped 2 points to 324, then rallied slightly to 329.

Unconditionally Guaranteed by the Republic of Finland

As to Principal and Interest by Endorsement on Each Bond

Finnish Guaranteed Municipal Loan of 1924

Series A $3,900,000 Associated Municipalities
Series B $3,100,000 City of Helsingfors

Thirty-Year Sinking Fund 6½% External Gold Bonds

Due Oct. 1, 1954

Interest payable April 1 and October 1. Coupon Bonds in denominations of $1,000 and $500, registerable as to principal only. Principal and interest payable in New York City in United States gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness at the National City Bank of New York, Fiscal Agent, without deduction for Finnish taxes.

Non-redeemable for ten years except for sinking funds
Sinking funds sufficient to retire entire loan by maturity

The bonds of Series A are the direct joint and several obligations of twenty-seven Associated Municipalities participating therein; and the bonds of Series B are the direct obligations of the City of Helsingfors.

The twenty-seven Associated Municipalities, together with the City of Helsingfors, comprise the great majority of the municipalities of Finland. They include 86% of the urban population and about one-seventh of the total aggregate population of the Republic. The City of Helsingfors, the metropolis of Finland, has a population in excess of 200,000, and is an important seaport and trade center of Northern Europe.

Of the proceeds of the present loan, more than half will be applied to the funding of outstanding short term indebtedness of the various municipalities, incurred principally for capital expenditures, and to this extent will not represent increase of debt. The balance will be expended for additional capital purposes, such as harbor improvements and extensions, the construction of water-works and electric power plants and transmission lines, the erection of hosptials, schools, etc., and the development of municipal housing plans.

We offer these bonds if, as and when issued, and received by us, subject to approval of counsel. We reserve the right to allot in whole, or in part, and from either or both series. Delivery in temporary form is expected on or about October 16, 1924.

Price 91 and interest, to yield over 7.23%

Application will be made to list these bonds on the New York Stock Exchange.

The National City Company Dillon, Read & Co.

Brief But Important Lessons in Finance. Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

USE YOUR BANKER'S VISION WHEN YOU BUY SECURITIES

When you go to buy a bond or stock as an investment see whether it measures up to the tests enumerated below. If it measures up favorably, it is a good investment.

Here are the tests of an investment:

1, Security of principal; 2, stability of income; 3, fair income return; 4, marketability; 5, value as collateral; 6, tax position (federal, state, local); 7, freedom from care, 8, acceptable duration; 9, acceptable denomination; 10, appreciation.

Some of these things the average man can measure for himself; others require special training in investment and finance and an investor should be aided in judging them by a banker. In going to a banker, however, take along this outline and ask him to explain whether the security can measure up well to these 10 tests. He will be glad to show you where it does and where it does not—advising you as to whether or not the good factors outweigh the unfavorable factors in regard to any security.

The financial district is expecting Semptember unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation, to be announced next Friday, will show an increase of 200,000 tons, or more, which is largely in excess of recent estimates. A gain of 102,505 tons was reported in August. The estimate was based on large orders the corporation received in the latter part of the month.

An extra dividend of $2.50 was declared today by directors of the Fajardo Sugar company, of Porto Rico, in addition to the regular dividend of $2.50, payable November 1, to stock on record October 18. An extra of $1.25 was declared in July.

September sales of S. H. Kress and company increased 28 per cent over the same month last year, to $3,123,458. The total of $2,850,388 for the nine months of 1924 was a gain of 16 per cent.

Directors of the Pullman company will not declare an extra dividend or stock distribution at the meeting October 15, according to Edward F. Carry, president, who also denied rumors that the company planned to acquire control of General American Tank Car company.

Loans to Wall street brokers are now estimated at about $1,475,000,000, the highest since July, 1923, when the total approximated $1,500,000,000. The peak was reported in February, 1823, about $2,000,000,000.

New York, October 7.—For the third successive year directors of the Intertype corporation today declared a dividend of 10 per cent on the common stock, payable in common stock November 17, to shareholders of record November 1. The regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents also was declared.

Trading in American Railway Express shares "over the counter," started yesterday at $80 a share and closed at $81 bid and $83 asked. Dealers were given their initial supply a few days ago when stockholders of Wells Fargo Express company received $10,466,700 as a liquidation dividend. The annual dividend is $6.

Grain Letter.

FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, October 7.—WHEAT: Profit-taking sales by leading locals through prominent houses was again in evidence and this selling was followed by the pit crowd. Outside interest did not appear aggressive but there was ready assorption of offerings on way down and shorts had to bid up prices to cover to close. There was talk of liberal export buying and Liverpool futures continued to lead to advance. Believe there will be a steady export business and purchases should be made on all setbacks. Export sales reported at two million with additional quantities working.

CORN: Scattered selling early but unsettled weather brought in some new export and when prices started to rally, the market ran into short covering which added speed to the upturn. The forecast is for unsettled weather and upturn today was due to a certain extent to the fact that corn has been neglected by the speculators recently, while one of the leading houses has circulated bullish crop news and has been a steady buyer.

OATS: General liquidation was uncovered early and prices declined sharply, running into stop loss orders on the way down. There was some pressure also from cash houses, hedging country purchases. Towards the close there was buying by leading bull houses and shorts.

RYE: There was a big trade with general liquidation early on the weakness in wheat. The decline met with substantial buying although seaboard and local advices did not indicate any important export business working.

PROVISIONS: Trade was much lighter and reflected the influence of changes in the corn market. Receipts of hogs, 19,000. Market steady for choice heavy weights but 25 to 40 cents off for light. Top, 11.45.

FAY IS GIVEN DRAW WITH REDDICK BY REFEREE

BY GEORGE CONGDON.

When posters emblazoned with red ink go out in the future from the home office of Harry Fay, of Louisville, Ky., they probably will have duly displayed the fact that Fay fought Jack Reddick, Canadian light-heavyweight champion, to a draw in 12 rounds in Atlanta, Ga., October 7, 1924.

Ask any half-dozen fans who saw the scrap last night at the Auditorium and four or five of them will tell you that this young Mr. Reddick from Toronto slammed Mr. Fay into a state of wild-eyed dizziness, or grogginess, as it is in the vernacular, twice during the slug-fest and won something like six rounds, with a couple of others even.

The little present of a draw was made to Fay by Referee Bill Kaliska, whose memory was rather dull last night. In the preceding bout, between Pete Cole, of Rome, and Jordan Sheppard, of Macon, Referee Kaliska jogged his think-tank a little by momentary reference to notes on points before he held both of these boys' padded fists aloft.

Fight Game Revived.

Whoops of a thousand or 1,500 fans who saw the card, incidentally, resurrected with a veritable riot of satisfaction the fight game in Atlanta. The whole card, from the opening of the battle royal to the final chimes in the Reddick-Fay fisticuffing was as full of action as a dog is of fleas. Thirst for blood was slaked when a couple of the entertainers sprang leaks in their circulatory system around the nose. The only thing that didn't happen was a knockdown and there wasn't a fan crying about that after the evening was called complete.

Bill McGowan was on hand—he's the boy both Reddick and Fay knocked down so many times they lost count—looking around at first with a look of gloating in his eyes, but after the slam-bang affair was over and fans had seen the punishment the battlers took at each other's hands, his grin of "I told you so," developed into a "I didn't steal your chickens, Mister," look.

That convincing tap on the nose for which Fay is rather well known was greatly in evidence last night. It started a trickle of blood from the proboscis of Reddick, but it didn't shake him otherwise. Reddick's feet held under him and his eyes were steady all the way, without a suggestion of a weakening. On the other hand this coal miner from Louisville was jarred noticeable half a dozen times by those wicked little jabs that have made Reddick a tough assignment for any aspiring light-heavyweight.

Works on Reddick's Nose.

The only times Fay made any impression at all on Reddick was when he caught him full on the nose with his straight left and these times were altogether too few and far between to earn him a draw with the Canadian.

Both boys confined their efforts to warming up in the first round, and while Fay was continuing the warming up process in the second round, Reddick pushed his glove into Fay's ear enough times to give him the least little shade on the round. You don't have to count that, though, to give the matter to Reddick.

In the third round, Reddick stuck his still comparatively dry mit into Ray's ear several times and hooked him hard enough with his left once to send the Louisville husky reeling and down to his knee. It wasn't a knockdown, for Fay slipped a little and, being of charitable inclinations, like Referee Kaliska, we give Fay the benefit of the doubt. Reddick had primed Fay for a drop in this period with a series of murderous six-inch left jabs to the jaw.

Five Go to Reddick.

The fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh rounds went very much as the third, except that Fay was downright groggy in the middle of the fifth and was hanging on badly in the sixth and seventh. During the time, however, he managed to keep Reddick off of him enough to prevent a knockout punch making him eat resin.

One of Fay's big accomplishments is hanging on. Several times, too, he was in line for penalties of anywhere from five to 15 yards for tackling too high. Some of his tackles were perfect, though.

In the eighth round Fay, from continued hanging on that kept Reddick helpless, came to life again and tapped Reddick enough on the end of his nose to start the gory stream across the Canadian's lip. Fay won the round fairly enough, but with the blood wiped away in the ninth, Reddick came back and plastered Fay so frequently on the side of the head and with uppercuts to the heart that he won a draw on this round.

Fay brought a right cross into play in connection with his straight left to the head in the tenth and won it, but in going after his man had taken so many cussed little snaggings from Reddick that in the 11th he went groggy again as Reddick aimed for a knockout. The last round ended the event with both boys about even. Fay may have had a shade the better of the deal, but not a heavy enough shade to do more than offset that shade Reddick had in the second. There was only a half pound difference in weight, Reddick making 165 and Fay 164 1-2.

Cole, Sheppard Draw.

Hollis Sullivan, scheduled to go on with Jordan Sheppard in the second 10-round affair of the evening, was unable to get away from Riverside Military academy at Gainesville, where he is a student, and Pete Cole, who showed rather poorly a few weeks ago against Sheppard, substituted. If Cole keeps up the improvement he has shown in the last month, he'll be a world beater, for Sheppard had his hands full and running over with taking Pete's punches and handing enough back for the draw. Cole weighed 125 pounds and Sheppard scaled 127 1-2.

In the first 10-rounder of the show, Joe Pacionni, Fort Benning light weight, gave Tom O'Rourke, of Atlanta, a pasting that this young Irishman will remember well enough to keep him out of Pacionni's way for a while at least. Pacionni did a bit of slugging that made him a lot of friends in the crowd.

Before the first bout started Clapham and Rentrop, who wrestle at the Auditorium Thursday night, were introduced, as was Bill McGowan, who tasted resin at the hands of both of the feature fighters.

BATTLING BUDD IS DEFEATED

Jacksonville, Fla., October 7.—Red Herring, of Louisville, Ky., won easily from Battling Budd, of Atlanta, in a ten-round bout here tonight. Herring gained the referee's decision. They are junior lightweights.

Young Lewis, of Tampa, won a decision over Frankie Rubia, of Savannah, in an eight-round semi-final. They are bantams.

SMART PLAYS FEATURE 4TH GAME

BY HANK GOWDY.

Catcher for the New York Giants.

New York, October 7.—This world series has brought out some great ball playing and some that was not so great. But the smartest work I have seen in all my years in the sport has come off in the region of second base, where Frank Frisch and Bucky Harris are trying to play the whole game.

Those marvelous catches of Frisch's in center field in Monday's game were matched by Harris' work Tuesday afternoon and I think Bucky did more than any other member of the Senators to beat us.

If some other player had been there we might have broken past the infield with some of our blows that looked like sure hits until Bucky nailed them. We might have broken up the game in the seventh, but Harris made two miracle plays, catching my hit back of second and nailing Frisch's smoking grounder with one hand. Any second baseman who makes eight assists and two putouts without an error is playing a first-rate game.

We had our tough luck with the pitching Tuesday. Some days it seems that there isn't a pitcher on the staff who can do his best, and this was one of those days with us. But you may remember that the Washington pitchers didn't have anything but their gloves—and those seemed to be mortgaged—when we walloped them Monday.

George Mogridge, pitching for Washington, had a great curve and a puzzling variety of stuff Tuesday and had us in his power until he weakened. Then Marberry came in and he was good again, although he had been pretty bad the day before.

Goose Goslin was the other big gun of the game. He drove in three runs and scored two himself, and you have enough runs right there to beat our score.

CHICAGO NEEDS ENDS, SAYS CAMP

BY WALTER CAMP.

(Special Leased Wire. Copyright 1924).

New York, October 7.—Alonzo Stagg, out at Chicago U., is certainly in hard luck so far as ends are concerned. Lamp, who went out Saturday with a broken leg, was one of Stagg's best men. Weiss, another promising candidate, has suffered an injury to his ankle which probably will keep him out a month.

Meanwhile Stagg is yielding to the prevailing tendency for weight on the flanks and is likely to push Abbott, the 190-pound tackle, out to end. Whether he will find a bigger man to replace the very clever Curley at quarter, in order to get more weight into the interference, is a question.

Harry Adams and McCarthy are doing good work in the backfield, and we will have another opportunity to see whether a sprinter can make good, or whether Charley Paddock was right when he said that football and sprinting don't mix. Brookins, the star hurdler of Iowa, is out for fullback. If any coach can get the speed that these men have and convert it into real football work, he will be well satisfied.

Iowa, by the way, is about the best off of any middle western team for veteran material and that backfield, with Captain Parker, Graham, Frye and Fisher as a kicker, looks pretty smooth.

One of the most interesting features of the season in the middle west has been the great number of punters lost by graduation. Kipke of Michigan; Workman of Ohio State; Martineau, of Minnesota; Taft, of Wisconsin, and Pyott, of Chicago, are all gone—and the football fans will greatly miss their work.

JAKE DAUBERT AT DEATH'S DOOR

Cincinnati, October 7.—Slight hope is entertained for the recovery of Jake Daubert, veteran first baseman and captain of the Cincinnati Nationals, who is in a hospital here suffering from complications following an operation for the removal of his appendix.

BENNY CLINE KNOCKED OUT

St. Petersburg, Fla., October 7.—Heavy Andrews, Tampa, knocked out "Irish Benny Cline, Atlanta, in the fifth round of their scheduled ten-round bout here tonight. Andrews outfought Cline all the way, sending him to the floor for the count of eight twice in the fourth round. Andrews weighed in at 138 and Cline 144.

In the Same Boat.

(From the Edinburgh Scotsman.)

Farmer Giles, canvassing for members for a raffle, asked one of his neighbors to enter.

"George," he said, "be you a-goin' in for my raffle?"

"How much?" asked George.

"Five shillings," was the reply.

"Put me down," answered George "I'll pay ye tomorrow."

Next day the two met again.

"Well," said George, "who won the prize?"

"I wonthe first prize," said the farmer. "Wasn't I lucky?"

"Who won the second?"

"My wife won the second; wasn't she lucky?"

"And who won the third?" queried George patiently.

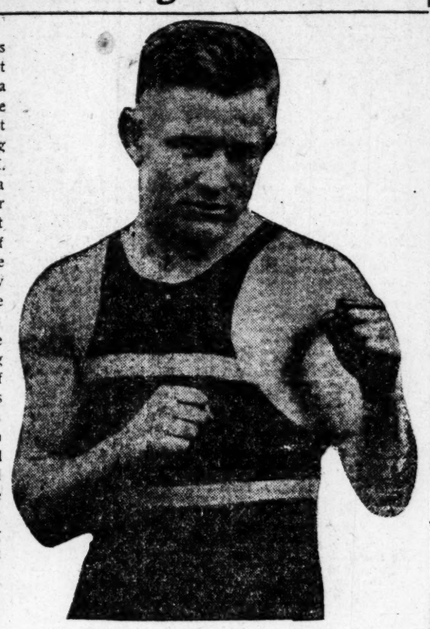

"My darter; wasn't she lucky? By the way you haven't paid your five shillings yet."

"No," said George. "Wasn't I lucky?"

Cayote Charley had a wonderfully good lawyer when he was tried for mail robbery." "Yes," aswered Cactus Joe. "Crimson Gulch is thinkin' serious of sendin' a committee around to that lawyer to inquire why such a smart, high-toned feller as he seems could take sides with such a lowdown specimen."—Washington Star.

Fights Tonight at Fort

Two champions will meet tonight when Larry Avera goes on in the main go of a Fort McPherson boxing show against K. O. Moore. Avera claims the junior welterweight championship of the south, while Moore, recently transferred here from Panama, is reported to have licked everything in the vicinity of the canal. This will be Avera's first showing in the neighborhood of Atlanta all summer and he should exhibit some of the big improvement that has made him a favorite in three Florida cities.

LARRY AVERA.

Avera To Meet K. O. Moore Tonight at Fort McPherson

Larry Avera, junior welterweight champion of the south, and K. O. Moore, welter champ of the Fourth corps area of the army, meet tonight in the feature 10-round bout of the first series of cards arranged for this winter at Fort McPherson. The battle should provide all the action and punching that fans can stand in one show.

Final workouts for tonight's fight which will be put on with ringside tickets at one fish per head were taken yesterday by both of the main-bout boys. Avera did light work only, while Moore found a new sparring partner who was unaware of the power of his poke and polished his knuckles for the scrap.

Four preliminary bouts have been arranged with some mighty good boys showing in six and eight-round bouts. All of the short-distance boys are champions of their organizations at Fort McPherson. The show is scheduled to start at 8 o'clock.

Indications taken from the advance sale of tickets at Chess' Place and the Rex poolroom have caused the athletic officer at Fort McPherson to add several ringside rows to take care of the crowd that is expected to go out from Atlanta to see the battle. A big representation from East Point, College Park and Hapeville is also expected.

Avera has become one of the best drawing cards available in Florida cities, having recently set a record for a crowd in Jacksonville. He has been whipping good welters and junior welters in Jacksonville, Pensacola and Tampa. Among his recent victims is Charley Pitts, who won a decision over Lew Tendler and fought Benny Leonard two no-decision bouts.

Moore has whipped everything in the army posts of Panama, where he was stationed until recently, and since coming to Fort McPherson has whipped everything of his weight there, including Walloping Wop, who was the army's outstanding contender for junior welterweight honors until Avera won a technical knockout over him last spring here.

Harris Will Send Johnson Against New York Today

BY STANLEY HARRIS.

Manager and Second Baseman, Washington American League Champions, 1924.

New York, October 7.—Gothamites got their first glimpse of Freddy Marberry today and it no doubt reminded them of the days when they used to look at Otis Crandall, the great Giant relief pitcher. Freddy Marberry today stands as the greatest relief pitcher in the big leagues. Outside of Otis Crandall, there never was another like him. If anything happens tomorrow he will be right back there in the box pitching his shirt sleeves off to give Washington another victory. When it comes to saving a situation, Freddy Marberry is as dependable as a lifeguard at Atlantic City.

In the last inning, with two men on bases, the Giant rooters no doubt had hopes that Kelly would tie the score with a home run. It could have been done. It was very noticeable that he was swinging hard to get on. In plain words, that was just meat for Marberry. Any time they start swinging hard on him, Freddy laughs the laugh of laughs.

Mogridge, up to the time it was apparent that he was forcing himself, did remarkable work on the mound. Then he lost control. His wildness probably came about from exhaustion. Mogridge no doubt tired, and we took him out merely to make sure of this game. He had gone full speed ahead in an attempt to keep the Giants under control, and he succeeded. Marberry then took up where he left off with the results mentioned. Up to the time he went out, Mogridge had the Giants eating out of his hands.

McNeely to Make Good.

Today was the first chance the Giants' followers had to take a peek at McNeely, and the boy must have looked like a million dollars to them. He had everything that a player needs—confidence, assurance and ability to come through in the pinches, both at bat and in the field. Although he had no occasion to do anything sensational in the field, his hitting and base-running were away above par. He certainly gave a great account of himself.

With all due respect to everybody else, we've got to give "Goose" Goslin the works. On all sides I have heard many comments from the fans, but most of all they regret the fact that there has been no Babe Ruth in the series. They sort of hate to see the Babe up in the press stands, writing of the series, when he should be down on the field batting out home runs. Well, after what happened today, I should imagine that another Babe Ruth has been discovered. The ball that "Goose" Goslin hit into the stands, scoring McNeely and myself, was absolutely the hardest hit of the series. It was good for a home run on any field. In Washington it would have cleared the right field fence, or gone over the temporary pavillion stands, whichever way it was headed. Goose met this like a head-on railroad collision. In Goslin I think that Washington has the nearest approach to Babe Ruth in baseball. Only yesterday the great Goose Goslin, of Washington, made a star out of Frisch, but today he took it upon himself to put the balls where Frisch's hands would never touch them. They were all clean-cut drives off Goslin's bat.

Johnson To Pitch.

Walter Johnson will take his turn in the box tomorrow, and all the world knows what that means; at least the baseball world does. The old master never felt better. He worked out in the bull-pen this afternoon and reported to Mike Martin that his arm is in first-class condition. Breaks of the game made him lose his first chance at a world series game, breaks or no breaks, I look for him to cop tomorrow's entry and by a good margin. The team is hitting and with this sort of stuff going on behind Walter Johnson there is only one answer. We are going to back to Washington one to the good.

Our third base coach and comedian, Al Schacht, will be among those missing when the Washington club lines up against the Giants for the fifth battle of the series. This is because of Yom Kippur. During his absence, however, Al promises to pray for victory. So I am sure that his prayer will be answered. The whole club feels the same way. Each and every man knows now that the Giants, as a team are no better than Washington, that we should have won the first game, if breaks had come our way, and that the game we lost to New York on the first day here was merely a let-down after the first strenuous games.

Either team might have won that contest and neither one entitled to gloat over the victory.

Today's game was a semblance of what even a crippled team might do, when properly pressed. And we are out for everything the world has to offer in pennants. We've got one, and we're now on the way to another.

Senators Happy.

On one score we are all happy, and that is this: Every ball player on the Washington club is tickled to death at the opportunity.

With the way Washington was going today, the New York players did not have a Chinaman's chance to prove their fielding ability. Most of the Washington team was hitting them where they weren't. And that spins a yarn. Even though Ruel has failed to hit safely during the present series, the catching of little "Muddy" Ruel has been remarkable.

I never saw anything like it. He doesn't have to hit, just so long as he continues to support the pitchers the way he has, and to play ball like he has played it, since we took on the Giants. Yet, should the series go into the seventh game, and the opportunity presents itself, I'd like to make a bet that "Muddy" would be the man to break it up. He has been in batting slumps before and has come out at the opportune moment. A game little youngster, there is nothing impossible to him so long as a game is in progress. Keep your eye on Ruel.

It isn't any secret that the Washington club has missed Roger Peckinpaugh. Not only have we missed him, but we miss him all the time. In today's game, however, Bluege filled Peck's place better than anybody that could be picked for the position, no matter from what league.

Bean, the high-priced pitcher from the Louisville club, was greeted with a double from Bluege's bat, a hit that sent in Goslin and Judge. It looked like the end of the world to me, or, I might say, the end of the world's series. It's just a matter of time when Bluege will take Peck's place and be as great as Roger, who is rated as one of the greatest shortstops who ever played the position.

LA PALOMA IS LA FAYETTE WINNER

Lexington, Ky., October 7.—(By the Associated Press.)—High-class racing was continued at the grand circuit meeting here today when four races, featured by the Lafayette for 2:09 pacers, were given. The Lafayette was won by F. P. Fox's La Paloma, driven by Clair Wolverton. The two miles in 2:02 3-4 and 2:01 3-4 were each better than the previous record for the stake.

The 2:07 trot was hard fought before going to Trampabit. Trampabit, Dr. White and Emma Harvester got into a jam at the head of the stretch, in which Drivers Cox and Dickerson were thrown. None of the horses or drivers were injured.

The three-year-old Bellaire proved a big surprise in the 2:13 trot. Skeeler W. won the first and third heat and the race in the 2:08 pace.

ARREST FORMER PLAYER DURING LIQUOR RAID

Sacramento, Cal., October 7.—Joe Gedson, baseball player, dropped from the St. Louis Browns because of knowledge he had of the 1919 world series scandal, was arrested yesterday in the campaign to clean up liquor conditions in Sacramento county.

Stiles Horse Beats Entry Of Candler in 2:15 Trot; Jewelry Beats Old Mark

The tightest competition that has been seen so far in the Southeastern Fair races this year at Lakewood brought the stands up yesterday in the 2:15 trot with Bay Rum, by Baldwin, a George Stiles entry, and Axson, by Axvolo, driven by Walter Candler, pulling away from the field for first and second places.

Candler drove Axson to nose out Bay Rum in the first heat, going the mile in 2:11 1-4. In the second heat, Bay Rum, in a spurt of speed in the last quarter, pulled in ahead of the Candler horse. In the last and deciding heat, Candler and Stiles drove into the lead at the quarter post and held with Candler gaining on the last half to make a strong bid for a win, when Axson broke 5C yards from the wire. The time on the second heat was 2:11 1-4 and on the third heat 2:12.

A feature of the day's light harness program was the mile I. P. Russell, of Stevenson, Ala., drove Jewelry, bay filly by Peter Chenault, 2:14 1-2 to beat a mark of 2:14 3-4.

Peter Delano, a four-year-old by Peter Volo, owned by I. P. Russell and son and driven by Sanders Russell, won the last two heats and the race in the 2:24 trot, with Glorious Watts, by Gen. Watts, driven by George Stiles, taking the first heat for a close second. The time on the 2:24 trot was 2:15 1-4, 2:15 1-4 and 2:15 1-2.

Announcement was made yesterday of an event just scheduled which promises to pack the stands at the fair grounds. Peter Green and the Great Lullwater, two Candler grand circuit horses that have shown remarkably well this season at all circuit meetings, will run a match race Friday afternoon.

The program for today calls for three events, with a free-for-all pace featured. The other events will be the 2:11 trot and the 2:15 pace.

Four horses are entered in the free-for-all pace with Peter Green, by Peter Scott, a Candler entry, and Harvest Day, owned by J. A. Smith, and winner Monday, strong favorites over American Man, by Northern Man, and Astrola, by Astrol. Peter Green and Harvest Day both are grand circuit horses which have been well up in the money during the past summer.

CLAPMAN HERE FOR MAT GO

Sam Clapham, champion heavyweight wrestler of the British Isles, and to the wrestling game what Carpentier was to the fight business in the way of dressing, arrived in Atlanta last night ready to meet Charles Rentrop, of Little Rock, Ark., in the finish match Thursday night at the city auditorium.

Clapham told Matchmaker Elberfeld that he has never been in better condition and that he will make it a rough evening for the Little Rock star. "I hear this Rentrop is next to Lewis in the use of the headlock, and that he has tremendous speed, and he'll need it all," Clapham told Elberfeld.

Clapham has been wrestling in all the biz centers of the sport during the past several months, and has never failed to get over big with the fans. He not only is of pleasing appearance, but also is one of the best grapplers in the business.

Rentrop has been working out daily since he defeated Chet Sarles last week, pinning the latter's shoulders twice to the mat within an hour.

This is the second wrestling show to be staged by the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. A. Harbort, commander of the organization in Georgia, will referee the main match of the evening.

HARD GRID SCHEDULE FOR NEWNAN HIGH

Newnan, Ga., October 7.—(Special). The Newnan High school football team has the hardest schedule arranged for this season the school has ever had. On next Friday the local team will meet the strong Columbus high, in Columbus.

Newnan High was very fortunate in securing Johnie Varnedoe as coach. Varnedoe played quarterback for Oglethorpe for the past four years and was mentioned for all-Southern by several of the sport writers. The local team is very light but Varnedoe has developed two backfield men, Taylor and Barron, who will give any team something to worry about. Bevis, Newnan's full back, was injured while playing against Carrollton last Saturday and Newnan's chances of winning next Friday will be greatly lessened. Bevis is the best fullback the Newnan team has had in years. Nixon, at right guard, has also developed into a good player.

SENATORS BEAT GIANTS IN FOURTH, TYING SERIES

Harris Won Game on Desperate Chance--McNutt

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, October 7.—The "Goose" hangs high in Washington tonight, for Leon Goslin, slugging pride of the Senators and favorite of their fans, clubbed the New York Giants into defeat today almost singlehanded and put the American league champions back in the thick of one of baseball's greatest championship battles.

Another record-breaking crowd, exceeding 50,000 all told, stormed the Polo Grounds and cheered the Senators as they pulled themselves together in spite of a makeshift infield caused by the loss of Peckinpaugh, battered three Giant pitchers and captured the fourth game of the 1924 world series by a score of 7 to 4, the most decisive verdict of any game so far.

The series now stands at two-all, and the fifth game, which is likely to witness a repetition of the opening struggle between Walter Johnson, the Senator's wonderful right-hand veteran, and Art Nehf, brilliant Giant southpaw, will be played tomorrow at the Polo Grounds. The battleground will shift back to Washington on Thursday, for a sixth game is now assured, with a likelihood the series will go to the limit of seven games.

Accounts for Five Runs.

Five of the Senators' runs today, alone enough to cinch the game, were accounted for by "Goose" Goslin, who hammered out four hits in as many times at bat, including his second home run of the series which scored two runs ahead of him in the third inning and gave Washington a lead which it never relinquished.

While the slow southpaw curves of George Mogridge and the relief pitching of Fred ("Firpo") Marberry, again successful in his favorite role, kept the Giants in check, the Senators bunched their attack in three innings and Goslin was the dominating figure each time.

The offering of Virgil Barnes, who retired after being bombarded for five innings, and Wayland Dean, who finished the game [illegible] Howard Baldwin had got through two innings unscathed, proved particularly relishing "sauce" for Goslin. In addition to his homer, a terrific drive that sailed on a line far into the right field stands, the "Goose" brought Harris across in the fifth after a wild pitch had let in McNeely and started another two-run rally in the eighth with his fourth hit, scoring ahead of Joe Judge on Oscar Bluege's third safe blow of the game.

Goose Idol of Crowd.

The "Goose's" spectacular slugging made him not only the hero of the day, but the idol of the crowd which, after his circuit clout, gave him an ovation scarcely less vociferous than that of his own followers after his first homer, a potent factor in Washington's triumph on Sunday.

The crowd, as yesterday, was "with" the fighting Senators and their youthful pilot, Stanley Harris, who also was a scintillating figure at bat and afield today. The Giants came in for their share of cheering, particularly when in a fashion which has become typical to the series, they rallied in the closing innings, but the crowd's noisiest applause was with Washington and Goslin. There was another din of cheering for the "Goose" when he came out to the field after his home run and displayed his versatility by making a circus catch of a long drive off Wilson's bat.

Meanwhile the Giants were baffled by the southpaw shoots of Mogridge, former New York Yankee moundsman, who silenced the heaviest New York artillery with a puzzling change of pace and a tantalizing slow ball. For seven innings the McGraw men gathered but three hits off Mogridge and two runs, one of which was due to an error and the other to a two-base blow by George Kelly, but in the eighth, the southpaw developed a sudden streak of wildness and, despite a five run lead, was hastily withdrawn by Harris after the first two men to face him had walked.

Marberry Stems Tide.

Into this critical situation strode Marberry, hero in a relief role in the second game but a "bust" yesterday when he started for the Senators and was hammered from the hill. Marberry who apparently is only at his best when performing a rescue act, met and turned back a determined Giant attack in both the eighth and ninth innings.

"Hack" Wilson, the first to face Marberry in the eighth, clouted a two-bagger that scored Young, while in the ninth, Gowdy's single, a freak wild throw by Rice which caroomed off first base for a two base error, and Lindstrom's third hit produced another run. Lindstrom advancing on a pass to Frisch, got to third when Young forced the Giant captain but Marberry tightened and struck out George Kelly on three pitched balls.

This finish was dramatically similar to that of the second game when Marberry, relieving Zachary, came to the mound in the ninth with the bases full, two out, the score tied and struck out Travis Jackson on three pitched balls.

The big twirler now has saved the Senators in two crucial moments, but he gets no credit in the official reckoning for either. The credit he was first given for winning the second game was taken away from him yesterday by the official scoring board and given to Zachary, while today Mogridge departed with a lead which the Senators held intact to the finish.

Washington's devastating attack, in which 13 solid blows were combed from the offerings of McGraw's three moundsmen, made up for flaws in the defense of the Senators, due chiefly to the loss of Peckinpaugh, still on the sidelines as a result of a "charley horse" or pulled tendon, and the consequent breaking up of their brilliant infield combination. Two of the team's three errors paved the way for Giant runs.

Harris Also Stars.

"Bucky" Harris shared with Goslin and Marberry in the day's spotlight. Pulling his men together after yesterday's disastrous setback, the young leader scintillated on the defense, besides scoring two runs and figuring largely in the attack which also saw Oscar Bluege and Earl McNeely regain their batting eyes for the first time in the series. Singles by McNeely and Harris were the opening shots in two of Washington's barrages, while Bluege's smash brought across two tallies in the eighth.

Harris ranged over a wide stretch of territory afield, handling 10 chances faultlessly and making two remarkable stops in the seventh that rivalled some of the performances yesterday of Frisch, who had no opportunity to repeat his miraculous work this afternoon. On the first of these plays, Harris nipped Gowdy after bagging his hot shot over second base, while a few moments later he raced back behind first to get Frisch's ground clinger and nail his man at first.

The Giants, on the other hand, failed at anytime to wheel their attacking machinery into formidable position. Collecting only six hits altogether off Mogridge and Marberry, they registered no more than one in any inning before the ninth, when "Firpo" checked their best-scoring opportunity.

Today's record crowd represented a paid attendance of 49,243 and receipts of $191,677. This eclipsed the previous high figures of 47,608 and $186,572 for the Polo Grounds set in yesterday's game.

Slugging Senator and Twirler Who Started

GOOSE GOSLIN

GEORGE MOGRIDGE

The sore-armed pitcher on whom Bucky Harris gambled and won. Mogridge held well until the Senators were well in the lead yesterday and then gave way to Marberry.

GOSLIN BATTED TIMELY, SAYS SAMMY

BY SAMMY RICE
Star Outfielder of the Washington Senators.

New York, October 7.—George Mogridge did his stuff.

So did Goose Goslin, Manager Bucky Harris and Earl McNeely, our rookie center fielder.

Don't forget to give Earl credit. He has had the breaks in the series against him up to this time. But whenever they pitch 'em on the outside of the plate to this kid, he's going to get hits. Barnes and Baldwin both made that mistake. And McNeely came through.

I mention this to show that we were out to win today's game. We didn't waste any time in starting either. Goslin hit the first ball pitched in the groove to him every time.

We were fighting mad, that's all. The Giants had us in a hole in this world series when we started to play. And when the Washington club gets in a hole it's going to show fight.

It was a great sight seeing Mogridge pitch such brilliant ball. George had waited for this chance. He saw that his arm was right. Went out there and used every ounce of his energy to make his deliveries too good for the Giant batters, the same ones who routed four of our pitchers the day before.

In fact he twisted up puzzlers so much in seven innings he didn't have to finish out the nine. Marberry gave him a lift, but George had won his game and won it very impressively.

I was also glad Marberry made good in the relief role. He's a greater pitcher than yesterday's box score indicated.

SIG'S MACHINE BACK IN SHAPE

Sig Haugdahl, world speed king and three-mile-a-minute dare-devil, who defeated Fred Horey last Saturday afternoon in a world championship I. M. C. A. match race, met with bad luck with another of his mounts yesterday when one or more of Atlanta's bold bandits drove off with the Haugdahl sedan and left it sitting by the side of the road, minus tires and a few other odds and ends.

Haugdahl's first bad luck came when he burned out a main bearing in the wonder car during a speed trial at Lakewood last Saturday. The little Norwegian is getting the big space-eater back in shape now, however, and says that he will make one more attempt with the beach car to lower the world's record on the Atlanta track, and if it fails he will bring the fleet little Miller, a companion car, with Fred Horey's mount and the same machine with which he defeated Ralph De Palma in a special Ascot speedway match race to Atlanta.

Record-Breaker.

Haugdahl managed to break the Canadian dirt-track record and his own two, three, four and five-mile marks with the car this spring for half-mile tracks. All of these records were formally held with the wonder car.

Manager Striplin, of the fair association, and racing officials have offered Haugdahl a handsome purse if he can bring a world record to the Atlanta track.

Bo Murray, late of the Hawthorne and Robey speedways, who wheeled Bob Luton's Marmon to a victory in an early event Saturday, is rapidly getting his Frontenac speed creation in shape so that it will be ready for the closing-day contests. Murray is installing a new crankshaft.

Chief Twoguns, Indian pilot, who came to the races Saturday without a car, is still putting up arguments to the effect that his mount will be on deck for the October 11 races.

SERIES OUTCASTS VISIT LANDIS

New York, October 7.—Cozy Dolan and Jimmy O'Connell, former members of the New York Giants, have called upon Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis at his hotel here, Dolan to protest at his expulsion from baseball.

O'Connell, Landis said later, made no change in his confession that he attempted to bribe Shortstop Sand, of the Philadelphia Nationals.

Cozy told the commissioner that his "I-do-not-remember" answers at the hearing were simply his personal style of saying "That is not true."

The bribery investigation will be opened, Landis said, if new evidence appears, but there is no change in the status of Dolan or O'Connell.

Wig wearing was at its height about 150 years ago, when even boys four or five years of age had their heads shaved in readiness to wear a wig.

Pegler Says Only Ninth Inning Is Necessary

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, October 7.—The world series of 1924 begins Wednesday afternoon at the Polo grounds and all the tonsilitis of the customers, the bruises of the athletes, the home runs and errors thus far incurred in four ball games will have to be regarded as needless waste in the war between Washington and New York.

The Senators brought the score to evens Tuesday when Bill Marberry, Washington's stretcher-bearer, exhumed himself from the the dugout and dragged in the victory from a very exposed position on the hill. Seven to four was the score, the Senators, need it be said, tossing the natural and the Giants the little Joe. went to bat in the ninth with a four-run lead, the score then being 7 to 3.

Contest Ahead.

However, this game and the three that went before it to the accompaniment of cheers for the Washington team and sneers for the Giants, may now be regarded as practice matches, and the important squabbles, if any of these proceedings may be called important, will be the games of the next three days, barring rain.

Walter Johnson, beaten after 12 innings in his first world series game, probably will get a second chance Wednesday on the velvet of the Polo grounds or Thursday in the snug light hall-room stadium named after Clark Griffith in Washington.

Some of the customers have suggested that in justice to those who pay the scalpers' maximum price of $30 a seat for tickets to the first matches, the last games should be played first. Also, it would shorten and sweeten the pleasure if these teams henceforth would play only one inning, the ninth, inasmuch as every one of the four contests to date has concentrated its drama in the final spasm.

Ninth Innings Fatal.

The Senators tied the score in the ninth in the first game; won in the ninth of the second. On both days in New York the losing side has populated the bases and scored a run amid the racket of a vast crowd in the throes of emotion, as the sun slumped over the grandstand roof.

In the ninth Marberry struck out Jack Bentley, the Giants' left-hand pitcher who has a habit of hitting home runs, and George Kelly, the tall walloper who has been operating on a sort of roving commission with the Giants at center field, second base and first. Some untidy fielding and throwing let another run in for the Giants, but on the whole the barefoot boy from the Ozarks may be said to have saved another game of cricket for the Senators.

Accustomed to Series.

The affected cities are becoming accustomed to the series now, and beginning Wednesday there will be tickets for sale at the box offices. In Washington a customer who asked for a ticket at the box office for either of the first two games was regarded as a harmless imbecile. In New York the customers knew better, but they have had years of experience by which to learn that world series tickets are bought in hallways and cigar stores, but never at the box offices.

Hank Gowdy, the Giants' catcher, was shot in the right foot by a throw from Rice in right field for the Senators as he rounded first base in Tuesday's ninth inning, and decided to take a taxi to his hotel instead of walking. When a ball player does this it may be assured that his condition is very grave, so perhaps Gowdy will have to quit the lineup Wednesday.

BILLY M'GOWAN MEETS VARELLAS

Billy McGowan, local light-heavyweight, will journey over to Montgomery, Ala., Monday evening to engage in a ten-round set-to with Joe Varellas, a 162-pound scrapper from Washington, according to announcement made by McGowan.

The local pugilist wired officials at Montgomery that he would scrap anybody in his class they would name, and they named Varellas. McGowan now tips the scales at 164 pounds and a few ounces.

Washington Pilot Gambled With Sore-Armed Pitcher And He Turned the Trick

BY WILLIAM SLAVENS McNUTT.

New York, October 7.—The Washington ball club picked itself up out of the gutter of defeat here on Tuesday, took a desperate shot of hope in the old arm and tore into the master mind's murderous men as though they were a flock of vegetarian bush leaguers.

When the frenzy was over Washington had won, 7 to 4, and the series was all even once more.

Bucky Harris pulled one for the book by gambling with Sore-Arm Mogridge and then sticking in Marberry, the famous pitching shock troop, when the old southpaw's soupbone gave out in the eighth. In that frame poor Mogridge walked two men and had pitched two balls to Wilson when Bucky Harris cantered into the field, squatted in the box and talked the matter over.

Mogridge admitted that he couldn't hit the general vicinity of the home plate any longer with a .22 rifle, not to speak of a baseball, and he blew for the club house, trotting blithely, as Marberry came in to stamp the seal on the victory his predecessor had won.

Barnes started for the Giants looking like one million American gold in Moscow. He got McNeely, Harris and Rice in order. Mogridge on the other hand began by walking Lindstrom. He looked like an unshaven tramp with one German mark in his jeans at dinner in the Ritz with a chorus girl. Not so good.

Bad for Mogridge.

Lindstrom was given first on balls. With the count three and two, Frisch died, Harris to Judge, and Lindstrom took second on the play. Young then hit to Bluege, who threw wild to Judge, and Lindstrom scored. The Washington rooters began asking the price of crepe. Kelly flied out to deep center and Young went to second after the catch. Meusel walked. It was the second base on balls for the inning. Mogridge stock was for sale cheap. Wilson then acted the part of a gentleman and got himself put out, Harris to Judge.

The Giants were one to the merry, and it seemed probable that adding machines would be necessary to keep track of the Giants' scores. The second was just a scoreless inning of baseball for both sides, except for the fact that Goslin, the Golden Goose of Potomac Town, started his day-long insanity of base hits by banging out a single.

Then came the third and merry murder. Mogridge began it unauspiciously by striking out. McNeely singled to left. Harris refused to permit one of his mere men to outdo him in effort and singled to right. McNeely went to second. Rice then hit a hot one to Frisch and the Giant captain proved that he was human by juggling the ball for a moment.

He got Rice at first in spite of the delay, but there were men on second and third, and Goslin, the Great, was at the bat. The Golden Goose took a Babe Ruth cut at the ball and cracked it deep into the right-field stands for a homer. Three runs crossed the plate, and from the cheers that greeted the Washington men as they tallied one might have been pardoned for thinking that the Polo grounds had been moved to the national capital.

The New York crowd was rooting hard for the visiting team. One might go further and say that the Washington club at the Polo grounds today was practically the home team. Apparently the Giants have no home. Certainly the crowd roared approval whenever the men of the mighty McGraw took a sock on the chin. Judge finished the thrilling third by rolling out, Kelly to Barnes.

The two-run lead that Goslin's homer dumped into Mogridge's lap had a salutary effect on the left-arm lame duck. He struck out Young and Kelly and accounted for Meusel on a fly to left. The fourth was a fast one with nothing doing for either side. The first of the fifth was different. McNeely singled to left. Harris got a mighty hand as he came to bat. He responded to the ovation by whanging a single to right. Rice took third on the play, beating the throw in by an eyelash.

Pulling for Washington.

Rice came up with the crowd stamping in unison for a Washington tally. The demonstration for the visitors must have unnerved Barnes, for he pulled a wild pitch that went to the press box and McNeely scored. Rice popped out then and Goslin came up to do his customary stuff. He singled to right and Harris scored. Judge then flied out and Goslin proved that he can hit better than he can run by losing the decision on an attempted steal of second. Two more runs for poor old Washington.

The game was just a game from then until the last of the sixth, when the gibbering Giants plucked one more run out of the mess on a double by Kelly and infield clouts by Meusel and Wilson.

The seventh was a blank for both sides. Goslin was up first for Washington in the eighth and made it a perfect hitting day for himself by singling to left. Judge also singled to left. Meusel did a vaudeville act with the ball all by himself, and while he was tossing it here and there about his head and heels, Goslin went to third and Judge to second. Bluege then doubled to left, just to keep Meusel busy, and both Goslin and Judge scored. Ruel popped out to Kelly. Miller popped to Frisch and Mogridge struck out. Two more runs.

It was evident in the beginning of the second half of the eighth that Lame-Arm Mogridge was done. He walked Young, got Kelly on a long fly to center and then walked Meusel. With two on he pitched two balls to Wilson and turned over the ballgame to Marberry. Wilson doubled to right off Marberry and Young scored but Meusel was out attempting to get home. Then Jackson grounded out and that crisis was passed with only one run in.

Giants In Final Bid.

McNeely, Harris and Rice went out in order for Washington in the first of the ninth and the Giants made their final bid for a victory. Gowdy singled to right and went all the way to third when Rice made a horribly wild throw to Marberry at first. Bentley, pinchhitting for Dean, struck out, but Lindstrom singled over second and Gowdy scored. Frisch walked and with two on and one down Pep Young tried to pick himself a niche

Mrs. Bradley, Miss O'Brien In Championship Flight

The first round of match play in the Woman's Golf tournament for the city championship was played at East Lake Country club with all favorites winning their matches.

In the championship flight, Mrs. Clarence Bradley defeated Mrs. L. H. Beck three up and two to play.

Miss Mae O'Brien defeated Mrs. J. E. Jagoe four up and two to play.

Mrs. T. T. Williams defeated Mrs. Cyrus Strickler two up and one to play.

In the lower racket of the championship flight, Mrs. L. J. Robinson defeated Mrs. Charles Van Cornell, four up and two to play. Miss Don M. Dickinson won from Miss Douglas Paine by default. Mrs. Charles Collier defeated Mrs. Howard Muse, four up and three to play, and Mrs. Dozier Lowndes defeated Mrs. L. Warren Granade five up and four to play.

Mrs. Harllee Wins.

In the second flight Mrs. Marion Harllee defeated Mrs. C. F. Humphrey two up. Mrs. Lois Patello Neer defeated Mrs. W. M. Otey three up and two to play. Mrs. Elanor McAuliffe defeated Mrs. Joe Ness four up and three to play, and Mrs. Jesse Daniel defeated Mrs. Herman Gableman one up in 19 holes, this being the only match that went into extra holes. Mrs. Daniel was four up on the eighth hole. Coming in, Mrs. Galleman won the ninth hole and turned three down. On the tenth hole Mrs. Gableman holed out an approach shot, from off the green for a win. Mrs. Daniel won the 11th and went three up again. Mrs. Gableman won the 12th and 13th, cutting Mrs. Daniel's lead to one up. Mrs. Daniel won the 14th and 15th, going three up and three to go.

After being dormie 3, Mrs. Gableman staged a fine rally and won the next three holes, evening the match on the 18th green. In the play-off Mrs. Gableman was trapped on her third shot, while Mrs. Daniel was hole-high on the green in three. Mrs. Gableman failed to clear the trap and was on the green in 5 and away after failing to hole her putt, Mrs. Gableman picked up, conceding the match. Mrs. Daniel had three putts for a win.

May Upset Dope.

The dope bucket is liable to be upset in some of the matches today. At this stage of the tournament it is impossible to pick the players that will reach the finals. In the upper bracket of the championship division are Mrs. Clarence Bradley, Miss Mae O'Brien, Miss Jimmie Patillo and Mrs. T. T. Williams, and in the lower bracket are Mrs. J. J. Robinson, who was runner-up to Mrs. Lowndes last year; Mrs. Don M. Dickinson; Mrs. Charles Collier and the present champion, Mrs. Dozier Lowndes. At least the majority of the matches in the championship flight promise to be very close.

In the championship flight Mrs. Clarence Bradley plays Miss Mae O'Brien, Mrs. T. T. Williams plays Miss Jimmie Pattillo, Mrs. L. J. Robinson plays Mrs. Don M. Dickinson and Mrs. Charles Collier plays Mrs. Dozier Lowndes.

Championship Consolation Flight.

Mrs. L. H. Beck plays Mrs. J. E. Jagoe, Mrs. C. W. Strickler plays Mrs. K. B. Hancock, Mrs. Charles V. Cornell plays Miss Douglas Paine and Mrs. Howard Muse plays Mrs. L. Warren Granade.

Second Flight.

Mrs. Marion Harllee plays Mrs. Jesse Daniel and Mrs. Lois Pattillo Neer plays Mrs. Elanor McAuliffe.

BY EMMETT SIZEMORE.

Auburn, Ala., October 7.—(Special.)—With the Birmingham-Southern and Clemson college games now numbered among those of the past, the Auburn Tiger turns eastward. Next Saturday up in Richmond, Va., the Pittsmen will meet the fast Virginia Polytechnic institute eleven from Blacksburg, Va. Last Saturday while the Auburnites were grappling with the Clemson Tiger, the Virginians were administering defeat to the Hampton-Sidney outfit, the score resulting in a 10-to-0 decision. The previous Saturday the Virginia Techmen took the measure of the University of Richmond eleven by a 28-to-0 score.

The Gobblers from the Virginia institution are said to have a team of plenty of weight, averaging around 189 pounds at the opening of the season, and coupled with this poundage not a little speed has been evidenced in their games thus far this season.

'Tis true that Bob Baker, their star center, was disqualified early in the season, but reliable information says that his place has been filled with worthy pivot men since that date. Again it is said that a quartet of backs in the personages of Rutherford, De La Barre, Moss and Esleeck are capable of putting on a mighty offensive behind their line, whose weight compares favorably with that of other class A college teams. Green, one of the Gobbler flankmen, is said to measure up with any end man in that section.

Iron Out Kinks.

The Tigers devoted Monday afternoon to unloosening kinked muscles and sprains sustained in the Clemson fracas. Formation drill and a few new formations was another feature of the Monday's practice period. Fortunately, with the exception of minor sprains and bruises the Orange and Blue gridmen pulled past Saturday's tilt with few injuries that amount to anything.

The Clemson-Auburn game was highly pleasing to the hundreds of Tiger supporters who had journeyed to the college city to witness Auburn's first classic of the '24 season. The Tiger coaches express themselves well pleased with the early season showing made by the team in most of its departments last Saturday, and against such opposition as Coach Saunders' Clemson aggregation presented.

Here and now, we wish to make a correction in the account of the Auburn-Clemson game reported to the press and appearing in the Sunday papers. It was Ernest Emmett Williams, of Chattanooga, Tenn., that scored the touchdown and kicked the additional point after he had already centered the uprights on two long trys from placement.

Williams Scored All.

In other words, the Chattanooga lad did all the scoring in the game, totaling the entire 13 points by the three-way method of placement kicks, touchdown and goal after touchdown. It was reported that "Salty" Salter, Tiger fullback, bucked the ball across for the only touchdown after he had hammered through the Clemson line for nice gains repeatedly, but as the end line was neared—only about two yards away—the Clemson forces concentrated against the ramming Salter and Dean Peterson, quarter, resorted to the fine strategy of letting the Clemsonites stop Salter and let Williams leap over the mass for the successful termination of the fine offensive carried from mid-field by Peterson, Green, Salter and Williams.

In making this correction it is not to be forgotten that Salter, Green and Peterson contributed generously to the yardage that placed the oval in the position near the end line.

In the midst of the wild cheering demonstration put on by the stands and crowded sidelines the word came to the ticker section that Salter had made the final leap and such report was accepted as authentic, but later investigations revealed the error.

Nehf Is Out With Hurt Hand

New York, October 7.—Arthur Nehf, Giant southpaw who won over Walter Johnson in the opening game of the world series, may not be able to pitch any more during the series because of an injured hand, Manager McGraw announced tonight.

"Nehf's hand was hurt when he stopped a liner in the first game," McGraw said. "I will use him tomorrow if he is able to pitch, but he could not have worked today and I have no strong hopes of his playing tomorrow. Bentley or John Watson will be sent against Johnson if Nehf is unable to hurl."

Rider Kirkland Hurt In Horse Show Spill

After riding Golden Maiden, his mount, over the jumps to a perfect score in the elimination, C. H. Kirkland, instructor at the Ponce de Leon Riding academy, on the second jump in the second trial in the horse show yesterday at Lakewood was thrown to the ground, pinned down by his horse and seriously injured.

Kirkland came a cropper when his horse's front knees smashed solidly against the rigid part of the plank barrier used on the second jump. The horse's head went down and as it rolled over, it fell squarely on top of its rider.

Kirkland, attended by physicians called from the stands, was unconscious for 15 minutes and was just regaining consciousness when he was carried to Grady hospital in an ambulance. At Grady it was learned he had a fractured left wrist and that he was under observation to determine whether he was internally injured. Profuse loss of blood from his nose and mouth caused physicians at Grady hospital to watch for evidence of internal hurts.

The jump was only about four feet six inches, and the horse earlier in the day in practice had taken a barrier at six feet two inches.

Lieutenant J. T. Tarywick won first prize in the jumping class of the horse show, which is being conducted by Asa Patterson, well known Atlanta horseman. Lieutenant Traywick, on "Taps," made a perfect score in both the elimination and final event in which Kirkland spilled.

Second place in the jumping class went to Major H. J. Keeley, riding "Troy." Third was taken by Lieutenant Hugh Parker, riding "Hash Man."

Other horses entered, besides that ridden by Kirkland were:

"Somme," riden by Mr. Jeter; "Stede," ridden by Lieutenant Berry. "The Fan," owned by Holland Judkins and ridden by Captain Lawrence; "Big Enough," ridden by Lieutenant Parmley; "Schultz," ridden by Lieutenant Keilsmeyer; "Peggy," ridden by Tom Daniels, and "Billy," ridden by Robert Buechler.

The judging of the jumping class was preceded by judging of the plantation walk horses. First prize in this class was taken by "Kentucky," owned by John W. Grant and ridden by Robert Wheatley, of Augusta. Second went to "Sandy," owned and ridden by Frank Adair, and third went to "Queen," another Frank Adair horse, ridden by Warren O'Toole.

Theron P. by Rex Pevine, is owned by Quince A. Kennedy, of Williston, S. C. The horse has been trained under the watchful eye of Lee King at the Robert Fulton stables near Augusta, and to date this horse is unbeaten in the ring. Besides being entered at the Southeastern Fair, Thereon P is slated to appear at the Georgia State Fair, Savannah; South Carolina State Fair, Columbia, and also at Bishopville, S. C.

Another very interesting entry at the Southeastern Fair is Robert Fulton, representing the Robert Fulton hotel, which also entered Theron P. Robert Fulton was originally owned by the late Colonel Spencer C. Borden, sold for his estate through public auction and discovered in the auction ring at Columbia, S. C., by the experienced horseman, Sam Baron, of Augusta.

Jackets Solve Formations Of Gators at Scrimmage

BY JULIAN GRIFFIN.

The freshmen at Tech did their best against the varsity with Florida's formations, but were unable to make any gains to speak of. The first-year men did not register a single down, even with Wycoff, Williams, Reeves, Wilton, Nabelle and Markle, first-string backfield and ends, out of the fracas. The varsity had no apparent trouble in solving the dancing-shift formations.

The forward passes from 'Gator formations also were intercepted on several occasions. At one time "One-Minute" Connally, at halfback, intercepted a "'Gator" pass and returned it 80 yards for a touchdown, which caused his work to stand out for the varsity backfield.

Although the freshmen were unable to accomplish anything against the big boys during the scrimmage hour yesterday, they will be given another chance this afternoon. Wycoff and his first-string running-mates will probably get in for their share of the rough work today.

Work on Defense.

The varsity did not run with the ball much, preferring to punt it back to the freshmen and let them try it again. The Tech boys will be sitting pretty if they can solve the Florida plays Saturday as well as they did yesterday afternoon.

The backfield representing the varsity was composed of Connally and Angles, halves; Carter Barron, quarter, and McRae, fullback. The linesmen were Captain Gardner and Usury, tackles; Walt Godwin and "Little Six" Carpenter, guards; Johnny Flynn, center, and Marshall and Fair, ends.

It has been announced that invitations to attend the Florida game Saturday have been accepted by John W. Martin, governor-elect of Florida, Clifford Walker, governor of Georgia; Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Tech, and Dr. Albert A. Murphree, president of the University of Florida.

Attracting Attention.

The Florida game is attracting much attention in this section of the country and advance indications point to record attendance at the game. The 'Gators will be backed by a vast number of supporters, who will be out for blood. They are coming here for the purpose of seeing the Alligator swallow the Yellow Jacket, but—as others before them—they are liable to get stung.

Reports from Florida say they are coming with the determination to take the Jackets for a ride. It is certain to be one whale of a contest, regardless of the outcome.

Among thousands of others who will attend the game Saturday, there will be at least 320 stalwart young men, members of the various prep teams of Atlanta. Tech officials have mailed 20 tickets to 16 different prep-school teams of Atlanta. It was said that this invitation would be repeated every year. If so, the chances are very good that it will be unanimously accepted.

Tickets to the game were mailed to the following schools:

Boys' High, Decatur High, Tech High, Fulton High, Commercial High, Marist college, Kirkwood, East Point, G. M. A., University school, College Park and the four junior high schools, Hoke Smith, William A. Bass, Daniel O'Keefe and Joe Brown.

A little country girl went shopping in the city with her mother and saw an elevator for the first time. "How did you like it?" asked her father on her return. "Why, it was so funny, paper!" answered the child. "We went into a little house and the upstairs came down." — Everybody's Magazine.

HARRIS WON GAME ON DESPERATE CHANCE

in the world series hall of fame with a homer. The best he could do was force Frisch at second.

Still two on but now there were two out. Kelly was up. As every one knows he has a big bat full of home runs. A home run would have tied the score. But there were no home runs in the Kelly bat Wednesday. He struck out and the series was all square once more.

Washington won more than a ball game when they took that fourth fracas. They won the admiration of every watcher who admires courage. With Peck out and their pitchers wobbly they played game baseball. It's no cinch to play game baseball back of shaky pitching. Monday night Harris was all alone in a terrible hole Tuesday night he had company. McGraw was there in the hole with him.

If Johnson can win a game Harris will have Zachary rested for another try, and it is no sure bet right now that a visitor in the top of the Washington monument next summer won't be able to see the world series championship strip waving in the breeze over the ball park that at last has a club that is no joke. An aggregation of ball players that will fight the way the Harris men do are likely to beat almost any team any time.

PANAMA INDIANS SEEK TREASURES OF ANCIENT INCAS

New York, October 7.—Inspired possibly by the Egyptian discoveries at Luxor, the San Blas Indians in Panama have begun excavations among the 8,000-year-old tombs of Indian chieftains at Baquette, according to W. E. Flanagan, an engineer, who has just returned from Panama.

Solid gold hammered vases, flamingly beautiful pottery and heavy golden balls with bells inside them have been dug up. No mummies were discovered, as the Indians did not know the art of preserving the bodies of their dead.

Baquette is 350 miles from Panama City, Flanagan said, and is a hidden paradise which few white men have seen.

Flanagan's company is building a 70-mile railway through the jungle which will cost $4,500,000. When he sailed from Panama, President Pirras honored him by bestowing a kiss upon each of his cheeks.

Smith and Jones had a law suit. Smith sat in the court room before the case opened, with his witnesses around him. Then Jones bustled in. He stopped abruptly and looked Smith's witnesses over carefully. Presently he turned to Smith and asked: "Are these your witnesses?" "They are," Jones replied. "Then you win," Jones exclaimed. "I've had them witnesses twice myself."—Pathfinder.

Autumn Days Bring Lovely Events Including Many Teas and Dances

Fall weddings still hold the eyes of society, and for today there are three of much prominence. Miss Emma Laura Wesley will wed John Vernon Yost at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Pulaski J. Wesley at 559 West Peachtree at 8:30 o'clock this evening.

Miss Lillian Raley and Hugh Northcote Harding will marry this morning at 11 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Raley, on Fairview road.

Of interest to Atlantans is the wedding of Miss Georgia Byrd and George Scott Candler, which will be solemnized this evening at 8:30 o'clock in Lawrenceville.

The Debutante club will be entertained by Miss Aileen Harris this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of her mother, Mrs. Lucien Harris, 54 East 14th street.

The initial dinner-dance in a series of dances to be given every Wednesday evening, at the Biltmore hotel, to be known as "Debutant night" dances will claim the attention of much of Atlanta's society this evening.

Mrs. John Newton McEachern and Mrs. Douglas Rankin Manley will be joint hostesses at an elaborate reception this afternoon as a compliment to Mrs. John Newton McEachern, Jr.

Charity affairs are of prominence today, also, when the Young Woman's Hebrew association, will give a subscription dance at the Atlanta Woman's club, and the Witches club will entertain at a large benefit bridge party at the Ansley hotel roof for the Tallulah Falls school.

Miss Nash To Honor Miss Lockhart.

Miss Catherine Nash will entertain at a bridge-tea at her home in Sutherland terrace at 3 o'clock this afternoon for Miss Elizabeth Lockhart, whose wedding to Victor Manget Davis will be an interesting event of October 15.

Those invited are: Miss Helen Lockhart, Miss Edith Melton, Miss Evelyn Melton, Miss Elizabeth Blalock, Miss Mary Hewlett, Miss Montie Toomer, Miss Anna Harwell, Miss Mary Brown, Miss Virginia Watts, Miss Frances Hancock, Mrs. Augustine Sams, Mrs. James Burns, Mrs. Charles Hastings, Mrs. Frances Merriam, Mrs. Henry Wright and Mrs. Crandal Prescott.

Blackfriars To Present Midsummer Night's Dream.

Blackfriars, the dramatic club of Agnes Scott college, will present "Midsummer Night's Dream" Saturday, October 11, at 8:15 o'clock on the college campus. Miss Frances Guach is dramatic director.

The cast is as follows: Theseus, Frances Lincoln; Demitrius, Isabel Ferguson; Lysander, Georgia May Little; Egius, Frances Betzer; Philostrate, Mary Ben Wright; Hermia, Mildred Pitner; Helena, Catherine Graeber; Hippolyta, Isabella Clarke; Puck, Mary Freeman; Oberon, Sarah Slaughter; Titania, Frances Harwell; interlude group, Frances Amis, Anne Ray, Louise Buchannan, Mary Anne McKinney, Florence Perkins, Helina Hermance; First Fairy, Eloise Knight.

Mrs. Westbrook Daniel Is Honor Guest.

Mrs. Westbrook Daniel, a charming New York visitor, was honor guest at the bridge-luncheon at which Mrs. Walter S. Haselton and her daughter, Mrs. Arthur S. Harris, entertained at their apartment in Pershing Point.

Yellow flowers were used to decorate the apartments and the guest of honor was presented with a set of bookends. Mrs. Marshall Peck won the first prize, a set of Tiffany glasses, and the consolation, hand-made handkerchiefs, was cut by Mrs. John M. Flynn.

The exquisitely-appointed table was overlaid with a lace cloth, a silver basket holding yellow asters, adorned the center. The place cards were miniature hand-painted figures holding variicolored old-fashioned bouquets. Yellow mints and bonbons filled silver compotes, and the ices and cakes were embossed in yellow.

Mrs. Haselton was gowned in black bengaline, combined with cerise. Mrs. Harris wore a gown of blue crepe Romaine. Mrs. Westbrook's gown was of brown Georgette crepe, embroidered in bronze beads.

Invited to meet the honor guest were Mrs. John M. Flynn, Mrs. W. D. Greene, Mrs. Louis Wright, Mrs. Marshall Peck, Mrs. Allen Johnson, Mrs. Stephens Hook, Mrs. Albert Baumberger, Mrs. Carpenter Jones, Mrs. Byron King, Miss Hazel Harris Eton and Miss Carolyn McMullen.

Miss Dunwody Is Honor Guest.

Mrs. Charles D. Orme was hostess at a beautiful luncheon at her home on West Andrews drive on Tuesday in honor of Miss Mary Scotia Dunwody, whose marriage to Arthur Walker Bingham, Jr., of Vermont and New York, will be solemnized Friday, October 17, at high noon at St. Luke's Episcopal church.

Fall flowers in the delicate shades of pink, blue and lavender were used as decorations and were artistically arranged in bowls and baskets.

The guests include Miss Dunwody's bridal party and several friends.

Mrs. R. F. Darrah Is Complimented.

Mrs. A. H. Sterne was hostess Tuesday afternoon at tea at her home on Westminster drive in honor of her sister, Mrs. R. F. Darrah, of Meridian, Miss.

The house was beautifully decorated with bright fall flowers in the shades of yellow and orange.

Mrs. Sterne was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. A. Maier, Mrs. H Frank West, Mrs. F. O. Walsh, Mrs. J. N. Harper, Mrs. Henry A. Colees, Mrs. W. B. Sewell, Mrs. L. M. Bogle, and her two daughters, Miss Sue Brown Sterne and Miss Hanann Sterne. Mrs. J. G. Dodson poured tea.

Mrs. Sterne wore a gown of orchid georgette trimmed with pearls.

Mrs. Clarence Bemis. Compliments Visitors.

Mrs. Clarence A. Bemis entertained Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at her home on Peachtree street in honor of Miss Louise Hays and Miss Ione McKenzie, of Montezuma, the guests of Miss Florence Boykin.

The lovely home was attractively decorated with cosmos, asters, dahlias and other fall flowers.

Mrs. C. H. Weaver assisted the hostess in entertaining.

The guests included Misses Irene Thomas, Miss Ada Peeples, Mrs. Robert Goodhart, Jr., Mrs. William Lohse, Mrs. Charles Holmes Weaver, Mrs. Cecil Walkley, Mrs. Clarence Coppedge and Mrs. Bemis.

Mrs. John S. McGehee Gives Tea to Bride.

Mrs. John A. Bazemore, a recent bride, who before her marriage was Miss Sue Henderson, was honoree at a bridge-tea Tuesday at which Mrs. John S. McGehee was hostess.

DAILY CALENDAR OF SOCIAL EVENTS

The wedding of Miss Emma Laura Wesley and John Vernon Yost will take place at 8:30 o'clock this evening at the home of the bride's grandmother at 559 West Peachtree street.

The marriage of Miss Lillian Raley and Hugh Northcote Harding will take place at 11 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Raley, on Fairview road.

Miss Catherine Nash will be hostess at a bridge-tea honoring Miss Elizabeth Lockhart, a bride-elect, at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. John Newton McEachern and Mrs. Doughty Rankin Manley will be joint-hostesses at a reception at their home in Ansley Park, honoring Mrs. John Newton McEachern, Jr.

The first "Debutante Night" dinner-dance will be given at the Biltmore hotel this evening.

Miss Angel Allen will entertain the members of the Pi Pi sorority at her home, 58 East 15th street, this afternoon.

There will be a dance at East Lake County club this evening, given by Yaarab temple.

The Young Woman's Hebrew association will give their annual subscription dance at the Atlanta Woman's club this evening at 8:30 o'clock.

Witches' Club Circle No. 1 will give a bridge party this afternoon on the Ansley roof for the Tallulah Falls school.

Mrs. W. D. Green will entertain at luncheon today at her home on Briarcliff road, the occasion complimenting Mrs. Westbrook Daniel of New York, the guest of Mrs. Walter E. Haselton.

Miss Lillian Raley To Wed Mr. Harding.

The marriage of Miss Lillian Raley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Edgar Raley, to Hugh Northcote Harding, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reginald Harding will be solemnized this morning at 11 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents on Fairview road. Dr. M. Ashby Jones, of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church, will perform the ceremony and the bride will be given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. J. D. Ennis, sister of the bride, will be the matron of honor. John Robert Marsh will be the best man.

Following the wedding breakfast, at which the bride's parents will entertain after the ceremony, the bride and bridegroom will leave on a motor trip to Florida. Assisting in entertaining at breakfast will be Mrs. Margaret Mitchell Upshaw, Miss Ann Armstrong and Mrs. H. C. Mather.

Awards Made to Horse-Show Riders.

The award for best boy rider at the horse show staged in connection with the Southeastern fair Monday afternoon went to J. P. Allen, Jr. Miss Eleanor Moffett was judged as the best girl rider.

Class for ponies under 46 inches: First prize, Robert Norman; second prize, Harry Beuler; third prize, Fred Jeter, Jr.

Yaarab Temple To Give Dance.

The dance committee of Yaarab temple is sponsoring the first Shrine dance of the fall season at Eastlake Country club this evening, dancing beginning at 9 o'clock. The event will be strictly formal and admission will be $2 per couple, with a charge of $1 for each extra lady accompanying a noble. The 1924 Shrine card will be required at the door. Splendid music has been engaged and an enjoyable time is promised to all nobles and ladies who attend.

Byrd-Candler Wedding Hour.

Guests from Atlanta and Decatur who will attend the wedding of Miss Georgia Byrd and George Scott Candler this evening in Lawrenceville are reminded that the hour is 8:30 o'clock eastern time, which is 7:30 o'clock Atlanta time.

Miss Catharine Raine To Be Honored.

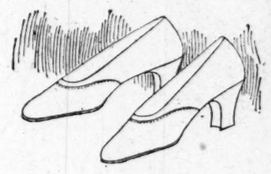

Miss Catharine Raine, lovely debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Raine, will be introduced to the married contingent of society at a tea at which Mrs. Raine will entertain on Saturday, November 22, at her home on West Peachtree street.

Receiving with Mrs. Raine and Miss Raine will be the members of the Debutante club and Miss Louise Bankhead, of Jasper, Ala., who will arrive on Friday, November 21, to be the guest of Miss Raine.

Following the tea the debutantes and a group of young men will be entertained at a buffet supper by Mr. and Mrs. Raine, and later they will attend the dance at Piedmont Driving club.

Three Beautiful Weddings Feature Social Calendar

Conspicuous on the social calendar Tuesday were a trio of lovely autumn weddings, which were characterized by beauty and dignity.

The marriage of Miss Mildred Fraser and Guy Carpenter, Jr., of New York, was solemnized at 3 o'clock at the All Saints' Episcopal church, while, at the same hour, Miss Louise Brannan Merritt became the bride of LaFayette Montgomery Becknell at the Park Street Methodist church. Miss Camille Bramlett and Hines Farish Holt were married at a beautiful twilight service, at 6:30 o'clock, in the Druid Hills Presbyterian church.

Miss Mildred Fraser Weds Guy Carpenter, Jr.,

The wedding of Miss Mildred Davis Fraser to Guy Carpenter, Jr., of New York, which was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at All Saint's Episcopal church, was of the widest social interest. Rev. W. W. Memminger officiated.

The church was decorated with palms, ferns and southern smilax. The altar was banked with palms and ferns, which formed a background of greenery for seven-branched cathedral candelabra with white burning tapers, and interspersed with white pedestal baskets of white chrysanthemums. The chancel was festooned with southern smilax and tied with large white satin bows.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by W. E. Arnaud, organist of the church, who played the "Love Song" from Samson and Delilah. The processional was the wedding march from Lohengrin, and the wedding march from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Nights Dream," was used for the recessional.

The groomsmen acted as ushers and were John K. Ottley, Jr., Craig Mathews, Walter Wilkes and Joseph Duckworth. Parks Hunt was best man.

The bridesmaids, matron of honor and maid of honor wore gowns fashioned alike of chiffon in pastel shades, over self-toned satin, with quaint short-waisted bodices, the skirts very bouffant and draped with cream lace. They wore French model hats of black panne velvet trimmed with pink gardenias, these hats faced with the colors of the gowns. They carried bouquets of Columbia roses and valley lilies, showered with the valley lilies.

The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Elder and Miss Marion Douglas, of Mobile, Ala., a cousin of the bride, and they wore orchid-colored gowns.

Miss Aline Fraser, younger sister of the bride, wore a flesh-colored gown.

Mrs. Paul Jones, matron of honor, was gowned in pale blue chiffon, the facing of her hat being this color and her bouquet made of Butterfly roses and blue delphiniums and showered in similar fashion.

Exquisite Bride.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Wallace Fraser, was radiantly lovely in a three-piece French gown of blue duvetyne and fawn-colored bengaline, trimmed in squirrel fur. The gown was embroidered with chenille, in panel effect with circular flounces of the duvetyne. The bride's hat was an imported model of gray panne velvet with gray veil and rhinestone ornament. Her shower bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Fraser, mother of the bride, was gowned in black satin. Her hat was of French blue with heavy gold embroidery, and she wore a corsage of valley lilies and orchids.

Mrs. Guy Carpenter, of New York, mother of the groom, wore an imported model of black satin embroidered in gold, and a black panne velvet hat trimmed in gold. Her corsage was of orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Edmund Overton, of Pelham, N. Y., sister of the groom, was gowned in beige crepe and brown silk beaver hat.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Guy Carpenter, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Overton of Pelham, N. Y., and Miss Marion Douglas, of Mobile, Ala.

Prominent Families.

The bride is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace J. Fraser.

She has never made a formal debut, but has enjoyed college dances at the University of Georgia, University of Alabama and the Georgia Tech, where she was sponsor for the R. O. T. C. for several years. She graduated from Washington seminary in 1922.

The bride's parents are prominent and popular with a wide circle of friends. Her mother was formerly Miss Corinne Davis, of Mobile, Ala., and her father is a pioneer citizen of Atlanta and a leading auditor.

On the maternal side, the bride is the granddaughter of the late Franklin P. Davis, of Mobile, Ala. He was at one time colonel of the Alabama state troops and one of the leading cotton merchants of the south, being prominent in both the civic and social affairs of Mobile.

On her paternal side, the bride is the granddaughter of the late Collin Fraser, one of the early citizens of Atlanta and prominent in the war of the Confederacy. Her paternal grandmother was formerly Miss Susie Cozart, one of the early belles of Atlanta.

Mr. Carpenter, before moving to New York, spent his earlier years in Atlanta, and completed his education at Georgia Tech, where he was a popular member of the S. A. E. fraternity. He is now connected in business with his father, in the Guy Carpenter & Co., Inc., of New York.

The groom's mother was formerly Miss Anne Milliken, from one of the most distinguished families in Florence, Ala. His father is well known in insurance circles throughout this country as well as in England. He is a member of one of the oldest southern families in New Orleans.

Miss Bramlett Weds Hines Farish Holt.

A pretty autumn wedding was that of Miss Camille Bramlett and Hines Farish Holt, which took place Tuesday evening at 6:30 o'clock at the Druid Hills Presbyterian church.

Dr. Charles A. Campbell performed the ceremony in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends.

Preceding the marriage service Mrs. Robert Posley sang "God Touched the Rose," and "Until." Miss Essie Belle Brockman played the wedding march and during the ceremony played softly "Melody of Love."

The marriage was solemnized before an altar banked with palms, ferns and foliage plants. On both sides were tall floor baskets holding long-stemmed Easter lilies. In the center, above the foliage, burned cathedral candelabra, which reflected a soft gleam over the beautiful twilight scene.

Bridal Party.

Misses Margaret Bramlett and Helen Falks, bridesmaids, entered with John Bamsley and Wayne Bryant, and preceded the bride down the long aisle to the altar.

Miss Bramlett wore a gown of coral-colored crepe trimmed in deep cream lace and narrow black velvet ribbon.

Miss Falks was gowned in olive green crepe trimmed in cream lace and black velvet ribbon. Both bridesmaids carried arm bouquets of dahlias in the pastel shades and wore wide-brimmed hats of gold lace with crowns of black panne velvet.

Miss Rita Bramlett was her sister's maid of honor and wore an attractive gown of French blue crepe embroidered in golden brown chenille and trimmed with wide bands of brown fur. Her hat was a smart model to match and she carried an arm bouquet of huge yellow dahlias tied with gold-colored tulle.

Lovely Bride.

The lovely bride entered with her maid of honor and wore a handsome three-piece costume of beige-colored charmeuse. The gown was elaborately embroidered in gold and henna shades of chenille. Her attractive hat of henna-colored panne velvet was embroidered in gold and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

They were joined at the altar by the groom and his best man, Paul Bryant.

Mrs. Mary Bramlett, mother of the bride, wore a handsome gown of black crepe trimmed in silk fringe. Her corsage bouquet was pink roses and valley lilies.

The New Properties.

The dancing masters have settled a serious problem for us. They have decreed that three inches is the proper distance for dancers to remain apart.

We have always been puzzled about this matter. Just as we have wondered vaguely every time we read the advertisements for etiquette books, how many social errors we commit at the party.

It makes us uneasy to have a question loom up in print beside a picture of a tea party asking us how many wicked things are going on.

Also, we are equally distressed when we go to a dance not wholly fortified with the latest ballroom styles. But that three-inch business will help a lot. When the fat old boy with short arms and a paunch extending equally in all directions asks us to dance, we'll invite him to get us a glass of punch instead. When the young Apollo in his eager haste to step off to the music clasps us too closely to his slender bosom we will be haughty and inform him coolly to keep his distance, sir! The distance in this instance being limited, officially, to three inches.

In Ohio the movie censors have limited a kiss to three feet. The rule is complied with—on the screen only.

We've got an idea this three-inch dancing will likewise be seen—on the screen only.

Dear Sirs

Please guard your hair

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I feel sorry to see men grow bald. It is easy to keep and to cultivate hair, and you owe it to yourselves and to us.

For many years I have sought and consulted some of the world's greatest experts on hair. They all agree that hair health comes from a clean and healthy scalp. Combat the hardened oil and dandruff which stifle the hair roots. Tone and stimulate the scalp. Then hair thrives, just as flowers thrive in a well-kept garden.

Those experts have always supplied me the best helps known to science. Each new and better help discovered has come to me at once. Now I have had all of these combined in a product I call my Hair Youth. I have placed it on drug and toilet counters at every woman's call. But men need it more than women, so this is written to urge men to learn how much it does.

I am no longer young. For 35 years I have been a stage star. But my hair today is thicker and finer than 40 years ago. I have never had falling hair or dandruff and never a touch of gray. Now I offer you in my Hair Youth every help which brought those results to me. I am well assured that they combine the greatest hair helps in existence.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Youth is sold everywhere today. It costs 50c and $1 per bottle.

Write me for my Beauty Book and I'll send with it something else to please you. Edna Wallace Hopper, 536 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.—(adv.)

Mrs. La Fayette Montgomery Becknell, formerly Miss Louise Brannan Merritt. The marriage of Miss Merritt and Mr. Becknell was a beautiful event of Tuesday afternoon, taking place at 3 o'clock at the Park Street Methodist church.

A marriage of interest to their many friends and relatives throughout Georgia, Florida and South Carolina was that of Miss Louise Branan Merritt and Lafayette Montgomery Becknell, which was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Park Street Methodist church, the Rev. Sterling P. Wiggins officiating.

The church was beautifully decorated with palm and southern smilax interspersed with tall baskets of chrysanthemums. On each side were placed cathedral candalabra.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Edna E. Aiken rendered a beautiful musical program. Among the numbers, "Cortege Nuptials," by Moore; "Romance," by Vitterhart; Shubert's "Serenade" and "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," by Saint-Saens, followed by Lohengrin's wedding march. "To a Wild Rose" softly played during the ceremony.

The bride entered with the groom. She was handsomely gowned in a model of imported French embroidered chiffon trimmed with wide bands of fur and caught at each side with iridescent ornament. Her hat, fashioned of golden brown satin to match her gown, was beautifully adorned with a bird of paradise at one side. A double sable neck-piece completed her costume. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and swainsona. The bride and groom were met at the altar by Rev. Wiggins, who performed the impressive ring ceremony.

Distinguished Lineage.

Mrs. Becknell received her education at Girls' High school, later attending the New England conservatory in Boston while specializing in music. She is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Merritt and traces her lineage through a long line of distinguished ancestors, being descended from the Grays, Hodnets and Crawfords, all of whom figured in the civic and political life of the southland. Major John Hodnet, of the Virginia cavalry, who distinguished himself in the revolution, is a great uncle of Mrs. Becknell. He was at that time commander of the Hodnet horse guards. On her maternal side, her mother before her marriage was Miss Jessie Carolyn Branan, a niece of Mary Branan, in loving remembrance of whose loyalty and devotion to church work the Walker Street church when moved, was made a memorial to her.

Mr. Becknell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Becknell. He received his education at Tech High school and Georgia Tech. He is a member of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity and is connected with the state highway department at East Point. Mr. Becknell is a descendant of the old distinguished Montgomery and Becknell families of South Carolina.

After the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Becknell will be at home on Donally avenue, in West End Park.

Roberts Quits Fight To Stop Nomination Of Primary Opponent

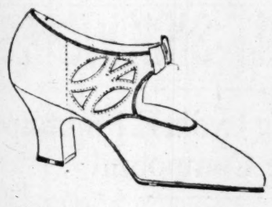

Athens, Ga., October 7.—F. W. Roberts, of Monroe, today abandoned his fight to prevent the nomination of Henry H. West, of Athens, for solicitor-general of the Western judicial circuit comprising Oconee, Clark and Walton counties.

West's plurality is 29 votes, two of his original 31 plurality having been thrown out by a protest made by Roberts. A similar protest in Oconee county failed to change the result and Roberts today informed Max Michael, secretary of the Clarke county executive committee, that he would not appeal to the state convention to allow him to proceed with a protest hearing in Clarke.

THE TAILORED-MADE GIRL.

If you are the type that looks well in a tailor-made suit you are most fortunate, for with only one tailored suit and a few blouses you are well dressed for practically every occasion, business or social. You need spend very little on your wardrobe then, for well tailored suits are no longer expensive.

But if you do not look attractive in the short coat and skirt style, take heart, for the tailored costume of this and next season is an entirely different affair from what it used to be. In many instances the short coat has grown to almost full length proportions, and the blouse, which changed to a jumper a season or so ago, has now become an entire dress. Dress and coat lining are of the same material, usually a figured silk, and a little of the outside coat material is used on the dress, just enough to "tie it up" with the coat and make one costume of the whole. Recently I saw a display of French models; one was a figured marocain with a gabardine coat, the only gabardine on the dress was a long, narrow belt. On another model the velour material of the coat made a band around the hips in which two pockets were inset.

It seems to me that last year's tailored coat might be cut off to knee length, or to some becoming point between the knee and calf of the leg, which is the new fashionable way, and relined with plain or figured silk, enough silk being purchased at the time to make a straight, slim, one-piece under dress. The coat is never removed outside one's own home, but thrown back indoors to show the lining and dress. This is an ideal style for the woman who does not look well in the strict tailor-made. The left-over coat material can be used for collar, cuffs and belt of the silk under dress. And of course the severely tailored short coat suit is always in good style.

Genevieve—You did not state your weight, but if it is much above normal it would account for the unbecoming fullness of your face; and eyes are always smaller under such circumstances. You can reduce all over by eating less of foods in which there is starch, or oil, or sweets, as these are particularly fattening, so eliminate them entirely for a time. Abnormal weight would also make the features appear to be swollen. If you are not overweight, you should consult the doctor, as imperfect functioning of the kidneys will sometimes make the face and features swell up at times.

Tomorrow—Beautifying the Hands.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicket reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be inclosed with the question.—The Editor.

ANSLEY PARK LEAGUE TO MEET TONIGHT

Clark Donaldson, city engineer, will be the principal speaker today at a meeting of the Ansley Park Civic league to be held at the Craigie house, D. A. R. room, 988 Piedmont avenue, at 8 o'clock. The league has accomplished much to beautify the Ansley park during the past year and plans for carrying on the work will be made at this meeting, members say.

The Autumn Costume

The dress or the ensemble costume for street wear and daytime occasions will be exquisitely correct when fashioned from such fabrics as these.

Charmeen claims a high place in fashion's favor, and justly so, for its charming appearance and splendid wearing qualities. Shown in finest of quality—black, navy, men's blue, nutmeg, rosin, rosewood, cayenne, oleander, aventurine.
54 inches wide, yard..... $5.75

54 inches wide, yard..... $6.95

Celesteen, another superfine wool fabric, almost plain, but with a touch of unexpectedness in a shadow stripe suggestive of herringbone. Black, navy, brown. 54 inches. Yard..... $6.95

54 inches wide, yard..... $6.95

Junior League Plans Work For Year at First Fall Meeting

The newly elected officers presided who are Mrs. Lott Warren, president; Miss Henrietta Tupper, first vice president; Mrs. William Huger, second vice president; Mrs. Charles Freeman, treasurer; Mrs. W. Eugene Harrington, recording secretary; Mrs Lawrence Willet, corresponding secretary.

After the minutes of the call meeting held in September were read by Mrs. Harrington, Mrs. Warren read a letter from Eugene Black, asking for the support of the league for the Community Chest campaign. It was decided to let an emergency committee, which is to be made up of new members, sometime next month do this work.

Reports from chairman of the different committees were heard from next. Mrs. Hunter Muse is chairman and Mrs. James Ragan co-chairman of a committee that helps with work done by the Good Samaritan Gland clinic on Howard street, a work that has done more in the short time it has been in existence to help deficient children than any other. There is no clinic so thoroughly equipped as this clinic in the south.

The work of this committe is to transport the children in special classes in the poorer school districts to and from the clinic. Since this work has started six children have been taken for examination from Luckie Street school, eight from English avenue, and seven children from families who otherwise could not have gotten there.

Not all of these are treated, but they are given thorough examination and where it is necessary they are given treatments and the others are turned over to other doctors.

Among those volunteering for this committee were Miss Elizabeth Hawkins, Mrs. Glenn Ryman, Mrs. Frank Carter, Mrs. Edgar Upton, Mrs. William Campbell, Mrs. Wimberly Peters, Miss Frances Brown, Mrs. Walter Elcock, Mrs. Godfrey MacDonald, Miss Henrietta Tupper and others.

School Lunches.

The school lunch committee, of which Mrs. Philip Wilcox is chairman, serves lunches at Fay Street school, Luckie Street School and Williams Street school and wants to take over English Avenue school where there are 75 mentally deficient and undernourished children

Volunteers were asked for this committee, and among those offering for this committee were Mrs. De Sales Harrison, Miss Margaret Wilson, Miss Louise Inman, Miss Martha Boynton, Miss Eunice Nixon, Miss Mary Shedden, Miss Pauline DeGive, Miss Alice Stearns, Miss Nell Sims, Mrs. George Bell, Miss Marion Smith, Mrs. J. D. Osborne, Miss Marion Darrah and others.

Mrs. Newman is chairman of the milk committee, which gives milk to many undernourished children.

Mrs. Bolling Jones, Jr., is chairman of Hospital No. 48 committee. The girls go once or twice a week to play games with the soldiers or take them to ride. Delicacies are given to bed ridden patients. Volunteers for this committee were Mrs. Harrold Coolidge, Miss Edgarta Horton, Mrs. Turner Jones, Mrs. Eugene Haynes and others.

Mrs. Rogers Toy is chairman of the free school book committee. Since the school furnishes books now for the needy in the lower grades, they only supply books to the Junior High school. She has six girls working on her committee.

The Braille class, of which Miss Marion Darrah is chairman, will meet once a week to learn the system. The books and stories written by the girls, after ten weeks' study and an examination, are sent to blind soldiers or schools for blind children. This is considered one of the most important works among many of the junior league.

Volunteers for this committee were Miss Mary Frances Cooledge, Mrs. Jennie Johnson Adkins, Mrs. Sergeant Hamilton, Mrs. Lon Grones, Mrs. Edgar Upton, Mrs. Charles Rawson, Mrs. Tom Swann, Miss Edgarta Horton, Mrs. Sam Slicer, Mrs. Dorothy Harmon Stringfellow, Mrs. William Campbell and others.

Girl Scout Work.

Miss Louise Inman is chairman of the Girl Scout committee and asked for volunteers for Girl Scout leaders. This wonderful work among girls needs no explanation, as every one knows what the Girl Scouts are.

Miss Margaret Nelson is chairman of the Atlanta Child's home committee. It was decided, however, that work there be discontinued until the isolation ward is completed, as so much time is lost by quarantine for mild contagious children's diseases.

Mrs. Grover Middlebrooks is chairman of the Christmas basket committee. Their work only begins in November to locate families they will help at Christmas time.

Volunteers for this committee were Miss Martha Boynton Mrs. De Sales Harrison, Mrs. James Spees, Mrs. Louis Wright, Miss Emmie Nixon, Miss Pauline DeGive, Mrs. George Campbell, Mrs. Charles Word, Mrs. Ed Carter, Mrs. Robert Troutman, Mrs. Murdock McEuquen, Mrs. George Raine, Mrs. Norman Cooledge, Mrs. Wayne Martin, Mrs. Waldo Mallory, Miss Marvin Hanah, Mrs. Turner Jones, Mrs. Carroll McGaughey, Mrs. Walter Elcock, Mrs. Julian Robinson, Miss Nell Sims, Mrs. Lon Grones, Miss Margaret Nelson, Mrs. William Huger and others.

Last, but decidedly not least, was a report of the Follies committee, of which Mrs. Eugene Harrington is chairman.

Plans for Follies.

The Junior League Follies of 1925 will begin on February 16, as has already been announced.

Mrs. Harrington asked that all league members come to the Biltmore for the assembly cast on January 17, when Ned Wayburn will be introduced The cooperation and untiring efforts of each member is needed to put over this entertainment. Mrs. Harrington said: "We have the man, we have the name, and a wonderful working committee, so it is up to you girls, by your individual support, to make this the largest success of any entertainment ever given by the Junior league."

Plans for "specialty nights" are being made and committees will be appointed for telephone, cast, tickets, publicity, advertising, newspaper, drinks, program, costume, and boxes.

Following the meeting tea was served.

Among the members of the league present were Mrs. Julian Robinson, Mrs. Ed Carter, Mrs. Grover Middlebrooks, Miss Marion Darrah, Mrs. Godfrey McDonald, Mrs. Julian Thomas, Miss Dolly Hart, Mrs. Murdock, McEuquen, Mrs. Ben Gantt, Mrs. Henry Troutman, Miss Louise Inman, Miss Margaret Nelson, Miss Martha Boynton, Mrs. Lon Groves, Mrs. Harold Cooledge, Miss Mary Frances Cooledge, Mrs. Charles Rawson, Mrs. Jennie Johnson Adkins, Miss Marian Smith, Mrs. George Raine, Mrs. Clem Evins, Mrs. Tom Swann, Mrs. Corroll McGaughey, Mrs. Van Hall, Mrs. De Sales Harrison, Mrs. Rogers Toy, Mrs. Louise Yregg, Mrs. Walter Elcock, Mrs. J. D. Osborne, Mrs. James Ragan, Mrs. Robert Troutman, Mrs. Willis Ragan, Mrs. James Ragan, Mrs. Dorothy Harman Stringfellow, Mrs. Joel Hurt, Mrs. Bobby Jones, Mrs. Rankin Manley, Miss Caroline Nicholson, Mrs. Tom Dunham, Mrs. George Campbell, Mrs. Charlie Word, Mrs. Sam Slicer, Mrs. George Steel, Mrs. Glyn Ryman, Mrs. Robert White, Mrs. Hugh Roberts, Mrs. Reginold Pope, Mrs. Eugene Haynes, Mrs. Norman Cooledge, Mrs. Jack Leison, Miss Catherine Stewart, Miss Frances Brown, Miss Alice Stearnes, Miss Nell Sims, Mrs. Edgar Upton, Mrs. Wallace McCaw, Mrs. William Campbell, Jr., Mrs. James Spees, Mrs. J. K. Orr, Jr., Mrs. Charles Pottinger, Mrs. Louis Wright, Mrs. Chester Booth Blakeman, Mrs. Frank Owens, Mrs. Charles D. Orme, Mrs. Edgarta Horton, Miss Pauline de Give, Miss Emmie Nixon, Mrs. Barnard Boykin, Miss Mary Shedden, Mrs. Hamilton Sergeant, Mrs. Philip Wilcox, Mrs. Frank Carter, Mrs. Royston Cabiness, Mrs. Bolling Jones, Jr., Mrs. Turner Jones, Mrs. Wayne Martin, Mrs. Waldo Mallory, Mrs. Richard Hardwick, Mrs. W. B. Disbro, Mrs. Eugene Haynes, Mrs. Wimbly Peters, Miss Elizabeth Hawkins, and others.

Library Association To Hold Meeting.

Outstanding features of the biennial conference of the Southeastern Library association which will convene at Grove Park Inn October 16, for a two-day session, include addresses by representatives of the Carnegie library of Atlanta. Miss Tommie Dora Barker, librarian, will discuss the important matter of "Economic and Social Background for Library Development in the Southeastern States." Miss Fannie Cox, head of the circulation department, will present a paper on "Service to Business Men," and "Children's and School Librarians" is the round table topic assigned to Miss Lucas, children's librarian.

The conference will begin October 16 with meetings of executive and section committee chairmen at 4 p. m., followed by an organ recital at 5 o'clock, a reception at 6 o'clock. Social features will include a concert next day and an automobile drive through Biltmore estate at the close of the conference. An attendance of 300 delegates is indicated.

West End Civic Club To Sponsor Benefit.

The public welfare committee of the Woman's Civic club of West End will sponsor a benefit bridge Thursday, October 16, at the clubrooms, Gordon street and Grady place.

Many beautiful and useful prizes will be awarded, a delicious home-made cake having been donated for each table.

The proceeds are to be used by the committee in promoting and enlarging the scope of their work, some of the recent activities of the committee, including a dinner given the inmates of the Old Ladies' home, and a watermelon cutting for the children of the Stewart Avenue Day nursery. Much work of a similar nature has been planned by the committee, so it is hoped that all members will lend their aid in making this affair one of great success.

Reservations may be secured through the chairman, Mrs. H. M. Simpson, West 0780-J, or Mrs. W. W. Kilpatrick, West 0606.

Church School To Give Missionary Pageant.

The church school of Central Congregational church will illustrate their missionary features in a most attractive way by a pageant at the church this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The public is cordially invited to be present.

New Club Is Formed.

The "Merry O. K's," a recently-organized club, held their first official business meeting Friday evening.

A constitution has been adopted, officers elected, and plans formulated for an active and successful winter.

The club is not entirely a social organization, as one-tenth of the club dues shall be reserved for charitable purposes. The disposal of this fund will be in the hands of a relief committee.

Besides the regular monthly meeting and dances, other activities include a monthly outing, to be sponsored by the boys. The first of these will be an o'possum hunt, conducted by George and Elvin Graf.

Pins and cards will be selected at the next business meeting. The club was organized with a great deal of enthusiasm, and from present indications will be a tremendous success.

Mary Latimer W. C. T. U. Meet.

The regular meeting of the Mary Latimer McLendon, W. C. T. U. will be held Thursday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, in the Sunday school room of Trinity church. Mrs. E. L. Lupton will present a program on "Literature."

Mrs. Reeves will hold a silver medal contest with six boys and girls as speakers. The public is invited to attend.

Camp Fire Paper Is Issued.

"Embers," a most interesting paper for girls, will be edited monthly by Atlanta camp-fire girls. The first issue is out and has been hailed as a success by those who have read it. It claims Camp Highland as its birthplace the first week in June, where Atlanta camp-fire girls spent a glorious week camping.

It contains stories, short plays, songs, poems, pictures and other interesting news about camp-fire girls in the United States and foreign countries.

The first meeting will be held at headquarters Wednesday, October 8, at 3 o'clock, at which time the staff will be elected. The names sent in so far are Leila Mason, Margerite Steedman, Gussie Dunbar, Geraldine Scogin, Mary Spencer Jack, Muriel Arkel.

Embers staff will have a luncheon at headquarters once a month and at this luncheon make up the next issue of the paper.

Baptist Hospital Auxiliary Meeting.

The Woman's auxiliary of the Georgia Baptist hospital will hold its regular meeting Friday, October 10, at 10:30 o'clock, at the hospital.

Every woman interested in the work is invited to be present and bring friends with her.

Twentieth Century Coterie To Meet.

Mrs. Ashby To Lecture.

Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, psychologist, will give a series of four lectures on "Spiritual Psychology," the lectures to be given for the four consecutive Sundays in October, in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel, beginning Sunday, October 12. Mrs. Ashby will interpret the faculties "Faith, Hope and Love," psychologically. These lectures will be replete with practical helpful methods of solving life problems and meeting and controlling every-day contentions in life. All lectures free and both men and women are welcome.

George W. Adair To Meet Today.

George W. Adair Parent-Teacher association will meet this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. All members and mothers who are not members will please attend, as matters of importance to our school and ocommunity will be discussed.

Astrology Lectures To Begin Today.

Mrs. Marie Louise Hancock will give the first lecture of a series on astrology this afternoon at 4 o'clock at 313-314 Grand Theater building.

Those wishing to take advantage of this course are urged to be present in the beginning. These lectures will be held every Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock and are free.

Theosophy Is To Be Subject of Lecture.

"What Is Theosophy?" is the subject of the lecture to be given this evening at 7 o'clock at the local reading rooms of the Atlanta Theosophical lodge, 313-314 Grand Theater building. There will be no admission and the public is invited.

Baby Health Center To Be Held Thursday.

A baby health center will be held at John B. Gordon school on Thursday, October 9, with Dr. Hoppe in charge. All mothers are urged to bring their babies at 2 o'clock sharp.

Steadwell-Taylor Wedding Plans Are Announced

The announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Edith Margaret Steadwell and John Ewing Taylor, of Nashville, Tenn., will interest a wide circle of friends of the young couple and their families, who are prominently identified throughout the south.

The marriage will take place on Tuesday afternoon, October 14, at 5 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Nathaniel Steadwell, on Peachtree road, in the presence of relatives and close friends.

The Rev. Father T. H. Hasson, of the Sacred Heart church, will officiate. Miss Louise Barili will sing an appropriate group of selections preceding the ceremony, accompanied by Mrs. W. W. Starr at the piano.

The lovely young bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, John Nathaniel Steadwell, and her only attendant will be her sister, Miss Mary Roberta Steadwell, who will be maid of honor.

Philip J. Lee, of Nashville, Tenn., will act as Mr. Taylor's best man.

Following the marriage service, Mr. and Mrs. John Nathaniel Steadwell will entertain at a buffet supper.

Miss Ethel Shaw, of Dallas, Texas, will keep the bride's register.

Mr. Taylor and his bride will leave during the evening for a wedding trip, going later to Nashville, Tenn., to make their home in the Washington apartments on the Hillsboro road.

A number of prominent out-of-town guests will attend the wedding, including John Nathaniel Steadwell, Jr., of Louisville, Ky.; Miss Annie Lou Taylor, of Bolling, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Shaw and Miss Ethel Marion Shaw, of Dallas, Texas; Mrs. Thomas W. Wreane, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wharton, Philip J. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Cleary, all of Nashville, Tenn.

What Do Women Think of Men's Clothes?

BY JULIA HOYT

(Copyright, 1924, in United States and Canada by the North American Newspaper Alliance. All Rights Reserved.)

Men are generally pretty frank, if not brutal, in saying what they think of women's dress, but rarely, if ever, hear an opinion from the women on men's dress.

It is true that since the early nineteenth century man's dress has not varied much, yet there are so-called well and badly dressed men. Also, every now and then we have had to bear such burdens as the vogue among some a few years ago of wearing low turn-downed collars in the street in summer. But generally speaking their clothes do not vary much from year to year. In fact, too little attention to this question is paid by the American man. He seems to feel that though the outer shell is a most important factor in his opinion of and feeling toward a woman, it should have little or no influence on her opinion or feelings toward him.

I happened to run across an excerpt from a London paper of 1828 which shows the high value placed at the time on man's appearance. This happens to speak only of the cravat, but it is amusing to read today:

"When a man of rank makes his entree into a circle distinguished for taste and elegance and the usual compliments have passed on both sides, he will discover that his coat will attract only a small degree of attention, but that the most critical and scrutinizing examination will be made of his cravat. Should this, unfortunately, not be correctly and elegantly put on, no further notice will be taken of him. . . . His reception will in future be cold and no one will move on his entrance; but if his cravat is savamment and elegantly formed everyone will rise to receive him with the most distinguished marks of respect, will cheerfully resign their seats to him and the delightful eyes of all will be fixed on that part of his person which separates the shoulders from the chin. . . . Let him speak downright nonsense, he will be applauded to the skies. . . ."

The sad picture given by the author of the man whose cravat is not correctly tied is the following: "He will be considered as an ignorant pretender and will be compelled to suffer the impertinance of the fop, who will treat him with disdain merely because his cravat is not correctly disposed. He will, moreover, be obliged to bear in silence and to approve (under pain of being considered unacquainted with the common rules of politeness) all the remarks which he will thus subject himself to, occasionally relieved by charing a whsiper of 'He cannot even put on a cravat properly.. . . . .'"

I quote the foregoing passage because I found it exceedingly quaint and, needless to say, not because I advocate such a degree of importance being given to the dress of either man or woman. But I think it would be interesting to hear the views of some women and girls as to what they do consider constitutes a well dressed man. What do they particularly notice—or do they notice men's clothes at all? Do women rarely express themselves on men's clothes because they have no opinions, think it unimportant, or is it because they feel they must take criticism on this subject from the man but fear to return it? I would be glad to hear from my readers on these different subjects.

If the powdered sugar has been bought in a bag, transfer it to a tightly covered jar when you arrive home and thus prevent it forming into hard lumps.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

The Tips Intact.

It is wise to open the can of asparagus from the bottom. Then the stalks can be removed easily without breaking the tips.

For Hot Handles.

So many housewives use their good tea towels to remove hot pans from the stove, frequently causing ugly burns in them. Why do this when an iron holder can be purchased for 5 cents and answer the purpose so much more satisfactorily?

Correct Washing.

Never soak soiled clothes in hot water over night. Soak them in cold water in which a handful of borax has been dissolved. Then in the morning when you are ready to wash use the hot water and suds. This method will remove all dirt and make the clothes beautifully white.

NERVOUS & HALF-SICK WOMEN

Relieved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

These Three Letters Prove It

Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what good your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do where children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they want to now and it does not bother me. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOSEPH LEMERE, 34 South Street, Lowell, Mass.

Felt Like A New Woman

Springfield, Missouri.—"For four or five months I was run-down, nervous, my back ached and I did not feel like doing a thing. Sometimes my legs ached and felt like they would break and I had a hurting in my sides. I had been reading in the newspapers the letters of other women who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the advertising of it appealed to me so I bought some and saw results in almost no time. I had hardly been able to do my own work and after taking the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I recommend it to my friends who have troubles like I did, and hope they will find the same results."—Mrs. M. CARPENTER, 607 W. Chase Street, Springfield, Missouri.

40 Years Old, Feels Like 20

Hagerstown, Md.—"I was very bad off with backache, a bearing-down feeling in my body and a pain in my left side. I could not be on my feet at times and once I was so bad I walked bent over to one side for three weeks. My sister read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me a bottle. I got so much relief that I took more until I was well. I am 40 years old and feel like 20. I am sure this medicine will help all women."—Mrs. MARY E. SANDY, 436 W. Franklin Street, Hagerstown, Md.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

All druggists are having increased sales of this medicine.

SLAMS AND SALAAMS

By Louise Dooly

The quotation is from the proprietor of one of these shops, who tells some of the tricks of her trade in an anonymous article in Ladies' Home Journal.

She elucidates: "The average man is satisfied with the way he looks. He bathes and shaves and has his clothes pressed. In his heart he thinks he looks fine.

Even the most beautiful woman never is as comfortable as that. She worries. She knows her defects, even if no one else does. More than that, she's always half frightened to death over the way she's going to look five years from now."

* * * *

AND this brings up a kindred topic.

Namely, the kind of costume a girl who works ought to wear during working hours.

Oh, no, no. Never fear that we are going to suggest!

She is the most independent person in the world, this young woman who is drawing a salary and can do as she pleases with it. And she has a perfect right, when it comes to rights, to wear what she pleases at any and all times.

As for what is good taste, what is appropriate—well, that is another matter. But that, too, is not one for outside dictation. It is up to her what kind of taste she adopts.

* * * *

GAY PLUMAGE JUSTIFIED?

SHE has found of late two supporters of her choice of the niftiest costume she can devise for business hours.

One was an industrial leader in New York speaking—we think it was before an industrial group of secretaries of the Y. W. C. A.—when she who advised the most striking garb a girl could select as the thing for her to affect in office, store or factory.

"You don't expect to stay here always," she said, or words to that effect. "Work is only a stepping stone, a temporary makeshift. The main purpose of every one of you is to get married as soon and as well as you can.

"You are constantly in contact in working hours with matrimonial possibilities. In dull, cheap clothes, you'll have as much chance in competition with the girl who does not work and who need not therefore be seen except when she is dressed for parade, as a snowball in July.

"Therefore, I say pick out gay plumage and wear it seven days in the week."

In other words, she identifies the clothes urge with the cosmic urge.

* * * *

FOR THE NATION'S GOOD.

THE British Roland Pertwee, writing in the Ladies Home Journal, goes at it more subtly. He puts another motive than the purely biological behind the same effect.

"Bright faces and pretty clothes," he says, "should act as a stimulant, and apparently, in this country (America), they do. After all, whatever the immediate intention of any work, its ultimate object must be toward a general ambition to place the country on a happy and secure footing. And what better proof of the successful achievement of this ambition than that the women of the nation should be arrayed in bright and happy colors? It is reasonable to suppose, then, that every time a pretty girl in a jolly new frock, with or without sleeves, takes her appointed place in office or department store, she is paying a tacit compliment to her nation's prosperity, and is not, as the thoughtless might believe, making a concession to her vanity."

* * * *

THIS IS A SHOCK.

JUST at this juncture the Salvation Army puts in some food for thought.

The head of the army at an eastern conference has recently announced the organization of the "Salvation Army Home league," the purpose of which is to educate incompetent wives."

"There will be 5,114 housewives' clubs formed throughout the east," he said, "for married women who can not or will not comb their hair."

Parenthetically, we are wondering whether this has any connection with the bobbed-hair fad. Confidentially, we would not mention any names for worlds—we have heard a number of nice young women boast of the speed with which they can dress in the morning, "now that I can just shake out my hair, and be ready for breakfast."

Commissioner Estill, head of the Salvation Army, as he enlarges on the plans of the Army for the Home leagues and explains the need for them, in the widespread ignorance of the use of tooth and nail brushes, combs, even soap, and the needle and thread to mend slovenly garments, would provide the suggestion, in contrast with the beauty shop hints quoted above, that the women of the country are divided into two classes: those who have no self-respect; and those who have no respect for anything else.

BITTER-ENDERS.

ADMITTING that women in the short time they have had the vote have not changed the world with the use of it; that they have failed in large numbers to use it at all, Alice Ames Winter, in the current Ladies' Home Journal, includes in her able discussion of the subject this slightly impish aside:

"It would be easy, and certainly it would be within the bounds of truth, to do a little return mud-slinging as to the supreme success of men in the same field of political responsibility and success, and to call attention to the evident fact that men are not handicapped by ages of opposition to their performing the duty that is now all at once a test of our value to society."

A woman in some surroundings, if she does vote—and what is worse, if she does take an active interest in government—has actually to coquette with it; to tease herself for doing it, if she would be spared the actual reproach that some men and some women attach to a woman's use of the vote.

It is because of this same hangover of medieval opinion that some women would consider it a disgrace to have it discovered that they possess brains. Unconsciously to themselves and although they would bitterly resent the suggestion, they seem to prefer to be regarded as mere females.

* * * *

PETTICOATS AND POLITICS.

BUT—just you watch the woman who boasts that she knows nothing of politics. "No, indeed, I never vote. My husband doesn't approve. Woman's place is in the home."

You'll find that Tammany has nothing on her.

Where her husband is concerned, she's his mayor, ward boss and heeler combined, and when she gets ready, some day she'll even dictate his vote. He's had to acknowledge her tyranny, quiet or otherwise, so long in the home (which, as she says, is woman's place, and she means it) that when she does take to politics and tells him where he gets off politically, he will have become so inured to this petticoat domination that he'll do her bidding without a word.

Or like Mr. Jiggs, he'll be mighty mum about it if he doesn't.

* * * *

Some women's feet look so much more naked than other women's in the same naked shoes.

* * * *

We like to read occasionally the success magazines, because so many of the celebrities who tell why they are so wonderful started out, like ourselves, from large families. One point of resemblance, anyway.

"INDIVIDUALITY OF DRESS"

The Girl of the Spanish Type Should Not Wear Bobbed Hair

BY MADAME LOUISE

Nationally known authority on hairdress. Trustee of National Hairdressers' Assn.; executive board member of Chicago organization.

Rosita did not know that she could live up to her name in regard to her coiffure. No one ever told her that she resembled the Spanish type.

Her blonde friend, Emily, had her hair bobbed and curled, which, of course, was very becoming to her. Rosita yielded to the persuading of her friend and let her brown tresses fall under the shears of the operator and came out all fluffed and curled just exactly the way she should not look. In fact, she looked like every one else. Rosita's type with her olive complexion, big brown eyes and beautiful glossy hair, along with her oval face, demands simplicity and a close to the head line cut. Everything Spanish is very popular at present, and the girl of Rosita's type, who can wear the hairdress shown here, should by all means try it.

CIVIL WAR VETERANS LEAVE FOR REUNION

The few remaining veterans of the Confederate army still living in the six Confederate veterans' camps in Fulton county Tuesday boarded a train for Thomasville, once more to gather with comrades and swap stories of the old days. It is their annual state reunion.

All veterans who were not able to pay their own expenses on the trip were given railroad tickets out of a fund raised for the purpose by Mrs. A. O. Woodward, chairman of the veterans' aid committee, and contributed to by many Atlantans, she says.

ELIZABETH JORDAN

SYNOPSIS.

Mrs. Morgan Schuyler, one of New York's leading philanthropic and social lights, advertises for a young woman to work in her apartment mornings. The advertisement is answered by a girl evidently of birth and breeding. In spite of the fact that she admits a desire to hide her identity, Mrs. Schuyler accepts her on trust and tags her with the name of Hope Emerson.

Besides the lady herself, Mrs. Schuyler's family consists of her mother—Mrs. Van Dorn, a young brother, Jim Van Dorn, and an elder brother, Bertie, who is away. Sally Wallis, Mrs. Schuyler's god-daughter, calls during the course of the morning.

The second morning of her employment Hope faints after receiving a mysterious telephone call. Mrs. Schuyler summons Dr. Horace Osborne. Hope tells the doctor she is employed during the afternoon hours on East 70th street. The doctor offers to drive here there. She refuses to tell him the exact location of her employment, and asks him to let her out of the car at the corner of Fifth avenue and 70th street. The doctor starts back downtown but suddenly remembers that he has an appointment on 70th street.

By a strange coincidence Dr. Osborne's appointment is at the house where Hope is employed. He has been called in consultation with two other doctors. The patient is a boy of five years and the entire household mysteriously revolves about the child, whose closest guardian is an uncle named Scarwenka. All of the members of this household are foreigners except Hope, who is known here as Sonia.

INSTALLMENT XXI.

DARK HINTS.

Hope had expected Sally to carry off the episode with reckless bravado, and she had shrinkingly looked forward to a characteristic and appallingly frank monologue, covering the recent experiences up till the point where Sally had ceased to take a conscious part in them. It would not be a pleasant experience to watch the flapper hook up memories from that black pool. But now Hope faced neither an abnormal social product of our time, as the Sally Wallis of yesterday had been, nor the hysterical flapper she might easily have reverted to this morning. A heavy eyed but intelligent young person had arraigned herself at the bar of her own conscience, to play the dual role of judge and culprit.

"I rather fancy," said Sally slowly, "that this jolt will knock some sense into our heroine. Tell me when the water's ready, will you?"

Hope left her sitting among the rumpled pillows, her head still in cupped hands, her young eyes seeing not the counterpane they rested on, but Sally Wallis as she was.

After the bath and a dose of bromo-seltzer, followed by two cups of hot tea, Sally revived rather surprisingly, though she wore a drooping expression and her eyes had the roving gaze of a cabman looking for a fare.

"By the time Aunt Maud's awake I'll be her Little Comfort again," she predicted. "But you won't make the faux pas of offering me any breakfast, will you?"

Reassured on this point, she proceeded to converse, still sitting up in bed, with her pillows bunched around her.

"What gets my goat," she muttered, "isn't so much what happened to me as the way it happened."

Hope sighed. After all, the expected monologue was under way.

"Of course, it wouldn't have come off at all if I'd been myself," Sally continued. "I don't let that kind of thing come off," she stopped to interpolate almost fiercely. "I don't know why I don't; I've done worse things." She did not explain as she might have done that though she dwlet on the precarious edge of the gulf of temptation, its depths had no lure for her. "But I'd just got a jolt." She closed her eyes over the memory of the jolt and opened them again with an effort. "They knew I had—the bunch that call themselves my pals. They saw I was knocked clean through the ropes. So they saw to it that I was counted out."

She brooded for a moment.

"I didn't think anything could make me sit up," she went on in the same flat tone. "But that gives me a whole surprise party. You see, I thought they liked me. Now I know they'd burn me at the stake if they thought they could get up a little dance around it while I was toasting. Well, I'm through with them, so that's that. But what the devil will I do to massacre the hours? One's simply got to mingle, you know."

"Such friends aren't worth regretting," Hope bromidically reminded her.

"You bet they're not. And they're going to be dropped in a way that will loosen every tooth in their heads. It won't be the first time I've canned dolls and swains that went back on me."

Poor Sally spoke truly. The pathway of her foolish young life was strewn with discarded friendships, like packages she had dropped. She was always "trying out" strangers who presented themselves in the guise of congenial companions, and finding them disappointing and, in her vernacular, "sending them to the cannery."

"This bunch lasted a little longer than most of the others, that's all," she summed up.

"See that you don't get in with another bunch just as bad," Hope warned her. It was still too early to dress. She had gone back to the davenport and was resignedly lending her ears to Sally's matin hymn of depression.

"There isn't another bunch as bad," Sally submitted. "At least there isn't another bunch that dives in the particular sewer that bunch calls life. It's all up to me, for I knew they were a rotten lot. But they were swift workers and they helped me to forget."

Hope laughed. The picture of the flapper before her needing assistance to dull the razor edge of life appealed to her.

"Really, Sally," she said affectionately, "in another moment you'll be telling me the heart knoweth its own bitterness. I don't want to hurt your feelings at any time, and least of all this morning. But you certainly are a little idiot!"

Sally nodded forgivingly.

"I know you think so. I suppose everybody does. But if you knew the truth"—she looked at Hope rather queerly—"I'm tempted to confide. Do you want me to unbutton my soul to you?"

"I do not!" Hope spoke peremptorily. "Keep your affairs to yourself. My own are all I can handle." At the other's quick flash she relented a little. "Besides, you oughtn't to talk in your present mood. You might regret it afterwards. Later on, if there's any help I can give you, come to me."

Sally nodded.

"All right. I'll wait," she agreed. "You'd understand. But you couldn't help. No one could."

Hope took the remark lightly. For some reason she did not try to analyze. She was convinced that nothing which need be looked into lay back of her young friend's dark hints. Sally was a little fool, and she had been doing her best to wreck her reputation and her health, but she was what the world calls "straight." Hope was sure of it. Now she had learned a hard lesson in one of the bitterest schools and could be depended upon to drop some of the influences which were injuring her. Thus Hope reasoned, unconsciously so influenced by the obsession of her own despair that she did not recognize despair in another.

Emerging from her private hall at quarter of eight, immaculate in her white uniform and ready for the humble task of preparing the breakfast trays of Mrs. Van Dorn and Mrs. Schuyler, Hope passed Kawa and gave him a conventional greeting, which he returned with an inarticulate murmur. The value of time was impressing itself upon her. Her services to the guest in the spare room had delayed her own morning toilet, and the arrangement of two trays in fifteen minutes called for something in the nature of a rush. She had given thirty minutes to it every other morning. It did not calm her to remember that in the hour of their agreement the previous week Mrs. Schuyler had impressively stipulated that breakfasts were to be served at eight o'clock sharp.

She hurried into the dining room, and stopped short. At the table, where he was eating a meal which spoke well for his abstinence the night before, the young son of the house rose self-consciously to greet her.

"There's something about you this morning that robs our communion of its usual bloom," he remarked, and sighed abysmally. "Are you still disgusted with me!"

It was not resentment, however, that explained the secretary's averted gaze. On the table stood the two breakfast trays, set as attractively as she herself could have done it, and when she amazedly approached them an odor of breakfast entered the room, accompanied by Kawa.

"I fix bleakfast tlays," he unnecessarily mentioned.

"O, that is good of you, Kawa!" Her gratitude was heartfelt, and even Kawa's reserve melted under the warmth of her voice. He smiled and bowed.

"He's going to do it every morning." The new voice was Van Dorn's, and the young man now hastened to join an entente of such agreeable completeness. "There's no reason why you should do that sort of thing. I suppose we'll have to let you take in the trays," he discontentedly added, "but it's absolutely all you're to do."

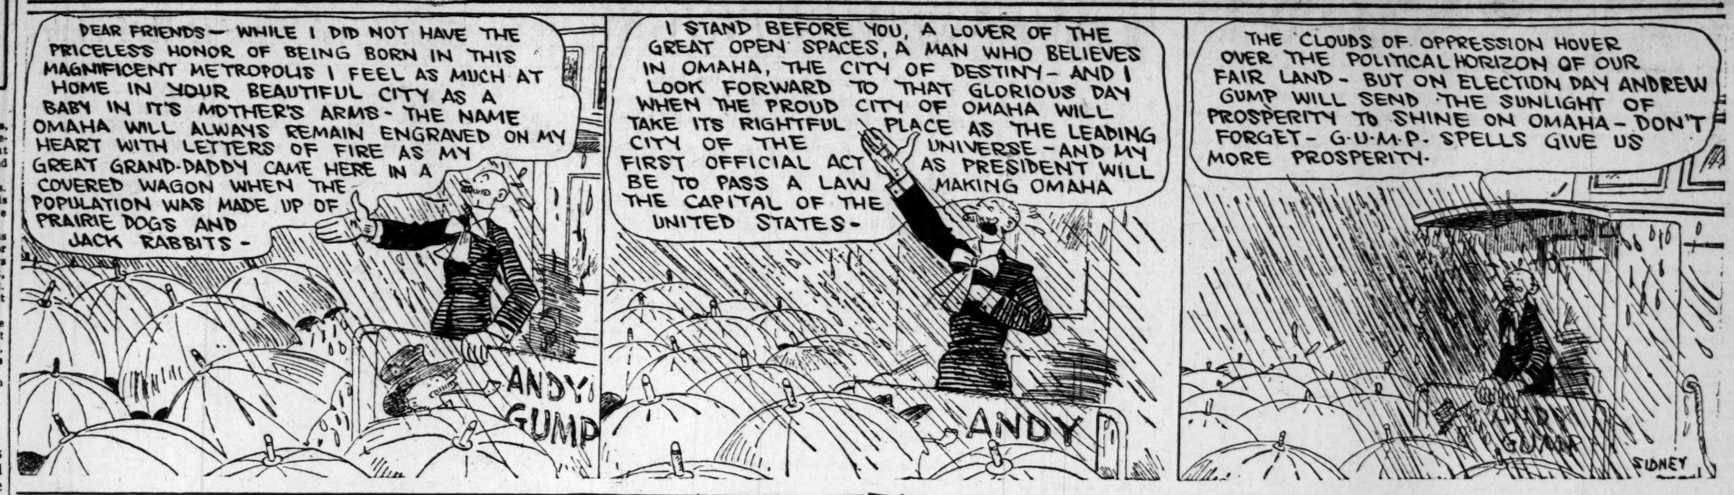

"I get tlays leady all time," Kawa corroborated, thus officially stamping the arrangement as legitimate. "You take um in."

"That will be so nice! It's most awfully good of you both."

THE GUMPS—DON'T MIND THE RAIN

The Fun Shop

By Maxson Fixhall Judell

To the Editor.

Who knows that I, in distant age,
In labored letters, therefore terse,
Carved on a rock and sent to you
A bit of primal verse?

Or in a pillared room in Rome,
Penned you a lyric with my stylus,
And then, perhaps, beside the Nile,
Wrote you upon papyrus.

I well remember on a day
By courier I sent my plea . . .
You bent a lace-frilled wrist to read,
Nor sent it back to me.

And now you are an editor,
And I, in verse, still knit my brow,
With such romantic past, can you
Refuse my verses now?

—Emily Krueger.

Her Training Table.

Belle: "Yes, at the table."

Al. G. Field Minstrels.

(Coming to the Atlanta.)

There is not a slow moment in the 38th annual edition of the Al G Fields minstrel show, which comes to the Atlanta theater on Thursday, when it begins an engagement of three nights and Saturday matinee. From the opening, when the curtain goes up on the scene of the deck of a yacht, which the cabin boys, passengers and crew all stepping to the tune of the rolling waves, to the finale in a cabaret in Spain, there is constant action, continuous entertainment. It is a fast moving minstrel show, with plenty of old-time atmosphere. You'll like it. Seats now on sale at the Atlanta theater and at the "Ask Mr. Foster" service on the fourth floor of M. Rich & Bros. Co. store.

"A Full House."

(At the Lyric.)

"A Full House" has drawn a succession of full houses into the Lyric theater at the first three side-splittingly funny performances this week. It is a farce comedy by Fred Jackson, perhaps the most original of present-day playwrights. The comedy is quite good enough to serve as a prelude of merriment for "Oh Boy," the musical comedy hit billed for next week.

Vaudeville.

(At Keith's Forsyth.)

Keith's Forsyth audiences are giving "Tango Shoes," the headlining act, its just applause the first three days of this week, for not in a long time has there appeared here an entertainment of more alluring proportions and mysterious background than this one.

In addition the bill also includes four other splendid acts.

Vaudeville and Pictures.

(At Loew's Grand.)

"The Venetian Masqueraders" is scoring a great success at Loew's Grand theater, where this big headliner, with a cast of eight people, headlines the offering of a vaudeville this week. Splendid singing, excellent dancing and spectacular costumes and settings are the features of this fantastic offering with Olga Boehm, the well-known vaudeville star, in the lead. Other good acts and feature picture.

"Tarnish."

(At the Metropolitan.)

Every member of the cast of Samuel Goldwyn's new screen production, "Tarnish," saw this famous stage play from one to three times before they interpreted its dramatic story before the motion picture camera. Each player naturally paid particular attention to his or her own character on the stage, and Director George Fitzmaurice reports that no cast ever came to him with a better understanding of the roles they were to play.

"Tarnish" is now playing at the Metropolitan theater.

"Find Your Man."

(At the Rialto.)

Rin-Tin-Tin, the new discovery in the world of animal actors, in "Find Your Man," is drawing more large audiences to the Rialto theater this week than the most sanguine manager, who hopes and strives to give his patrons what they want, could wish for, also "The Leather Pushers," with a new installment called "Big Boy Blue."

Gloria Swanson.

(At the Howard.)

Glorious Gloria Swanson now playing in her latest Paramount picture, "Her Love Story," at the Howard all this week, has been acclaimed by the thousands attending to be the best work this star has ever done. It is a brilliant production with an excellent cast. A special novelty in singing and talking films are also being offered a late invention of Dr. Lee De Forest.

Agents Find Auto Laden With Booze; Now Seek Owner

Lost or Stolen—One automobile bearing license Ga.-b o o z e. Contained 34 gallons of corn liquor when stored Tuesday afternoon at rear of a Walker street garage. One gallon reward if proper information given to owner.—Rum Runner.

Should this "ad" appear in local newspapers, prohibition agents can supply the desired information.

Prohibition Agents Sowell, Adair and Kimsey were at headquarters Tuesday afternoon when a mysterious telephone call gave them a choice bit of information. The officers rushed out to the specified garage, passed around to the rear and there found that their "tip" bore abundant proof and a vast supply of potential poetry.

An automobile containing 34 gallons of corn liquor had been parked at the rear of the building. The machine had been left there by a man who was a stranger to employees at the garage. Officers expressed the opinion that the driver of the car abandoned his cargo and fled through fear that he was being pursued. The automobile was confiscated and the liquor was destroyed.

MRS. CUNNINGHAM ARRIVES IN MACON TO FACE CHARGE

Macon, Ga., October 7.—(Special.) Mrs. C. A. Cunningham, wife of a former police court jurge of Macon, today returned to Macon from her home at Fort Pierce, Ala., and posted bond of $2,500 for her appearance to answer to a charge of arson.

Mrs. Cunningham is alleged to have been implicated in a plot, which resulted in the burning of her dwelling near Macon. Millard E. Dennis, a negro, told officers that he had been offered $100 by Mrs. Cunningham to burn the house, which was insured for $1,700, and which was destroyed on the night of September 11, 1923.

As soon as Mrs. Cunningham heard of the charge, she voluntarily offered to return here and face the charge. She denies the allegations made by Dennis and calls them "absurd and untrue."

WILKES COUNTY OPENS BIG FAIR

Washington Ga., October 7.—(Special.)—The Wilkes county fair, sponsored by the Jerome A. Wootten post American legion, and supported by civic and business organizations of Washington, opened today with a magnificent attendance in celebration of home-coming day. Crowds commenced early in the morning to come in over all roads and by noon Washington had taken on the appearance of a bustling and crowded resort of pleasure seekers. In the hundreds of exhibits Wilkes county's resources in agriculture, livestock, poultry and hogs were shown. They showed the effects of the Wilkes county campaign to put over the "cow, hog and hen" program in this section, and results show that a new day for the agricultural interest of Wilkes and surrounding counties has dawned, planters said.

Wednesday will be "Athens-Augusta day" with a large delegation representing all civic organizations expected. Dr. Andrew M. Soule, of the State College of Agriculture, will be the principal speaker. A display of Wilkes county livestock will be a feature of Wednesday's program.

Governor Clifford Walker will be a guest of the fair Thursday, coming to Washington directly from the state convention at Macon. The amusement end of the fair is being furnished by one of the largest and best carnival companies that has exhibited in Wilkes. If the first day of Wilkes legion fair can be taken as a criterion of those to follow, the Jerome A. Wootten post will score another success equal to their membership drive of last year, in which they led the other units of Georgia, officers said.

COLORED MINISTERS ORGANIZE IN ATLANTA

An organization of colored ministers of Atlanta known as the Colored Evangelical Ministers' alliance has been perfected, it was announced Tuesday.

Officers of the organization were announced as follows: Rev. P. James Bryant, president, and Rev. S. D. Thom, corresponding secretary. The object of the organization of the alliance was announced as being "to study and apply the principles of Christianity to all questions affecting the harmonious relation of the races, and also the general well-being of the colored group."

It is planned to hold regular monthly meetings of the alliance on the Monday after the first Sunday in each month. The place of meeting has not been decided upon.

Standing committees of the organizations will be appointed at the next regular meeting, it was announced.

'TEAM WORK' APPEAL IN RED CROSS MADE

Washington, October 7.—An appeal for "team work" among all chapters of the American Red Cross was voiced today at the society's national convention by James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations in an address in which he said, despite the great developments of the Red Cross in this country, it had "not yet come to the end of organization or inventive genius." To this end he favored regional and state conferences for the purpose of forwarding subjects for discussion to the annual conventions.

Mr. Fieser denied that the society was not "democratic in its organization," but added that "if it be the organization of an aristocracy, let it be an aristocracy of service and not of wealth or social position or adherence to any particular point of view in the community." Finally, he stressed the necessity for all chapters to organize first-aid and life-saving instruction to combat the greater mortality due to the "increase in the number of automobiles and the increased improvement in transportation generally."

Concise five-minute reports covering the various activities of the Red Cross were read to the convention by the directors of service sections. War service, disaster relief work, nursing, home hygiene and care of the sick, nutrition, first-aid and life-saving, volunteer activities and the junior Red Cross, were some of the subjects considered.

Reports showed that in recent months the average number of cases handled involving war service to veterans was 56,000, while during the year $737,603 was expended by the Red Cross in relieving distress and in rehabilitating the survivors of 192 major disasters.

There are at present more than 30,000 Red Cross nurses on active duty, while instruction in care of the sick as a branch of home training was given to 52,706 students.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET IN ARKANSAS CHOSEN

Little Rock, October 7.—Returns received tonight indicated that the entire democratic ticket, headed by Tom J. Terral, candidate for governor, was successful in today's general state election, with returns thus far received showing normal democratic majorities cast generally over the state, the count of scattering returns giving an average ratio of approximately ten to one for the democratic candidates.

Meagre returns of the vote cast on the submission of three constitutional amendments—to provide for two additional judges of the state supreme court, to enable communities to issue bonds to pay outstanding indebtedness, but to prohibit the contracting of further debts, and to prohibit local legislation by the state assembly—indicated that the amendments would carry in most cities, but likely to fall short of the necessary majorities in the rural communities.

GATEWAYS DYNAMITED TO M'ALESTER MINE

McAlester, Okla., October 7.—Gateways to mine No. 12 of the Rock Island Coal and Mining company, near Hartshorne, were dynamited last night and an attempt was made to burn two railroad trestles leading to the mine, it became known today. Damage was slight but the incident has aroused the mining field. No arrests have been made.

While a force from the sheriff's office was investigating the blast at the gateway, fires were started at the trestles, neither of which was more than half a mile away. The officers extinguished the blaze. Both trestles appeared to have been soaked in oil, they said.

The mine has been operating on part time, employing approximately 350 men. The company has been paying the 1924 wage scale, approved by the miners' union, but had announced its intention of opening other properties which have been closed during a wage dispute and operate under the 1917 scale on an open-shop basis. With all its mines working, the company planned to employ about 1,200 men.

Bloodhounds are being used in an effort to trace the persons responsible for the explosions and fires.

DIXIE SHIPPERS ASK LOWER DIFFERENTIALS

Washington, October 7.—Hearing of a dispute over ocean rate differentials in effect from south Atlantic and gulf ports to United Kingdom and European destinations was opened today by the shipping board. South Atlantic shippers contend that development of their ports is being retarded by an operation of differentials of seven and one-half cents over the rates in effect from north Atlantic ports and that the differential is unlawful and discriminatory.

F. P. Latimer, of Savannah, secretary of the South Atlantic Conference of Steamship Lines, testified he believed the seven and one-half cent differential was too high and should be reduced. An opposite view was expressed by R. H. Hopper, representing members of the north Atlantic conference, who said the carriers of his organization did not regard the present differentials at south Atlantic and gulf ports as in any way preferential or prejudicial to any ports, persons or traffic. He added, however, that members of the north Atlantic conference were willing to agree to accept changes which might be mutually agreed upon.

ROOSEVELT'S SISTER TO MAKE SPEECHES

Chicago, October 7.—Mrs. Corrine Roosevelt Robinson, sister of President Roosevelt, will make two speeches in behalf of the republican committee, it was announced tonight at republican national headquarters here. One of her appearances will be at South Bend, Ind., October 17.

Cancer Deaths Decrease.

In New Hampshire, deaths from cancer and tuberculosis are decreasing, although the number of deaths from other causes is increasing. The state's death rate for 1923 was 1,507 per 100,000, against 1,463 per 100,000 the previous year, according to figures recently issued.

:: The Luxury of Love ::

BY VIOLET DARE

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT
LXV—A RAY OF HOPE.

Mary was up the next morning before anyone else but the servants stirred about the club house; she had left an old bathing suit in her locker at the club, and quickly donning it, she ran down the beach and had a swim in the blue, sun-swept water. The waves were running rather high; as she dove through them and then swam lazily in their wake for a moment, she wondered why life couldn't always be as simple as this. Just wearing comfortable clothing, and playing about in the sun, and not worry—how ideal. Yet men and women struggled and hurt each other and dealt in all kinds of unkindness and intrigue, just for the sake of getting something more than they had.

"And I've got to go back into it, myself," she reflected, as she let herself be carried in toward shore with the tide. "Right this minute I've got to go back and face Camilla. Well, it may be hard, but what a relief when it's over; I won't be 'Lovely Mary' any more, or Lady Cavendish, or anything but just a woman of twenty-three who has to make her own way in the world. But at least I can do it in my own way. I won't have to live up to what other people expect of me. I'll be as free as any other girl who works, and doesn't have the whole world as an audience."

Resolutely she refused to let her thoughts drift to Bruce Gillian. The memory of him was too precious to soil with unhappiness.

"I shan't be one of these wretched women who go about moping, looking as if life held nothing for them," she decided, as she lay on the sand with the early morning sun beating down on her. "Happiness and serenity are weapons to hold against the world; I'm going to be happy if it kills me!"

She breakfasted at the Atwoods' cottage; that is, she drank orange juice and ate bran muffins. Vera, with gusty sighs, had only orange juice. Jim grinned as he tackled fruit breakfast food, eggs baked on slices of ham, hot muffins and coffee, and Nancy, giggling over her mother's diet, was preparing to devote herself to French toast, liberally supplemented by maple syrup, when her mother intervened.

"You'll look like a baby elephant by November if you keep on like that!" she declared. "Do be careful, Nancy. You don't want to be known as the season's fattest debutante, do you?"

"Oh, I'll live on baked potatoes and milk for a month and take it all off," laughed Nancy. "I've got all October to do it in. And besides, I'll be rotten at tennis if I don't eat lots; you should see Hildegarde send a ball over the net. I'm not going to be ruled by my figure, Mom!"

Vera shrugged her shoulders and rang for more orange juice. She had spent a restless night, worrying over Mary; at least three times she had gone scurrying into her husband's room, to wake him and demand breathlessly "Jim, what are we going to do about Mary? I'm afraid that she'll make trouble for herself; she must be careful now. Can't you go to this place in Canada where Nigel is staying and persuade him to be reasonable? Or perhaps I could get Mary to go back to him——"

"All right—all right—" Jim had

muttered sleepily. "Just let me alone now!"

But this morning it was more difficult to plan to take Mary's affairs in hand. For Mary was so serene, so sure of herself, that her attitude made it seem unlikely that she would let even these devoted cousins manage her life.

She walked back to the club with Vera, and was amiable enough save on that one count. Jim and Nancy, cauntering along ahead of them on the sandy path, could not help overhearing her as she finally said emphatically "No, Vera. I know exactly what I've got to do and I'm going to do it. I've had this all out with myself, and I'm sure I'm right. You're a dear, but I've lived to suit other people long enough. At first it seemed impossible that I could carry out my plans; now I know that there's no other way. Bruce? Oh—that's all over," her voice suddenly grown sadder as she mentioned the name of the man she loved.

They left her when she reached the clubhouse. She went to one end of the long veranda, which was empty now. And it was there that Camilla joined her a few moments later.

"You wanted to see me?" Camilla drawled, leaning against the banister. "It won't take long, will it, Mary? I have an engagement in ten minutes."

"No, it won't take long," Mary replied. "Camilla, the truth about Neale Phillips' death has got to be told, now. And I thought it would be kinder to let you tell it."

Camilla stared at her for a moment, her face pale beneath its coat of make-up. Then she stepped forward, angrily. "That would be madness!" she cried.

"No, not madness, just the truth," Mary answered. "It had to come sometime, Camilla. You must have known that always. It won't hurt you, don't you see that? I'm the one who'll be blamed. And I shan't mind that, now."

IRISH FREE STATE ENVOY RECOGNIZED

Washington, October 7.—The United States is the first nation of the world to recognize officially the Irish Free State.

President Coolidge accepted Tuesday the credentials of Professor Timothy A. Smiddy, minister from Ireland, who called at the white house with letters of credence from King George, of England, who made the appointment.

"To my country this occasion is of deep and historic interest," Smiddy said, in a formal address to the president. "For the first time in its annals, there has been established diplomatic representation with another nation; and to its people it is a matter of special gratification that the first minister plenipotentiary designated to represent the interests of the Irish Free State should be received by the United States of America, to which Ireland is bound by the ties of kinships.

The president welcomed Smiddy as "the representative of the interests of a people which has contributed so largely to the development of the United States, and to which so many of our citizens are bound by the closest ties of relationship and sentiment."

KING HUSSEIN'S SON HELD UNACCEPTABLE

Delhi, India, October 7.—(By the Associated Press.)—Replying to a cablegram from the national association of Hedjaz, proposing that Emir Ali, eldest son of former King Hussein, succeed his father, the central caliphate committee has replied that Ali is not acceptable because of the misfortunes of Islam during the past eight years, largely due to the Sheerefian family.

Indian Moslems believe, the reply stated, that the Hedjaz, as the center of the Moslem world, should not be governed by sultans or kings, but should be under the charge of a republican government.

This statement of the committee is looked upon as significant here, as hitherto Indian Moslems have always urged that the caliph alone should be the guardian of holy places. It was believed to indicate that the Moslem minds are now moving in the same direction as those of the Angora government.

Jeddah, October 7.—(By the Associatde Press.)—Emir Ali, eldest son of former King Hussein of the Hedjaz, arrived in Mecca on Sunday to take the throne abdicated by his father. Hussein, despite his promise to leave the city, still remains in Mecca.

MRS. ANNIE L. GARNER DIES EARLY TUESDAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Annie Laurie Garner, 59, of 45 Cain street, who died Tuesday morning at the residence, will be held at 11 o'clock this morning in Buford, Ga., where the body will be carried for interment.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. L. H. Suddeth, of Buford, and Mrs. T. A. Hull, of San Pedro, Cal.; five sons, R. M. Garner, of Chicago; Howard Garner, of Paris, France; H. B. Garner, of Atlanta; H. M. and Ernest Garner, of Buford; one sister, Miss Alice Robinson, of Atlanta; one brother, H. M. Robinson, of Atlanta, and two nephews, Ray Sims and Henry Hill Robinson, of North Carolina.

Municipal Field For Airplanes Will Be Provided

Purchase of a municipal airplane landing field for Atlanta will be consummated this week, it was stated Tuesday, following action of council in authorizing a special committee to continue investigations and complete the purchase of a site subject to ratification by council.

Councilman C. C. Aven, chairman of the special councilmanic committee, stated that his committee will meet this week with a joint committee of the Fulton county board of commissioners to make final arrangements for the purchase. The county has agreed to pay half of the purchase price and cost of making necessary improvements.

In all probability the committee will buy the Nichols site, located on Brown's Mill road, and consisting of 208 acres. The reported price for the property is $65,000.

The site has been approved by Colonel Charles H. Danforth, in charge of aviation in the Fourth corps area, who stated that the field could be prepared for use in 24 hours. It is practically level and the only improvement required consists of removal of a number of trees, he said.

In addition, the site boasts advantageous railroad facilities. Many of the heavy planes, which would be shipped by freight to Atlanta, could not be carried by trucks, Colonel Danforth said, making excellent railroad facilities a necessity.

A site near the county poor farm on Power's Ferry road also was considered but practically has been abandoned because of its lack of railroad connections.

HOLD LAST SERVICES FOR MRS. BELL TODAY

Milledgeville, Ga., October 7.—(Special.)—Funeral services for Mrs. Olive West Bell, 49, wife of Miller S. Bell, former mayor of Milledgeville, will be held from the residence this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. H. Clay Emory, assisted by Dr. Elan F. Dempsey of Atlanta, will officiate. Interment will be at the local cemetery.

Mrs. Bell was Miss Olive West, daughter of Rebecca and Frank West, of Griffin, before her marriage to Mr. Bell. She was one of the first graduates of the Georgia State College for Women and after her marriage she began active career in social, religious and charitable affairs in this section of Georgia.

She had done great work here in recent years in connection with the building of the new Methodist church here. She is survived by her husband; daughter, Mrs. Charles Davis, and two sons, Miller R. Bell and Frank W. Bell, all of Milledgeville.

She Pinned Her Faith To A Constitution Ad

And, like the man who would not turn to the left, she followed the right course.

To be explicit, Miss H. Cannon, of East Point, lost a Shrine barpin, set with diamonds and pearls, and immediately inserted a "Lost" ad in The Constitution classified columns.

Talk about the "finders" on cameras—they don't know the rudiments of finding when compared to Constitution ads.

Miss Cannon's pin was returned to her the day her ad appeared—and she rejoices at the thought that she pinned her faith to a Constitution ad.

You probably see the point in this story and know where to pin your faith when you lose anything.

Just call MAin 5000.

WHEELER CHARGE DENIED BY WORK

Washington, October 7.—Secretary Work denied knowledge today of the secret contract between J. P. Morgan's Alaska Steamship company and the government-owned Alaska railroad," fixing division of freight rates between the two concerns on joint shipments, which last night was made the basis of a campaign speech by Senator Wheeler, independent vice presidential candidate.

"In the first place," Mr. Work said, "the senator is talking about transactions which occurred in the interior department before I entered the office. Secondly, you can be sure that I never wrote any letter asking that anything be kept secret."

The secretary said he was conducting an investigation to determine if there was any such contract. He also declared that if it had existed, a copy would have been given to Senator La Follette when the latter asked some months ago for interior department files relating to Alaskan contracts.

WOULD NAB IN CANADA OWNER OF BOOZE SHIP

New York, October 7.—Arrest and extradition of the Canadian owner of the seized British rum ship Fred B. for trial in this country on a charge of conspiring to violate the laws of the United States was requested in a report forwarded to the state department at Washington today by R. Q. Merrick, divisional prohibition director.

The wealthy Canadian whose extradition Mr. Merrick seeks is known to prohibition agents as a "bootleg king" and is believed to be the backer of an alleged $10,000,000 smuggling ring which federal authorities claimed to have uncovered with the seizure of the Fred B. He is now in Montreal.

Mr. Merrick said he expected quick action on his recommendation as the evidence presented in the report made a "perfect case" for the government.

Twenty persons including two women, were taken into custody when the Fred B. was captured with a cargo of liquor aboard.

Assistant United States district attorney Clark is preparing libel proceedings against the seized craft, a steam trawler of 370 tons.

"Any gunmen left in Crimson Gulch?" "No,' answered Cactus Joe. "The effete East has put guns out of fashion with us rough an' ready westerners, same as it did wrist watches."—Washington Star.

'Radio Incompatibility' Made Newest Cause for Divorce

:: "WIFIE" LOSES FIRST ROUND AGAINST "HUBBY" ::

New York, October 7.—Radio incompatability has made its appearance as the newest of causes for divorces and separations.

Wives whose husbands become as sociable as carved South Sea idols, when they once get their heads jammed between a set of radio earphones, and husbands who are forced to dine on a delicatessen menu, because wifie is listening to the broadcast applesauce of some movie actor, are following closely the outcome of Mrs. Clara Heymann's effort to obtain a separation from her husband, Millard.

Mrs. Heymann is 19, her husband 25. They were married about a year ago, living happily until the specter of the demon radio obtruded itself.

Radio was not the only source of their discord, but it soon became the chief bone of contention, according to Mrs. Heymann's action. Mrs. Heymann herself was passionately fond of watching the rosy romances of Hollywood unfold themselves on the screen and her husband had little sympathy with this hobby.

Millard was glued to his radio on the night their first scrap occurred, she said, and was keeping her waiting overtime when she wanted to go to a motion picture. Just for fun, she pulled the plug from his radio set.

Instead of taking this in the spirit it was intended, Mrs. Heymann declared her husband announced that just for that he wouldn't take her to the movies at all.

Then she committed the overt act that brought down all his wrath. She broke a wire so that he couldn't hear over his set.

"I wouldn't think of living with you after this. You can get ready for a divorce," she said her husband told her.

Then, too, although he earned $7,800 a year, Millard was impressed with the "virtue of frugality" to a marked degree, according to Mrs. Heymann. She said he upbraided her for dropping an egg and for putting an extra word in an advertisement, which made it cost three cents more.

The husband won the first tilt in the legal engagement Tuesday, when a justice refused to award Mrs. Heymann temporary alimony, in the first cast of "radio incompatability."

BARRETT APPEALS FOR FAIR VERDICTS IN COURT TRIALS

Macon, Ga., October 7.—(Special.) "There are persons in Georgia, who would defy, discard and disregard the right of juries to determine the guilt or innocence of an accused person and themselves undertake to say that by some self-claimed superior ability, they shall without trial, without permitting the defendant to be confronted with witnesses, undertake to enforce the laws of our country," Judge William H. Barrett, declared today in his charge before the federal grand jury for the October term of United States district court.

Judge Barrett declared that it is hopeless to be assured of anything like justice from such a method, as it is one which is similar in many respects to the barbaric methods that were practiced centuries ago and which civilization does not tolerate.

Throughout his charge, which was one of the most lengthy addresses ever made before a federal grand jury here, Judge Barrett made a plea for fairness and honesty in jury verdicts, and pleaded with jurors to forget their prejudices when considering a bill of indictment against any man, of any color or creed.

INLAND WATERWAY PLAN IS BOOSTED

Chicago, October 7.—(By the Associated Press.)—Concerted action of several Mississippi Valley cities leading towards a lakes to gulf waterway was initiated here tonight. Municipal and state officials and industrial representatives from the entire valley attended a banquet given by William Hale Thompson, who is sponsoring the waterway movement from the Chicago end.

Among the more prominent speakers were Senator Joseph E. Ransdell, of Louisiana, and Mayor M. M. Stephens, of St. Louis.

Congressman William E. Hull, of Peoria, Ill., described the inland water traffic as "transportation which would reduce the freight rates to the farmer and to the manufacturer and which would give the central west the same opportunity on freight rates that the Atlantic and Pacific are now enjoying because of the Panama Canal."

Congressman Henry T. Rainey, of Carrollton, Ill., advocated the adoption of a waterway program "that will at once protect farmers of the Illinois Valley against sewage from Chicago and give the country a great highway for transportation."

Besides Senator Ransdell, Louisiana was represented by Congressman James O'Connor, Attorney General Percy Saint, J. H. Walsh, manager of the port commission of New Orleans, and many others.

ROME WILL SEEK NEW INDUSTRIES

Constitution Bureau,
Masonic Temple Annex,
Phone 1069.

Rome, Ga., October 7.—(Special.) Members of the membership group of the Rome Chamber of Commerce held a barbecue at the Coosa Country club this afternoon to hear plans for the creation of an industrial fund to be used for the establishment of local industries at Rome. Colonel Barny Wright submitted the plan to about 250 members.

Mr. Wright's plan is to get 100 citizens to pay $300 a year into a trust fund for a period of five years. The plan was unanimously adopted Walter S. Cothran presided.

7th District Meet Saturday.

Rome, Ga., October 7.—(Special.) Floyd county delegates to the seventh congressional district convention to be held in Calhoun Saturday, have been named by Congressman Gordon Lee. The convention has been called for the purpose of ratifying the result of the recent primary, in which Mr Lee was renominated without opposition.

Delegates are Mather Daniel, chairman of the Floyd county democratic executive committee; G. E. Maddox, chairman of the Georgia democratic executive committee; T. E. Edwards, R. H. Claggett, T. E. Clemmons, John Camp Davis, W. S. Rowell, John M. Graham, H. P. Meikeham, Louis Shahan, Jr., Berry Broach and Tom Salmon.

Professor Paul Cousins, of Shorter, and Dr. W. T. Huff, Mercer alumni, will aid in arranging for the meeting.

Turnbull's Will Probated.

Rome, Ga., October 7.—(Special.) The will of Mrs. Ellen C. Turnbull, who died recently, was probated in the court of the ordinary Monday.

The will names John D. Taylor, of Summerville, as executor and places $1,000 aside to be invested, the income of which is to pay "for keeping the grass cut on the cemetery lot on Myrtle Hill." It provides also for the erection of a "simple stone 22 inches high" to mark the grave. Five hundred dollars in cash was willed to her cousin, Julius Cooley.

A large part of the estate was left to the Southern Baptist Theological seminary, at Louisville, Ky., to form a memorial fund to Mrs. Turnbull's mother. This fund is to be known as the "Martha-Cooley fund," and is to be used in "educating young men to preach the gospel."

CIVITANS ARE READY FOR CHEST CAMPAIGN

The Atlanta Civitan club is one of the first of the civic organizations in the city to "report for duty" in the coming Community Chest campaign.

In a letter to Chairman Eugene R. Black, President Reynolds, of the Civitan club, declared that "we are glad indeed to advise you that our organization is ready to help in the coming drive for the Community Chest."

The Community Chest drive takes place this year the week of November 5 to 12.

Greeks Decorate Jackie Coogan For Charity Work

Athens, October 7.—Jackie Coogan, American child moving-picture actor, today was decorated by the Greek government with a medal of an officer of the Order of George, given in recognition of humanitarian work. It was the first time this medal has ever been given to a child.

The ceremony took place in the acropolis in the presence of the American minister, government and civil officials and 7,000 orphans who are under the care of the Near East Relief. The youngster was then received by Admiral Coundouriotis, provisional president of Greece, at the royal palace.
